Cal State Manhunt Begins

Sexual Assault: Student raped in between Visual Arts and the Child Center

By Matthew Taylor and Omar Zubair

Taking a walk around campus after dark is like stepping into an old thriller. The dim yellow lights stain the darkness rather than take its place, and there are times that only a chorus of coyote cries breaks the surrounding silence. Though these details seem to ring the bells of Hallo­ween, for many they raise some intensely serious safety questions for CSUSB students to ponder.

On Thursday, October 3, the lapse of safety that occurred will forever be on the mind of one female student. The student who will remain nameless was thrown to the ground and raped as she walked from the Physical Science building to her car in a parking lot near the Administration building, at around 8 p.m.

Police chief Steve Nowicki places the student in the highest regard as he refers to her as a "survivor" rather than a victim. When asked what measures have been taken to increase protection Chief Nowicki could only name the mandate of two officers on campus instead of one. Is this enough to ensure safety, though?

One week after the incident, a walk around campus at 10 p.m. was tried to test the sense of security. Though it was a peaceful night and the dim yellow lights might add a romantic feel as one walks, they were more than insufficient for protection purposes. The only lights on campus that give adequate visibility are the white lights beside the new University Apartments. Another frightening observation is that within an hour only one police officer was seen, and that one sighting was near the most lighted part of campus, the new apartments.

"Erect a better understanding of the additional safety measures on campus," the Office of Parking Services was contacted. Although the office was concerned about the events that happened on campus, the office supervisor Carisa Barnes said, "Our main priority is like our motto says...to maintain a safe and presentable parking lot." Barnes did not know much about the extra measures but she continued to say that, "Parking services is here to make sure that they [the parking lots] are safe, and that there are no cars in parking lanes." When Patricia Casillas, Parking Services Coordinator, was consulted she had this to say, "We’re not trained as police officers or security, but we are in some security because we patrol the campus." Casillas was making it very clear that the officers they have working are not sworn in law officers and that many of them fear for their own safety, because "their only weapon is a can of pepper spray and their radios," said Casillas. Officers from Parking Services take the rape personally because the location of the incident is one of their final sites they check before going home.

Finally, Barnes stated that the parking lots should begin being lit all night but when Facilities Services was contacted for a confirmation and more questions about the lighting situation, no one was available and the Chronicle staff was told to "Call back Monday."
Making Sense of the Madness

By Mathew Taylor
News Editor

Cal State University San Bernardino, as a response to the terrorist attacks, will be hosting a forum that the campus can "make sense of the madness." With the many different events occurring, such as the biochemical hazards here in the United States and the response of the military to war, there is a feeling of uneasiness. For a better understanding into the ramifications of the attacks and the United States' retaliation, CSUSB will be addressing the domestic and international issues involving national security.

The two forums titled "Making Sense of the Madness" will be happening Wednesday, Oct. 17 and also Wednesday Oct. 24. The forum will feature university experts speaking on those various issues with a question and answer period from the audience.

No one has all the answers to the questions people asked after the tragedies of Sept. 11. But here at the university, it's our hope that the forums will bring an awareness and better understanding of the situation.

CSSB Books: Where does your dollar go?

By Omar Zubair
Staff writer

What is the one moment in college that is worse than any others? The moment right after you get your books for the new quarter down on the counter and right before you reach for your students' loan: a leather-thinner wallet. In fact, freshmen Kevin Blake was shocked but still sticks to his philosophy that "we already pay for class. Why should we have to pay for books, too?" Why are you paying so much, and who gets to claim all that cold hard cash after you part with it?

Contrary to popular belief, the campus bookstore does not have a secret swimming pool in the back filled with cash. According to Kim Ball, bookstore director, the average new book gets a 25 percent price increase from its original retail tag, but most of that money does not go into profits for the bookstore.

From data collected by the National Association of College Stores, one can see almost exactly how much of each dollar paid to the Coyote Bookstore goes into each step, from the author to your backpack: publisher's income (after tax), 7%; publisher's paper, printing and editorial costs, 31.9%; publisher's general and administrative costs, 9.9%; publisher's marketing costs, 15.2%; author's income, 11.4%; shipping expenses, 1.4%; college bookstore operational costs, 5.6%; college bookstore personnel costs, 11.5%; and finally the actual profit of the bookstore is 6.1%. After taxes, the bookstore actually only receives approximately three cents of every student's dollar, Ball explains.

Where does that profit go, though? All the profit that the bookstore gets from book sales goes straight into the Foundation, which uses that money for faculty grants, athletic scholarships, new buildings, and other budget items. Even so, transfer student Antonio Lucicasso wonders whether the campus bookstore "cares about profits more than the welfare of the average student?"

For those thrifty students who want to maximize their personal pocketbook, there is a buy back program. The last day for a full refund is October 10, which coincides with the last day to drop class. Both the college bookstore and the UBE buy back books throughout the quarter; however, the best time to do this is during finals week because during the rest of the quarter books will be at national wholesale prices instead of ones marked by the bookstore.

Countdown To Teach-In

By Mark Fretz
Staff Writer

CSU campuses all over the state will join CSUSB in holding Teach-Ins on Tuesday, October 16. From noon to 6 p.m. in the lower commons, CSUSB will feature speakers and entertainment. The event, coined by the faculty as "Teach CSU," is in response to the deadlock in negotiations. A new contract between the California Faculty Association and the University has not been signed for over three years.

The Teach-Ins have garnered wide support among faculty to get something done in order to help move the dialogue forward. The purpose so far is that the campus enough they want action reaching a new agreement with the administration, they also value the importance of student education. For this reason, the CFA wants to take steps that do not hinder the education process.

But the goal of all of these events is to bring the administration to the bargaining table and begin discussing grievances. In order to achieve this goal, faculty must get students involved through the Teach-Ins. The faculty hopes this will put more pressure on the administration to rethink the CFA's working conditions and the student's learning environment.

There is widespread concern among faculty that a new agreement will not be reached, causing a possible strike before year's end.

Tom Meishehler, the chapter president for San Bernardino, has played a major role in getting faculty and students involved in the discussion through the "Teach CSU" events. Although Meishehler has expressed little optimism about realizing these issues quickly, he maintains that the CFA is willing to work with the administration on a variety of issues. At press time ASI leaders were not available for comment.

Leadership Series gets Make-over

By Matt Taylor
News Editor

"Life changing," says Ericka Nunez, Program Coordinator of the Leadership Academy. The Leadership Academy is a revamped version of the original Leadership series, which is a series of workshops on leadership. The workshops consist of such skills as assertiveness and decision making and are focused on developing the leadership skills within every student. The requirements for the program are not very strict.

The revamped version of the Academy consists of twenty workshops. The goal of the academy is to train as many students as possible as leaders. The focus group for the academy is composed of students who are leaders within their social groups, and first time students who want an introduction to the campus. Most of the participants from the leadership series have gone on to become better leaders on and off campus. The leadership series, will have a final project that will consist of community service, a notebook, and a public speaking engagement. Fear of Terrorist Water Attacks to be Addressed

By Rody Rodriguez
Staff Writer

The recent terrorist attacks on New York and Washington D.C. have raised many worries regarding safety around the nation and also here on campus. On the local and national news, experts are discussing the possibilities of chemical or biological attacks that could occur anytime and anywhere. With the recent anthrax scares in Florida and New York, fear is at an all time high. One area that has demanded extra attention has been the safety of our water here at Cal State San Bernardino and around the Los Angeles area. This concern is so overwhelming that during the 2nd Annual Water Resources Institute Confer­ence here at CSUSB, a special panel session of experts will answer questions pertaining to this ever-growing anxiety.

In a letter provided by the Public Affairs Office, Jeff Davis, Director of the Water Resources Institute here at CSUSB, provides his reasoning for the added session.

"Even though it doesn't really fit the theme of our conference, we felt an obligation to add this session to inform the public about steps being taken to secure and protect water supplies and address any fears or concerns about potential terrorism." Director Davis added, "I hope that this conference will end fears about an attack. That's why this conference is important. All of these issues will be addressed by experts in the field." This added session is open to the public and will be held on October 19th, from 10:00 a.m. to 11:15 a.m. at the Student Union Events Center. For more information, contact Cal State's Water Resources Institute at (909) 880-5977, or the University's Public Affairs Office at (909) 880-5007.

I fear for my safety. My mom and I were just talking about that the other day. She was telling me that even after what happened, anything can happen here on campus. Not just a rape but a shooting or a bomb, anything. Anyone can just grab you when you don’t know, and what are you gonna do? If you scream, people are in class and they can’t hear you. I think it’s good that we’re increasing campus security but I have never seen any security.

I have never seen a security guard here, I think it would be good to have some, though. They should definitely keep the campus lit longer and we should be able to see a security guard on campus by the buildings. I didn’t even know until recently that we had emergency phones. They need to put more. Evening professors should advise students to walk together out to their cars.

This is my first semester here. I’m from San Jose State. It would help if we had a phone number students can call to be escorted to their cars. In San Jose we had student security guards and it was really effective because you got paid and you protected the students. They escorted females and some males on occasion to their cars. The security had walkie-talkies and everything and they were very efficient. There was a phone in each classroom with the extension of the campus security posted by each of those phones. They were there in less than five minutes. We should have that kind of extension of the campus security posted by each of those phones. They need to put more. Evening professors should advise students to walk together out to their cars.

There should be more security guards walking around. Also, I think students should always walk with a friend, especially at night. Never go anywhere by yourself. I think we should just have lots of security and lots of lights, especially in those dark lonely areas. The 24-hour escort service is the best way for them to go. Just more lighting, security and never walk by yourself if at all I can suggest.

The Progression of Coyote Radio

By: Dafina Dailey, Staff Writer

Coyote Radio was first developed in 1987. Since then, the Coyote Radio Station on campus has become a recognizable club and an often-visited site on the internet.

Currently, the radio station does not have a license to broadcast over the radio airwaves, although the station has tried in the past to get one, it is doubtful that Coyote Radio will be granted a license. Nevertheless, as Heather Hundley, the Radio Station’s General Manager puts it, “The future is the internet.” The biggest gain of being allowed to broadcast on the station on the internet is that the listening audience becomes much broader because the internet’s worldwide access.

Coyote Radio is a student-run station that plays various genres of music from rap to alternative rock. Paid DJs are the station goers on the job experience with radio basics on campus by planning and performing their own shows throughout each quarter.

In order to give the students a “hands-on experience,” the staff at the radio station offers a variety of jobs that students can hold.

The wide range of jobs at the radio station includes music staff, news writer and production staff.

Coyote Radio’s current promotional event is called Rock and Rampage and is co-sponsored by ASI and the Student Union Program Board, which will be held on the lawn in front of the library on November 24. The radio station’s promotional team is also currently negotiating to help with the school’s Karaoke in the Pub night and is in the midst of creating a banner for the victims and survivors of the tragedy our country suffered on September 11, 2001.

Support your fellow students and Coyote Radio by logging on to the website address at: http://real.csusb.edu/KOTE/index3.html Monday through Friday. If you are interested in working at the station or having your own show, contact Heather Hundley at 880-7377 or the student station manager, Alise Clouser at 880-7664.

Hero In Training

Pleasance Brown, Staff Writer

Cathe Stevenson is an Administrative Support coordinator for the College of Business and Public Administration here at California State University, San Bernardino. Cathe decided to lend her heart and open her wallet to help the victims of the terrorist acts on September 11, 2001. She got the idea from her three-year-old son Wyatt, who made the comment that the police and firemen were the true “Heroes in Training.”

Here is the story of Cathe and Wyatt Stevenson:

By Dafina Dailey, Staff Writer

“A Call for Help”

Last night when my three-year-old son and I were on the way home, he asked me if they got the people out of the building that fell down. When I told him no, he said, “Then how can we help them?”

A baby and a car pick on the whole building and let them out.” I told him that there were many baby workers on another job site they built in the construction crews. Firemen and police men helped lift the building up, but that they have to do it one bucket at a time. His response was “So they are heroes in training.”

After telling this story, she decided to drive a fundraiser Cache believes that “Everyone is in their own way should try to help.” She utilized the help of her colleagues through the internet bulletin board, and you can do your part to help spread the word about this fundraiser.

During the 5th Annual All University Bar B-Que and Festic, Stevenson stated that 100% of the proceeds will go directly to the American Red Cross and aid the disaster victims. This came with the full support of the students, faculty, and staff of CSUSB. At least 600 people attended this annual event held in front of the library. Many faculty and staff members participated in the Duck Toss and were willing to be dunked for a good cause. They managed to raise over $1,200 for the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund. Cathe would like to thank all the great people who participated and were

Marvin Portillo

A graduate of Cal Poly Pomona, and Public Relations officer for ASI, wins $2500 Graduate Scholarship

Marvin Portillo represents CSUSB as the recipient of the 2001-2001 National Society of Hispanic MBA’s – Hispanic National Fund Scholarship. The National Society of Hispanic MBA’s put down money and invited other organizations to match the funds. Lilly Endowment, Inc. generously matched the funds, giving the scholarship a grand total of $2,500.

The scholarship is very competitive nationwide, with a list of requirements and procedures to be met. Students eligible must be in graduate school in a management or business related field, a U.S. citizen or permanent resident with at least half Hispanic ethnicity, and the money must only be used toward college enrollment. "The application was a lengthy and tedious procedure," said Portillo. "I am very thankful for the time and effort that was given to my recommendation letters."

Portillo graduated from California State Polytechnic University Pomona with a Bachelor’s Degree of Science in Communications, concentrating in Public Relations. He is currently enrolled here as a second year grad student in Integrated Marketing Communication, with hopes to finish up school this year. He is currently working twelve hours a week for ASI as the Public Relations Coordinator.

Portillo has a strong communications background, working in journalism before deciding on a PR degree. He has been on the newspaper staff at the Mount San Antonio College Mountaineer, the Inland Valley Daily Bulletin, and the campus paper in Pomona, The Poly Post.

The near future is still unclear to Portillo as he decides between getting another Master’s Degree and going to Law School. Those who gave him the scholarship saw motivation and work ethic in his character, "Right now, I want to compliment my Public Relations degree with a marketing background. Eventually, I want to establish my own full service Marketing and Public Relations empire," he said. Portillo’s plan is to start on the west, and hopefully expand east. "I really want to put my heart and soul into it."

We make a good case for law school.

Downtown and Underground

Shareena C. Clark
Staff Writer

When you think of a poetry reading, what do you envision? Do you see a dark coffeehouse with beats sitting at candlelit tables, snapping after the female poet wearing a beret finishing a spiel on her ovaries? Do you envision a cockamamie mock of culture? Well then, have you ever heard of RUPO (Riverside Underground Poets Association)? It is "An intimate gathering of artists and writers...that started in Jayson Soto's living room a little over two years ago. Over time, the open mic reading was moved all around downtown, from kid's studio apartments, to basements of old buildings, and finally to Back To The Grind..." explained Alaska, one of the performing poets.

Back to the Grind is a coffeehouse located on the downtown end of University Ave. in Riverside. The basement of this uniquely decorated building houses the poets every Monday night from 8:30PM to 10:30 or sometimes 11:00PM.

This underground movement was started by the artists, for the artists. "Everybody pretty soon realized the potential and possibility that our collective energy had to keep it going, and make it bigger. It didn't take long to turn from a hangout to an idealistic art project." The RUPO keeps growing and growing. There are new people at the readings every week.

Inside of Back to the Grind, the raw emotion of the artists is abundant above and below the surface (so to speak). Upstairs on all four walls, there are paintings and drawings by local artists. Above the hallway there is a stage with paintings and drawings. Statues and other visual art pieces are modeling RUPO components from foundation to roof. The RUPO is truly an act of the people, "...If none of this talent and fearlessness was not already here, there would be no art scene..." added Alaska.

The RUPO has weekly readings, and bi-monthly art shows that are all open mic for whoever is interested. RUPO is constantly looking for new artists who want to show their work. Even if you have not written or painted in years, still feel free to share your gift with others. Every artist is welcome. The downtown art scene is not limited to artists and poets; it also bleeds into the downtown residential area, where a group of homeowners called the Renovators are restoring historical homes. "There's an artistic component to it, but it's more than historical restoration," explained Jerry Sturmer, one of the Renovators. The artistic component is definitely visible when considering the process of painting, stripping, and basically remodeling RUPO components from foundation to roof.

For three years now, the Stummers have been working on their home everyday. That is approx. 156 weeks, or 1,095 days, or 23,280 hours, or 1,576,800 minutes. That is a load of time and effort going into their homes. The Sturmer home was built in 1908 for $4,000, while the average home at the time was built for $600-$800. It is made of redwood, and the floors made of white oak. After three years of hard work and many more to come, the Stummers will be applying for historical status, which means that within two weeks, 1,100-1,500 visitors could be touring their home.

All of the Riverside Renovators specialize in morphing their structures into something completely different from when it was first purchased, yet still maintaining its historical integrity. The historical Downtown Riverside is oozing with art and culture. If you have not been there, go now! There are so many places to visit and stories to hear. It is no wonder why the locals take such pride in keeping the city alive.

MEChA and LBSA Gain Strength on Campus

Hector Franco

M.E.Ch.A. and LBSA are two very popular Latino groups that students hear about throughout high school and college. The goal for M.E.Ch.A. currently is to break down stereotypes and inform others about Chicano culture. People often tend to have an idea of what they do or who they are, but let's face it, most people don't understand what they are striving to accomplish. If you had to give a solid answer to "What are M.E.Ch.A. and the LBSA all about?", the answer would be as follows:

M.E.Ch.A. stands for "El Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlán", which is translated "The Chicano Student Movement of Aztlán". The word Chicano is not necessarily a Color or a Race but an Idea. There are Chicanos of many different races and cultures. The main thing about Chicano is often the first stereotype that pops into our heads, or of course, "Selena". Actually Fatima Cisneros, Head Female Co-Chair of M.E.Ch.A., says that the word Chicano is not necessarily a Color or a Race but an Idea. There are Chicanos of many different races and cultures. Islam: The Misunderstood Religion

Kofi Tawiah
Staff Writer

Islam for many Americans is a misunderstood religion because of various factors. It is a belief that has not been fully accepted in the United States. There are many individuals who have been misled about Islam. Islam is not a peace-loving religion. It is not a Western religion; it is unfamiliar to Americans because it is difficult for Westerners to perceive Islam as being a religion, Americans have been misinfluenced about Islam. Islam is a religion, Americans have been misinfluenced about Islam. Islam is a religion which has something to do with the Middle East due to the fact that they understood that there was a war going on Afghanistan by watching the daily news.

What is Islam? Who are Muslims? These are questions that students on campus may have about this religion and those individuals who practice Islam.

The word "Islam" is defined as peace and submission. Peace means to live with yourself and your surroundings and submission means to the will of God. A broader meaning of the word "Islam" is to achieve peace by submitting to the will of God. Who is Allah? This term is the Arabic word that means one God. It is misunderstood as being the God for Muslims. Allah is the God for all human beings because he is the creator and sustainer of life for those believe in some form of religion. In the Arabic version of the bible, Christians and Jews both refer to God as Allah.

Who is a Muslim? Muslims are those individuals who submit to the will of God. A Muslim must acknowledge that there is no God except the one God and Muhammad is the messenger of God.

Who was Muhammad? Muhammad originated from Mecca, known as the Holy Land for Muslims, located in Saudi Arabia. Muhammad was born in the year 570 AD. His family lineage goes back to the Prophet Ishaq, son of Prophet Abraham.

What is the Qur'an? Muslims believe the sacred book provides revelations as the final and last word of God. The text is written in Arabic and there are English translations available.

There are 1.2-1.5 billion Muslims in the world in the United States Muslims make up 7.8 million of the population. Islam is the fastest growing religion in the Western World. There are five principles that make up the faith. All orthodox Muslims must adopt the pillars of Islam. First, the belief in one God (Iman) and Muhammad is his messenger. Second, (Salat) which are prayers prescribed five times a day. Third, fasting (Siya) which is required in the month of Ramadan. Fourth, charity (Zakat) or donating to the poor. Fifth, (Hajj) which is the pilgrimage to Mecca once in a lifetime, if one can afford it or is able to go physically.

You’ve Been Ed-Lightened

What the Hell is Going on? Armed Robbery, Sexual Assault, False Fire Alarms, and it’s only the Fourth Week of School. Are we Students or Victims?

By John J. Eddy
Executive Editor

Despite the numbers, despite a certain Ex-hate, the truth is in personal experience, not on paper. The first half of our 2001 Fall quarter has been shaded, darkened if you will, by a black cloud that has soaked in reflective puddles of hatred and abuse from abandoned grounds. A person’s thoughts and imagination can release some pretty cruel and gruesome images from time to time depending if the mood and conditions harbor them. But what is it that causes a man to turn those thoughts into reality? What drives a man to act out his aggressions, to victimize another person for selfish satisfaction? What can we do to protect ourselves from these people and what has been done by our Campus Police and Parking Services to ensure that help? In my opinion, whatever improvements have been made fall short of providing each and every student and faculty member here at Cal State San Bernardino with adequate protection.

We are in a state of War where we Citizens of the United States are for the first time targets of a War of Hatred. Every Law Enforcement department, Federal, State and Local are on their highest levels of security to protect us. Yet, we the 15,000 students of this campus community have yet to see any of those improvements. Yes it is true that we now have at least two sworn in police officers on campus twenty-four hours a day. Yes, we do have for once a full roster of 14 officers working for the campus. Yes, there are state officers from Cal State LA and Fullerton who have come to our University to help cover shifts and relieve our own officers. Yes, Chief Steve Nowicki has been doing everything possible within the limitations of his office to increase security on campus. The sad truth is that it is just not good enough. If our campus and University is this susceptible to attacks under this new level of heightened security, then what can we expect when and if security levels drop back to normal? We need to know that our policy makers, the President’s administration, are behind us. We need to let them know that we will wait no longer for adequate protection from personal or campus wide attacks. We need to tell Parking Services that we will no longer pay our parking tickets as long as Facility Services keeps turning off lights in the parking lots at night. There are better ways to cut energy costs, ways that don’t put students in situations that leave them vulnerable and unprotected.

I will not stand by quietly while our students are victimized. I will not allow our Facilities, Parking and Public Safety services to give the run around when serious questions are asked. We deserve to know what is going on, that we desire to know what changes are being made to increase security, and we must demand that more should be done beyond what has already been implemented.

Let your voices be heard at the Town Hall Meeting on October 16, tell the University officials your true feelings, thoughts, ideas and plans. We must do everything humanly possible to ensure that the second half of Fall 2001 reflects the positive and safe conditions of Cal State San Bernardino’s past 35 years, so we can move beyond this threat of fear and attack in our own home and continue to grow as a campus community.

If the attacks on Afghan soil Sunday left Americans rattled, it was impossible to notice upon entry to the theatre that housed moe. and their contingent of loyal "moerons." The only sign of nervousness came from the security as they searched everyone thoroughly, as was expected.

Guitar driven jamband moe. played a show in what has to be the best kept secret in Hollywood, the John Anson Ford Amphitheatre. This was one of those nights when almost as much could be said about the venue as the band that played it.

The Ford Theatre is nestled in the Hollywood hills off the 101 freeway on Cahuenga Blvd. It is fully surrounded by trees, which served as a backdrop to an above average light show. The venue seats a little over 1,500 people, which is ideal for up and coming bands.

Yet moe. is far from an up and coming act, as they have been touring constantly for over 10 years. Rooted in New York, it is apparent that moe.'s fan base is increasing with each visit to the west coast.

moe.'s guitar driven rock is second to none, with Chuck Garvey rattling off guitar riffs that would make Randy Rhoads proud and Al Shnier staying right with him as he did double duty working keyboards and guitars. Bassist Rob Derhak, drummer Vinnie Amico and percussionist Jim Loughlin round out moe.

Throughout the show all three guitar players showed well rounded vocal skills.

Being a moe. rookie I began to wonder early in the first set if they could bring home a jam. Those doubts were dispelled towards the end of the set when, during a crowd pleasing, "Yodelittle," the band went into a Phishesque vocal jam and then carried the jam right into "Spine of a Dog."

Southern California Banyan's Wally Waldman added trumpet for the entire second set. Although

PAT WARNER

By Omar Zubair

Have you ever wanted to actually walk inside a painting, instead of having to be an objective observer? The chance to live this dream has arrived at Warner’s new project “Gurgle, Weep, Flow.”

This exhibit is a collection of six brilliantly dark trees, six stumps, and a wheeled platform holding artificial grass, is on display until December 9th, 2001. The first impression upon walking into this “simulated forest” is one of relaxation. The water drips from metal coils atop the trees, creating the feel of a giant rock fountain.

However, once that initial reaction passes, the feeling of a deeper message arises. Could this possibly be a harbinger of things to come: forests filled with thin, mangled, black trees? Though the darkness adds to the beauty of the exhibit, a whole world of dying nature would be painful to all humans. If we keep taking nature for granted and are not careful, then we’ll all be dragging around our own artificial lawn,” warns the artist.

Any art lover or critical thinker should visit this exhibit, at least, once before it moves on to more acclaim. A visit to this elegant garden may even help to heal the wounded heart of a patriot as Antonio, the head of the University Dance Company wasn’t involved in the decision, nor were her students.

The tri-level company, with its 70 members, as well as all the CSUSB dance classes exist in “emphasis” somewhere between kinesiology and theater arts, but unfortunately, not as a major. The UDC operates as a club, supported and funded by ASI.

So why is an “emphasis”, such as dance, one that strives for commercial dance, namely jazz, the emphasis within the Fine Arts Department? The UDC is proud of and feels is an important element of their Outreach. The UDC draws large crowds to their concerts.

dance concert at the same time as a theater production. So, what’s next for the dancing underdogs of the fine arts? They say they will continue to create as well as perform. As choreographers and dancers, they work together to invent dances and express themselves through them. With the help of ASI and the dedication within the club, the UDC hopes to continue doing this for a very long time.

and in the end, that’s what they do. They show up, create, perform, and share the fruits of their labor... a please audience... all over a warm pizza.

"Dance is like a passion. It’s in your DNA. When you dance, you give up apart of yourself. It is creative and it’s within you. I am constantly amazed at the dedication of these kids. They do everything for the love of dance. Sometimes I stand in the middle of rehearsals in disbelief of their dedication to just show up.” - Janys Antonio

THE ACCESS CRISIS: A combination of skyrocketing enrollment and inadequate funding threaten the very mission of the CSU as the "People's University." Funding reductions have sharply reduced course offerings, leaving many students, both full and part time, unable to access the courses necessary for graduation. Rather than find real solutions to the access crisis, typical administration responses, such as raising entrance standards and excluding students who need remediation, only serve to limit access to deserving students.

THE ENROLLMENT CRISIS: Over the next few years the CSU is expecting an unprecedented wave of new students. Yet the CSU Administration and the State Legislature have no real plan to hire enough full-time faculty, librarians, counselors or coaches to meet the needs of the growing student population. Between 1994-95 and 2000, student enrollment has jumped by 35,000 full-time student equivalents, yet only one new tenure-track faculty position has been added. In fact, in 2000 there were 1400 fewer tenure-track faculty in the CSU than in 1990.

THE FACULTY CRISIS: Instead of tenured faculty, CSU has hired Lecturers, who are not compensated for counseling, mentoring or developing curriculum. Sometimes called "freeway flyers" because they must teach at multiple colleges and universities in order to make a living, these dedicated instructors have no benefits or job security. At the same time, tenured faculty salaries are so low and the workload so high that the CSU can't attract and retain new faculty.

THE FISCAL CRISIS: According to the California Budget Project, higher education funding as a proportion of the State's General Fund has fallen dramatically. In the last 20 years, government spending on CSU has been cut nearly in half, from 6.5% to 3.5%.

Chicano issues.

Most people join M.E.Ch.A. to do good for their community or to learn about the Chicano culture, no matter what race they may be. It is frustrating to have a desire to learn and help but not know where to do begin. Fatima Cristena was very sad to inform us that due to some difficult circumstances in the past, there are only about ten M.E.Ch.A members from the CSUSB campus, and they lack a Male Co-Chair, although Fermin Ramirezh has been helping out a lot to fill in the empty chair. She promises that M.E.Ch.A is new, air, and totally improved. In M.E.Ch.A, there is so much to learn and so much to do, and all in the company of some great people.

Right now M.E.Ch.A and the LBSA are strongly working on getting a Chicano Studies Department on campus by getting petitions out to the community and signed. The LBSA (Latino Business Students Association) is also very busy and going strong. My goals for the campus are to reinforce the emphasis of those in ASI of attempting to unite the CSUSB students and creating pride amongst our campus,” says LBSA President Juan Carlos Quintanar. To achieve their goals LBSA members are always aware of on campus activities and try to be involved one way or another. There are about 60 members on campus but will be recruiting all year in hope to achieve a goal of 100 or more. “LBSA has been strong for a couple of years now,” says John Futch of The Cross Cultural Center. Most members have joined to meet people, make friends and for social reasons. Others join for the professional benefits and to enhance leadership skills in business and in the real world. Do not be fooled by the business stereotype either. President Juan Carlos Quintanar himself is not a business major but a criminal justice major. Non-Latino members are more than welcome.

This is only the surface of LBSA and M.E.Ch.A. For more information on M.E.Ch.A, e-mail your questions to mechenews2001@yahoo.com and join them on October 25th for a Town Hall meeting for a discussion on students meeting the community. The LBSA meet every Wednesday at 6pm in the Lower Commons and all are invited to attend. Why not become a part of something? You have nothing to lose and so much to gain.

Recap

Here we are in the fourth week of this young 2001 football season, where several teams have risen from the ashes, while a few others are sinking faster than the Titanic. So thanks to DirecTV and NFL Sunday Ticket, I was able to spend about 12 hours eating on my butt watching ball this past Sunday. Here’s what I saw:

In Miami, Lamar Smith, who led them to a 144 yards and a TD helped the Dolphins to an important win over the Vikes are a self-destructing game or defense. 2nd year QB Daunte Culpepper can’t do it all. Two seasons ago, they were the team to beat, now they’re the team everyone beats. For the Saints, RB Ricky Williams had a great day, rushing for 136 yards and a TD. His first pass of the game was an interception, but Miami Coach Dave Wannstedl turned to the running game, Wannstedl led for most of the game, but collapsed at the end, giving up the long TD bomb and losing the heartbreaker, 21-20.

The Baltimore Ravens got their third win over the hapless Tennessee Titans, 26-7. The Titans are another team going downhill fast at 0-3, and with Steve McNair giving up the long TD bomb and a dramatic ending made for an excellent game where the Browns came out on top. Listen up, I hear always howlin’ off in the distance. The Arizona Cardinals upset the Jaguars at home in Philadelphia. The Eagles led for most of the game, but collapsed at the end, giving up the long TD bomb and losing the heartbreaker, 21-20.

The final score in that game 19-17. Sportscaster Dennis Miller is annoying and has no idea what he’s talking about. He refers to some of the plays and players to Roman history or something the average football fan doesn’t understand. Dennis focus on football and one more thing, you’re not that funny buddy. ABC says that Dennis Miller is supposed to give the viewers commentary from a fan’s perspective. All I have to say, "ABC I didn’t know fans were that stupid.”

Buffalo Bills: Rob Johnson is the most overrated quarterback in the NFL. Bring back the little man Doug Plutic. Not only did he have heart, he wasn’t injury prone and just knew how to win.

This just in: The Bengals aren’t that good. ESPN’s Sterling Sharpe said that Bengals head coach Dick Lebeau should be given a lot of the credit for Cincinnati’s turn around this season. You have to be kidding me. Any team that has Jon Kina as their starting quarterback is going to suffer. Better give the ball to running back Corey Dillon because he’s their only hope to make the playoffs. These are the same ol’ losing Bengals. Predicted record: 6-10.

Forget about the Titans-They’re bad.

Los Angeles Dodgers: Time to break up that sorry team and get some guys who want to win. That means get rid of Sheffield, who is a one-dimensional player and stop overpaying pitchers like Kevin Brown, who only makes about 20-25 starts a season and wins 10 or 11 of them.

Congratulations to Ricky Henderson for breaking Ty Cobb’s record for most hits ever and getting 3,000 hits.

Thank you Tony Gwynn and Cal Ripken Jr. for all the memories you have given to us as baseball fans. Hopefully more players will emulate these players because you guys are everything that’s right about baseball and being class individuals.

Has anyone noticed that this season, Monday Night Football has been horrible. The only competitive game was the New York Jets and San Francisco 49ers. The final score in that game 19-17. Cross Country—Quick, and Smart too

By Darrell Jackson Jr.
Special to the Chronicle

Seven years after women's cross country was reinstated as a Division II sport at Cal State San Bernardino, head coach Tom Burleson has the Coyotes running just like he envisioned.

When I came back to CSUSB seven years ago, I set standards to have a winning program and set a tradition where the kids would be proud to be part of a Coyote tradition, Burleson, who coached the Coyotes from 1984-90 in Division III before the University, discontinued the sport in 1991. He returned after six seasons as the Chaffey College head men and women's track coach, where he was named Fistall Conference Women's Track Coach of the Year, in 1995.

"I had been at (CSUSB) a long time and chose to come back," Burleson said. "I like the school and the philosophy of excelling at both athletics and academics that they stress here."

In the 2000-opening meet, the Titan Invitational at California State University, Fullerton, the Coyotes finished third among the Division II schools competing. At the following meet, the Redlands Invitational at the University of Redlands, the Coyotes improved finishing second. The Coyotes placed three runners in the top ten of the Redlands Invitational led by Junior Katherine Pederson, who finished fourth, completing the course in 18:28. Sophomore Hannah Knight finished seventh at 18:47 and Senior Gina Villanueva finished ninth at 19:54.

Our expectation for the girls is to be the best they can and have exceeded everything we expected, Burleson said. Our (coaching) staff has really worked with the girls and the girls have really responded. Since then, the Coyotes have continued their strong run, finishing fourth among Division II schools at the Highlander invitational in Riverside, and fifth at the Stanford Invitational. At all meets the team competes with over 30 schools, including many Division I programs.

Knight, a sophomore from O'Plano, New Zealand, has been the most impressive of the Coyotes early this season. Last season, she would have been recognized as an All-American, except for the NCAA rules that make freshman ineligible.

"Knight has been dominant considering she had never competed before last season," Burleson said. "She got into my jogging class last year and talked her into coming out for cross-country. I was hoping she would be as good as she looked jogging, and she has been even better."

Pederson, a junior from Serrano High School in Phelan, ranked 24th in the Western United States last season and Burleson feels she will only get better.

"From now until next season, she will be one of the leaders of this team. We have a young nucleus and Katie has shown the leadership skills I thought she would show," as the Coyotes prepare for the CCAA Championships at UC San Diego, on October 20. Burleson feels his team has room for improvement but also knows their goals remain the same from last season.

"Our goal is to always win," Burleson said. "The girls are running well and we are looking forward to the (California Collegiate Athletic Association) Championships. We have been in all our matches with the top CCAA teams, only losing by a few points, so I think they will run their best and compete at the championships."

Burleson says while he is proud of his team's running accomplishments, he is most impressed with the hard work the team has done to build a strong and proud tradition of athletics and academics.

The Coyote cross-country team was named one of 63 teams in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division II with Academic All-American honors in 2000. It was the second consecutive year the Coyotes had achieved this honor. The NCAA recognizes athletic programs who's team grade point average is a cumulative 3.1 or higher during each athletic season.

"To be named a NCAA Academic All-American team two years in a row is what this team should be most proud of," Burleson said. "The girls work hard at their running and in their classes, and they are helping us build a program that everyone can be proud of."

Everyone who is a competitive runner can understand how hard it is to get cross-country and track are alive in San Bernardino.

Kim Ford collected a match-high 20 kills, and senior Amy Pope garnered 32 assists as the surging Cal State San Bernardino volleyball team defeated San Francisco State, 30-15, 30-21, 30-22 during the California Collegiate Athletic Association (CCAA) match at Coussoulis Arena on October 6.

Despite playing without sophomore, All-American Kim Motuhono, who is still recovering from a sprained left knee, the Coyotes received a dominating performance from the-5-foot-10 Ford who provided several clutch and critical plays that her team needed to trounce past the Gauchos.

The Coyotes (10-1, 18-1 overall) remained undefeated at home with an unblemished 6-0 mark while pushing its winning streak to five games.

In addition, the victory also set a new school record for the best start of a season since beginning the Coyotes began its program in 1984. The 18 wins overshadowed the 1998 season in which the Coyotes posted a 17-1 and 24-5 overall mark.

However, the records and stats established was nearly cause for celebration, as the team remained poised for a higher level of success.

"This is not a goal for us," said head Coach Kim Cherniss referring to her team's 18 wins. "It's our best start, but we have other goals in mind that are much more important than stats."

According to Cherniss, clinching the conference title will be more important than the records and stats.

"This is a good start for us," added Cherniss whose team finished with 55 kills. "But our goal is to be the conference champs."

Defensively, the Coyotes were all over the ball as Bridget Harris led the team with 12 digs followed by Ford who added 10. Cindy McCrae and Erika Williams also collected 8 digs each for the Coyotes.

San Francisco State, who remained wireless for the season dropping to 0-11 and 0-20 overall received solid performances from Christine Matteucci (19 assists, 7 digs) and Tessa Hedstrom (7 kills, 7 digs).

San Bernardino will be traveling to Cal State Los Angeles this Wednesday the 17th before starting its final five-game home-stand this Friday against UC Davis. All home games will begin at 7 p.m.

Coyotes down Sonoma State 30-17, 38-19, 36-17

Heading into their matchup against Cal State San Bernardino, Sonoma State was the only team to have beaten Cal State Bakersfield, the only team to have beaten the Coyotes.

However, with the duo of Kim Ford and Kristen Soltz, the Coyotes made quick work of Sonoma during its October 5 contest.

Ford paced the Coyotes with 20 kills, as Soliz followed with 13 in contest which featured 80 kills for both teams.

Katie Dolge led Sonoma with 9 kills while Sandy Tuttle added six kills.

CSUSB remains No. 2 in Regional Poll

Just how important was Cal State San Bernardino’s 3-1 loss to Cal State Bakersfield on September 22? After the American Volleyball Coaches Association of the Pacific Region released its poll which ranked the Coyotes at No.2 behind Bakersfield (10-3), whose only loss was to unranked Sonoma State, it proved a critical point that head-to-head match-ups are very important in regional rankings.

However, according to the national poll, the Coyotes are ranked at third while Bakersfield is slotted at the number 16 spot.

Yet both teams are competing for the second time on October 26 when Bakersfield travels to Coussoulis Arena where the winner should have the upper voting in the Regional Poll.

Rounding the top six spots in the Pacific Region Poll are No. 3 Western Michigan (14-3), UC San Diego (12-4), Seattle Pacific (13-4) and Hawaii Pacific (14-1).
