Controversy continues: administrator responds

Dear Sir,

I would like to comment on the manner in which President Evans’ June 30th letter to Chancellor Reynolds was printed in the last issue of the Chronicle. I was disappointed for several reasons:

1. The material quoted is a piece of personal correspondence which evidently was disseminated without permission by unknown off-campus sources wishing to invade the privacy of the writer and cause mischief.

2. It was weak journalism to print the material without further investigation and comment on the issues. I believe the letter speaks for itself in underscoring President Evans’ sincere commitment to educational equity, but to cite only second-hand, negative comments and then suggest that your readers make their own judgment in abdicating journalistic responsibility to provide your audience a full, unbiased, unbiased report.

The letter is no longer news. Many events have taken place in the past few weeks which make the publication of this letter a non-news story, but one of great interest and importance. I believe the letter speaks for itself in underscoring President Evans’ sincere commitment to educational equity, but to cite only second-hand, negative comments and then suggest that your readers make their own judgment in abdicating journalistic responsibility to provide your audience a full, unbiased, unbiased report.

The heart of the system and plan is the emphasis on building on the fine existing programs for minorities and broadening those efforts to include all underrepresented students and to bring these special programs into the mainstream of campus life. Where they will be more visible, more involved and better supported by all parts of the university. This has required substantial reorganization of programs and personnel in order to be sure that the major components of the plan (Outreach and Recruitment, Enrollment and Transition, Retention and Graduation) are all coordinated and working together.

Dr. Diane Halpern, Dean of Undergraduate Studies has assumed a major role in supervising these efforts in the Academic Affairs area. Vice President Detweiler will chair a system-wide committee which will report to the President and coordinate the work of the many overlapping subcommittees and working groups needed to implement the various activities and strategies imbedded in the campus Equity Plan. The Faculty Senate has appointed an ad hoc committee to review the plan and suggest other areas of faculty involvement in equity efforts. I recommend the Plan to all interested members of the campus community and have placed a copy of this and other Cal State San Bernardino and CSU system reports on educational equity and retention on reserve in the Library.

Editor defends publishing of letter

As expected, our October 15th publication of CSUSB President Anthony Evans’ letter to CSU Chancellor Ann Reynolds regarding minority student has caused some controversy. Just a little.

The decision to run the letter - as written - was made not to instigate a riot against President Evans, but to clearly inform the CSUSB students about a letter which was quietly fuming a number of rumors. While the letter was originally written in late June, our staffers were increasingly hearing questions and comments about the letter. The letter being written was not news, but the controversy was. Our running the letter hopefully cleared up some false rumors.

For the content of the letter, it seems to me that there are a number of ways you can interpret it - it’s all based on your preconceived judgments, and what you may have decided you were going to see between the lines. In my opinion, there was not incredibly much to get upset about - unless various students already had made that decision in advance.

While I’m on a roll, let’s clear up one more thing: the letter was not obtained secondhand from an off-campus source - nor was it obtained or published in fragments. In deciding to run the letter, the Chronicle editors decided to do it right the first time, and obtained a copy of the letter from the President’s Office on campus. President Evans knew in advance our intentions, he also was asked for comment, and refused, which is his right. The letter was reproduced in its entirety, from a copy of the original draft sent to Chancellor Reynolds.

Above all, our duty is to inform the students of CSUSB - and that’s what we did on October 15, and in the subsequent follow-up article October 22. And that’s what we’ll keep doing in the years to come.

Halloween caution for parents

Halloween is a very exciting time for young children. However, it can also be extremely dangerous.

Trick-or-Treating has been a celebrated American tradition for decades allowing children a night of their own for fantasy and gain. In recent years children have become targets for some very disturbed individuals. Each year we hear of more children that have been drugged, burned, or blinded, and sometimes killed, from hallucinogenic drugs, foreign objects, and caustic materials in Halloween goodies.

We as concerned adults often wonder how and why such things could happen. I strongly believe that drug usage has an important role in such tragic events. The use of drugs limits the individual’s ability to think clearly and reduced inhibitions severely alter the determination of right and wrong.

The Children’s Center strongly supports the united effort on our campus to reduce drug abuse. On Halloween morning our children will be wearing red ribbons as a reminder that abuse affects everyone.

I would also like to remind all parents to closely examine all goodies and discard homemade desserts, fruit, and packages that show any evidence of tampering. The Children’s Center wishes everyone a safe and sane Halloween.

RED RIBBON WEEK
Most counties and school districts in California will be recognizing October 27-31 as Red Ribbons Week. People throughout the state will be wearing red ribbons to show their support for the campaign against drug abuse. This special week is designated to unite communities in the state in their efforts to eliminate the demand for drugs. Free red ribbons will be available at many locations around campus so that members of the university community can display their support. The Housing Office, Student Union, Commons, Bursar’s office, and the library are some of the locations designated for distributing the ribbons. It is hoped this campaign will soon go national. There will be lots of red ribbons exhibited this week and we hope we can count on you for your support.
Alcoholism: A Family Problem, too

by Bridget Todor

Much has been written about the alcohol-dependent person. A second area of concern is the research and treatment of the partner of the alcoholic. It was recognized that the partner is affected by the disease by providing the balance necessary to enable the drinker to drink. The partner assumed additional family responsibilities because the drinking partner could not be depended on, made excuses to cover to deny the extent of the drinking, perhaps took an additional job to replace income lost or spent on alcohol. More and more family members began to depend on trying to “fix” the drinker’s problems and/or ease the pain as the thoughts, feelings, and behavior of the alcoholic increasingly centered around drinking, so must the spouse’s.

Drugs can make anyone a loser

by Sean Brunke

Recovering Addict and Alcoholic

This is to all the students and teachers who feel it is okay to use alcohol and drugs.

I grew up in a fine, middle-class household in Boardman, Ohio. As I grew up I was a good student, never a problem child, and excelled in athletics. I had many friends, many activities to participate in and more girlfriends than Hugh Hefner.

I started my freshman year of high school as a long-suffering member of the Varsity cross-country team, basketball team, and track team. I maintained better than average grades throughout the year. I also had many friends who were seniors who always smoked it and they all seemed happy and welcomed me in.

The alcohol had become a major part of my life and my life almost ended in a fatal car crash into a telephone pole. Of course, that didn’t stop my drinking.

My junior year I was introduced to marijuana. I thought everyone smoked it if the world would be a better place. I’ve never had a friend in my entire life that I would say I’m afraid of. I used and abused every single thing I could get my hands on and it didn’t matter.

I went to a drug rehabilitation center last year and I’m a winner.

Drug Awareness Week well-timed

by Susan Bell

This is Drug Awareness Week October 27-31. Good timing! It’s appropriate to hold this close to Halloween because nothing else has the capacity to consume a person’s emotional behavior and internal processes like drugs do. It’s too bad that it doesn’t show immediately in a little physical costume, though. Maybe a devil... maybe a war character such as Rambo or He-Man... maybe a monster... maybe a street bum. Later on a physical disguise will be created, too, but it won’t be cute. I’m certain costume made of plastic. This time it will be real, and it will come in tones of sickly flesh.

It’s unfortunate that drugs are called ‘drugs’. For years the term has been used in medicine for pharmaceutical products that are helpful to people. Penicillin is a drug. But now we have ‘abused drugs’, ‘dangerous drugs’, ‘illegal drugs’, etc. We’re using the same generic term when we ought to have a specific name for something so bad for mankind. We have a word called murder... it doesn’t sound as dispassionate as ‘abused death’ or ‘illicit death’. It verbally relate ‘drug abuse’ to medicinal drugs doesn’t seem right.

I went to a drug rehabilitation center last year and I’m a winner.

You might not have gone through what I have. You may have been through worse. I just want to say there is a happy and exciting life to live without drugs and alcohol. In the end, drugs and alcohol will always win. You will be the loser.

There’s a lot in the media now...it was intended you'd be telling your friends and/or parents ‘overkill’ in the media sure beats a lot of life. I mean... if it doesn’t kill you the first time you use it, than they would have been if you had not. Physical reactions are different than they are when you take a drug, it’s not kill you the first time you use it. If I came on strong with this article, well...it was intended... It’s the very best product that you will ever have to offer this world. You can either bring good things to the world, or you can take something good away from it. Using drugs is the best way to achieve the latter.

HEALTH CORNER

Relax at the Health Center

STRESS!! It rushes at you from a blind intersection. It pops out of your envelope with your bank statement. It knocks you over when you see the grade on your first exam. Stress is something that can’t be avoided, it can only be controlled.

To help you, the Health Center will offer a relaxation clinic as one means of controlling everyday stress and countering stress-related health problems.

The facilitator is a student intern from the Masters program in Educational Counseling. She will explore different methods of relaxation techniques, and much more. Since some people are visual, some respond to words, and some to body sensations, there are a variety of relaxation techniques for each type of person. The choice of a certain technique is not as important as a receptive attitude. A receptive attitude is one of fascination and absorption with the technique. It is not expecting a certain outcome; nor is it trying too hard. Relaxation cannot be forced. The purpose of the techniques to be shared is to set up the conditions for relaxation to occur and then to let it happen.

The clinic will be run in a non-stressful fashion. It will meet once a week for 1 1/2 hours on a drop-in basis. Since the quarter is almost half over, this would be a good opportunity to learn how to relax before final exams are looming before you. The first clinic will meet on Tuesday, November 4th from 1:00 to 2:30 at the Student Health Center. Make sure to wear comfortable clothing.

perhaps this was a proud individual. He was also a bastard and he knew it. His hair was grey and his face was wrinkled and that didn't bother him either. It wasn't his fault that his time on earth had ravaged his physique, reducing him to an arched and contorted hunch—and these were riches to us. Comfort and hope were things that none of us had. We had delighted in the anarchy, having little else to do.

This man was a proud individual. He was also a bastard and he knew it. His hair was grey and his face was wrinkled and that didn't bother him either. It wasn't his fault that his time on earth had ravaged his physique, reducing him to an arched and contorted hunch—and these were riches to us. Comfort and hope were things that none of us had. We had delighted in the anarchy, having little else to do.

The race would be over soon. He would win and we would lose, and the losers would spoil in the sun until the proper authorities could be summoned to tow the abandoned wreckage away.

The last time we saw him one of us had asked for the time of day and he had refused.

"What do you care you bum?" he had told us. This wasn't too surprising. He'd refused every other request we had made over the years.

He was retired. He had children and grandchildren that gave him a sense of purpose. None of us had any relatives to speak of, each of us.

We weren't friends either, we were rivals. We fought over the same garbage, chased the same dinners, and feared the same fate.

We were bound together by something deeper than friendship, something we found inalterable, enough to think it was skin to the sense that makes dogs run in packs, and sheep stay in flocks.

The odds were bad for us. Many had died or been traded in for the next years edition of defeat. We didn't die every day, but it happened, and every strike of fate's hand finds the job's coming closer, and the steps beating in the back of our brains trumpet the arrival of Mr. Death, the street sweeper, and the hand that clean time.

Christmas is coming soon. It must be. The sun is lower and the ground gets much colder at night.

Soon the rains will come and then the snow and the white nights will erase a few more of us from the planet.

Winter is here now. The mission has helped us out. Still, six of us have died in a little over a month. The rest have managed to stay alive with bumper and old newspapers. There are also some doorways where the snow has yet to fall. The Christmas spirit has descended upon the city.

He smiled at us the other day, that caustic smile, and bid us a Merry Christmas. I suppose that's all he could really afford.

The Children's Center at Cal State San Bernardino provides child care for student parents that fosters physical, mental, and social development. The curriculum includes sensor experiences, motor development, and skills building which emphasizes early learning in math, language, science, art, music, and physical development. The center is open Monday through Thursday from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. They care for children ages two years and toilet trained up through 12 years. There are currently 120 students registered, however, because the center caters to the students' schedules, the flexibility allows no more than 40 children in the center at one time which is its licensed quota. The center is funded by the Cal State Department of Education Child Development Division, federal assistance monies, and parent fees. It has been operating for 11 years, but has been located on campus only since 1981. The present director, Pam Dortch, has been there since April 1982. This highly qualified director (she has a bachelor's degree in Child Development and a master's in Psychology from Cal State San Bernardino) has worked with children for the past 12 years in one capacity or another. She heads a highly credentialed staff: an assistant director who is responsible for daily operations, certified teachers with bachelor's degrees and student assistants who are junior or seniors majoring in child development or education. Ms. Dortch says the center is operating at full capacity and proudly announces there is a waiting list. When asked how she thinks things are going, she says, "It's really great. We have excellent staff and a very good reputation throughout the community." Due to the increased number of children, the center is looking forward to expansion by the end of the year. It also hopes to stabilize its funding sources.

Hello,? Oh, Luke! Hello, my little personation! Yes, I missed you, too!

What's that? He! I'm your parents on the first time? Tomorrow? Dinner? At your place? O.K., O.K.

No, I am enthusiastic! Why, there's nothing. No, nothing. To spend an evening with your parents to gain their approval! Nothing. Right. Goodbye.

Well, aren't I getting expected and picked up by guess?

Waiting, or guess. You're nothing clever to meet your future in courts and you're a little nervous.

I'm not a little nervous.

I'm a little nervous.

Yes, I'd just pass a little "listening" to the oil pits.

Why, I'll just pass with "right word". When I'm ready to face anything.

You're a little nervous.

Maybe there is a substitute for experience.
Recreation Round Up
Fun and Fantasy

by Kim Schnepp

Are you a new student at CSUSB? Are you trying to find out what there is to do in San Bernardino with your spare time? Or maybe you've lived here all your life, but are looking for something different to do.

The Inland Empire offers a variety of ways to keep one entertained, whether it's in the afternoon or evening.

Castle Park miniature golfing is located right outside of San Bernardino off the freeway. There is a water slide, banana boats, an arcade and an 18 hole miniature golf course. There is also a pizza restaurant next door.

For recreational exercises, there are horseback riding stables in the Highland area. The surrounding San Bernardino Mountains have some scenic trails to ride on.

Lake Arrowhead village has several specialty shops, clothing stores and places to eat. Further up the hill is Big Bear. You can rent a boat on the lake, horseback ride, shop, or go to the alpine slide. During the winter, Big Bear is the first of the mountain areas to get snow. If you want to get away for the weekend there are cabins available to rent for two days of skiing, sledding or just playing in the snow.

Several parks are located in and around San Bernardino. Glen Helen is close to campus. Yucaipa regional park has a water slide and is about thirty minutes away. Lake Silverwood and Lake Perris have swimming and picnic areas.

Two shopping malls are located downtown. Both The Central City and Inland Center are within 5 minutes of each other. Also, both have movie theaters. If a longer day of shopping is what you have in mind, Tyler and Monclair Plaza’s have more shops but are about twenty to twenty-five minutes away.

Because of part-time jobs, classes, or other reasons you may not have free time in the afternoon. The evening may be the time when you want to relax.

If you like to dance, meet people and are 21, there are clubs just outside of San Bernardino. Harry C's and Margarita's are both in Redlands. In Riverside there is The Red Onion. In San Bernardino on Hospitality Lane is The Black Angus, Bubby McGrees, El Torio, and T.G.I. Fridays. Many of these places have college nights where you receive a discount with a student I.D., or evenings with drink specials.

For those of you who aren't 21 yet, there are clubs too. Cracker Jack is at the top of E Street and has 18 and older nights on Sunday.

The Civic Light opera's season opens soon and puts on four productions. This is the companies 49th Anniversary season. The King and I will be the opening play. San Bernardino also holds concerts at the Orange Pavilion. Last year Oingo Boingo, The Thompson Twins, Aeromith, and Pat were just some of the groups who performed. The Orange Show box office can tell you in advance who is scheduled to perform.

You may have already tried some of these places or they may be new suggestions. Whatever it is, give yourself an afternoon or an evening off and enjoy yourself.

Visionary dean interfaces with community

In the business world, growth can bring many rewards. It can bring an equal number of pitfalls if the management does not run a tight ship. The same applies to schools of administration. Without guidance from a strong leader a school can flounder, and without supervision from a strong faculty level one can get off track.

According to Dean Porter, who holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from Syracuse University, the school's mission is to "prepare students for leadership positions in business, government and non-profit organizations." He adds, "Our goal is to provide..." (continue)

Cross Country comes home undefeated

The CSUSB Men's and Women's Cross Country teams are coming home. The undefeated CSUSB Men's squad and the improving CSUSB Women's have been on the road since their season began on the 13th of September. The Lady Coyotes continued to polish their perfect record in winning the triangular meet against NCAA Division I school Pepperdine University, Cal Tech, and the Master's College Mustangs.

The CSUSB Men's team meanwhile outperformed both Pepperdine University and Master's College, both lost to Cal Tech by four points. The CSUSB Men's squad record in head-to-head competition now stands at five wins against four losses.

The Lady Coyotes were anchored by the solid running of Rebecca Hodde (sophomore/Riverside Notre Dame HS). Hodde literally ran away from not only the opponents but her own teammates as well. The Lady Coyote finished the hilly 3.1 mile course in 20:24, almost two full minutes ahead of the second place finisher, Cathy King also from CSUSB. King (sophomore/Fontana/Fontana HS) ran the course in 22:13.

Following in King's footsteps was CSUSB runner Gretchen Wuehr in a time of 22:25 and a third place overall finish. Wuehr is a sophomore from Rialto. The CSUSB Women's runners were not finished dominating the meet. Freshman Marcia Rigney (San Bernardino/Cajon HS) ran to the fourth place overall finish in 23:01. Renee Barglowski (freshman/Ridgecrest/ Burroughs HS) grabbed seventh place in 24:19.

The CSUSB Men placed four runners in the top 10 spots. Robert Horvath lead the Coyotes with a third place finish in the Men's 5.2 mile course. Horvath (freshman/Twentynine Palms HS) completed the course in a time of 29:52.

Coyote Coach Tom Burleson felt the Cal Tech team which beat CSUSB "... had to run the race of their life." Burleson added, "We are very proud of the girls, they have great desire to win."

Intercollegiate Athletics captures eight wins

Cal State, San Bernardino Intercollegiate Athletics slammed into overdrive last week. The three sports currently competing captured a combined eight wins against three losses for the week. Less than one month of regular season contests remains with all Coyote teams fighting for playoff bids.

CSUSB Soccer mustered three wins for the week against a single 3-1 loss to nationally-ranked Glassboro St. (NJ). The Coyote Volleyball team, currently ranked 17th in the nation, assailed the nation's no. 1 Division II volleyball team—UC, San Diego. Cal State put the heat on a powerful UCSD team in a 5 game shootout before succumbing in the final match 16-14.

The Cal State Cross Country teams traveled to Pasadena to dual Cal Tech, Pepperdine University, and The Master's College in a triangular meet. The Lady Coyotes swept their matchups, polishing a perfect record for the season (The Lady Coyotes were erroneously listed as losing to Chapman College on Oct. 11). The CSUSB Men ran for two victories in the meet, improving their record to 5-4 on the season.
National securities program upgrades defense careers

Christine Stanfield

National Security Studies, a master’s degree program adopted five years ago, is designed to develop an understanding of defense policy issues, strategic planning, arms control, and other current political-military issues.

"It is an unbiased approach to social policy analysis," said Lester and director of the George W. Ann Reynolds in September.

The program, which is running its fourth year, began as a special major in 1983. It is now a full master’s degree program offered at CSUSB. The program is approved by Cal State Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds in September.

"Basically we are training policy analysts," said Ackley. A policy analyst takes a broad social issue and transforms it into a range of options to be presented to the decision maker. Each person, he or she lists its own options and benefits as well as the costs involved.

The new program in the school of social and behavioral sciences is revised and upgraded form of the national security career field.

As an interdisciplinary, graduate-level program, N.S.S. incorporates courses from natural science, political science, geography, history, mathematics, while administration and management science.

The program is ideal for those who are interested in military careers.

The program deals with an academic approach to current defense issues, such as those found in page one of the daily newspapers," Ackley said.

"You can understand why the presidential and congressional staff need someone with this type of background," he added. N.S.S. began three years ago as a special major on a trial basis.

Ackley, who taught this type of program in the University of Southern California’s doctoral program, said that CSUSB’s N.S.S. program started as a special master’s degree because it had not been done before in the Cal State system and Ackley needed to know if the program could do well and generate enough student interest and demand to warrant making it a regular master’s degree. The answer to both questions was "yes."

In the three years the program has grown from zero to over 80 students.

About half the students are active military duty officers. The other half are from the defense industry, upgrading their educational skills and recent undergraduates seeking entry level careers in defense analysis.

The program is offered at CSUSB and USC in the Southern California area. The entire program on campus is offered with the same quality and instructors at George Air Force Base in Victorville.

The national security career field offers employment with the federal government and with intelligence agencies such as the CIA and the Defense Intelligence Agency. The N.S.S. also trains individuals for employment with both private and governmental analytical corporations such as RAND, and it supports training for military intelligence officers as well as defense contractors such as TRW and Rockwell International.

Ackley said that the lack of publicity is the major item that hampers the program’s growth.

"Practically everyone someone comes in and says ‘I didn’t know about this program,’" he said.

"We didn’t re-invent the wheel. We took the best features of the two quality and nationally recognized programs at USC, and Georgetown University (Washington, D.C.), and incorporated them into our program," he added.

\section*{Avoiding the Hassle of Cramping}

by Kim Schnepf

Memory is an important part of studying. With mid-terms approaching soon, students are trying to remember what they’ve learned these past few weeks. Several different techniques can be used to retain what has been studied.

Cramming has a bad reputation, yet it can be productive if it’s not exhausted, so that it distorts perception. Cramming makes the material maximally available during the test but is soon forgotten afterwards. The most efficient way to study, whether you cram or not, is to ask questions about the material you’ve read rather than re-reading it.

Studying requires concentration. If you work on eight things at once you will only retain one-eighth of what you’ve studied. A student has to develop a resistance to distracting ideas or thoughts other than what he is trying to learn.

Some students put on a record or turn on the radio while studying. A Bradley University study says this may be wrong. Forty volunteers were divided into four groups of 10. All studied a passage from a law book and then were tested. Twenty students listened to music, and the other 20 studied in silence. Afterwards half of each group relaxed while the others didn’t. The silent group did slightly better than the group that listened to music, but the groups who relaxed did twice as well as the groups who were active between study time and the test.

Memorizing is done in two ways. We can relate facts or learn the material. Retaining facts might help you learn faster and may bring better results on a test. This form of memorizing is good for simple tasks. You don’t have to know how to get a formula for a calculus assignment. Learning the material helps the information stay with us longer. If the information is retained it can be used again.

Sometimes we only have time or need for the surface knowledge. If that’s the case some short cuts can come in handy. Converting the information to a sentence with the first letter of each word representing parts you want to remember is one trick. Writing the information on index cards and placing them around the house in different places can help to distract from other things.

Another theory is that the less time you have to learn the information and take a test gives better results. Memories can be disrupted by new information.

If you have to study several subjects in sequence, it is better if the subjects aren’t similar. Studying math after history is alright but studying American history after French history could blur the information.

Changing study places has also helped memory recall. If you study English at your desk and Biology at the kitchen table differentiating between what was learned about each subject may be easier.

Some of these theories may or may not help you remember information for mid-terms better. The most successful way to learn is still understanding what you’re learning.
Sundowners: the Review

by John and Tammy Horton

Where can you get two charbroiled, top sirloin steak dinners, complete with your choice of salad or soup and beverage for under $10? Fredfortuna of Downtown San Bernardino boasts such a restaurant.

Located at 1131 South “E” St. in San Bernardino, and 8983 Sierra Avenue in Fontana, Sundowners Family Restaurant provides a real bargain to a student’s pocketbook.

They specialize in a variety of meals, ranging from steaks, chicken, fish, pork chops, and ham, to spaghetti. The restaurants are cafeteria style, with the added bonus of not having to leave a tip. The managers of each restaurant provide an added service by their frequent trips through the restaurant serving refills on coffee, and checking to be sure you are enjoying your dinner.

You enter each restaurant through a long hallway upon which are placed placards displaying each dinner ensemble and listing the items and price. You make your selection from the placards and then place your order while picking up your tray. Each dinner comes with a choice of baked potato, mashed potatoes and gravy, French fries or fried rice. The fried rice is oriental flavored with bits of ham included - very tasty. You are also served a slice of Sundowner toast with each meal. If you wish to order a salad, you have your choice of either green salad or fruit salad, for only an additional 69¢, or you may order a bowl of steaming delicious soup for only 69¢. Moving down the line, you order your beverage; coffee or hot tea for 39¢, small and large drinks for 49¢ and 59¢ respectively. They also have a delightful choice of pies, cakes, jello, or puddings to round out your meal.

After paying for your dinner you may be seated at any of the booths or tables in the spacious dining rooms. The restaurants provide areas for both smokers and non-smokers. When your order is ready, your number is called and you may pick up your dinner.

During the week they offer dinner specials from 5:9 p.m. These specials are different each evening, with no specials on Friday and Saturday. For example, on Monday evening you may order a half fried chicken dinner (4 pieces) for only $2.29. On Wednesday they offer a fish plate dinner for $1.59, and on Sunday, they serve a pork chop platter for $2.79.

If you are in the area during the lunch hour, after 11:00 a.m., they serve a wide variety of lunch specials, ranging in price from $2.00 for a sandwich, burger, or the "right" cologne. The pizza, burger, fries, donuts, sizzling bacon, hot buttered popcorn, rich chocolate, pollo loco...
Each Year,

only a small number of residence hall students are known to succumb to alcohol and drug abuse. Yet for these few individuals the consequences of their experimentation are often devastating. Loss of permission to live on campus, diminished ability to do well in classes, drug related health problems and disenfranchisement of friends are just a few of the drug related problems that we see in the residence halls. The staff of Serrano Village urges campus residents and non-residents alike to avoid all involvement with drugs.
