Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) exhibited a wrecked car to show the results of what happens when people drive drunk.

The AIDS(STD) Control Program from the San Bernardino County Department of Public Health distributed pamphlets regarding STDS and HIV/AIDS. They also provided contact information for awareness workshops. Free condoms and other contraceptive methods were given out to all in attendance.

A CSUSB student who participated in many of the booths said, "They gave helpful information. I hope they give more events such as these because they really do help us." The 1-800-DENTIST booth gave out electronic toothbrushes and information on dental insurance and local dentists.

By filling out the forms, people in need of care will be offered services from around the area.

The Kinseyology department offered free blood pressure and blood sugar testing to those interested.

Each person who wanted to participate received a reading, which indicated high blood pressure levels and the presence of diabetes.

The Tennis on Campus organization (USTA) was present at the festivities supporting their national co-ed tennis program for beginning to advanced level players. The purpose of this fest was to promote not only the services of the companies in attendance, but also to make sure the public was aware of the services being offered to help with their well being.

From there, donor's tissue type will be determined and by giving consent the tissue will be registered. Once listed, it will become the donor's responsibility to update any changes.

Questions like, "Does donating hurt?" or "How long does the discomfort last?" have been frequently asked. Answers can be found on the NMDP website, www.marrow.org.

According to the website, someone will be expected for a couple of days in donors' lower backs. Fatigue and difficulty walking may occur. Some unusual symptoms include headaches, bone or muscle pain, nausea, irritability, or fatigue while receiving injection. CSUSB students have the option of just getting a cheek swab to help match donors.

Flying are posted up all over CSUSB and are being passed out by faculty and fellow students. Students and faculty are willing to speak out in public and have their voices heard.

One of these students, Rodrigo Ruiz, Lambeth Theta Phi brother, said, "This is a profession that needs our help, he is our colleague. Now, how many other children and adults must be in need of our help too?"

He said, "I am contributing some of my time to passing out flyers so that every student has a chance of knowing about it." Information can be found on the main website, www.marrow.org, or by calling 1-800-256-6848.

The Health and Fitness Fiesta was held on May 9 to promote a safer and healthier lifestyle.

The event took place in front of the Pfau Library and was sponsored by the Student Health Center with assistance from the Recreational Center.

Morticia Haerts, CSUSB student, said, "It's great to have activities on campus that get students involved and make them aware of all the health issues.

Besides, it was fun and had freebies and free food. What more can you ask for?"

As many students, faculty and staff members roamed around campus, they encountered many tables filled with flyers passed out by faculty, free condoms and other plenty of information to promote health awareness.

Not only were there golf carts, which served the task of demonstrating how it feels to drive drunk, but also informational booths, a rock climbing wall, Astro jumps, and a volleyball net.

Treating addiction with God James Saint-Aubin Staff Writer

When venturing out on the journey of sobriety, an addict must decide whether to take the religious/spiritual or the secular approach. The question is, with so many different sobriety organizations out there, how does an addict choose between them? Is there one approach that is more fitting for a certain addict?

Over the past 30 years, sobriety organizations have multiplied. The variance and diversity within the organizations are numerous. There are Christian, Catholic, Jewish, Muslim, Buddhist, Hindu, and secular sobriety organizations, as well as many others that offer support to addicts.

“There are three parts involved in overcoming addiction,” said Phil Rydman, executive director of Rhode Island Health Ministry (RHIM), a Christian organization. “The mind, body and soul/spirit. ”

RHYM promotes the idea that the individual alone is powerless to overcome addiction. “Belief in a higher power helps addicts become aware of the individual,” said Rydman.

When asked if the thought that the religious/spiritual approach tends to be more successful than the secular, Anne Goldberg, president of Catholic Alcoholics Anonymous (CAAP), and said that, with many of his observations and involvement, “those addicts who have some sort of observance of a religious faith tend to do better than those who don’t.”

It seems dealing with addiction, religious organizations help addicts overcome addiction by putting emphasis on finding meaning and a purpose.

On the other hand, secular organizations place more emphasis on strictly getting off of drugs. “Life may have no meaning; it is up to me to give meaning to it,” said Christopher.

In terms of whether addiction is physiological or a mental choice, Christopher said, “Religion does not limit itself to one theory. It is a combination of nature and nurture.”

A portion of Sobriety emphasizes a freedom of will and physiological predispositions.

When it comes right down to it, who can say if one approach is better than the other? Both approaches are aimed at accomplishing the goal of sobriety. Only the addict knows which approach will work best in helping him or her reach the goal of sobriety and a healthier life.

GPS tracking for sex offenders Jennifer Carter Staff Writer

There are an estimated 63,000 convicted sex offenders currently living in California. Nearly 18,000 of them are nowhere to be found. However, use of a satellite tracking system coupled with a new piece of legislation is helping to bring that number down.

Global positioning systems (GPS) have been available for hand-held devices and vehicle navigation systems for a few years now, but recently there has been a push to use them in the correctional field to track sex offenders and, in some areas, known gang members.

The system operates by putting a GPS system into a tamper-proof bracelet, similar to the ones already in use for parole, and linking it to a satellite for constant surveillance of the offender’s whereabouts.

For mission fans only Too much ‘action’ for an action film

Paul Garcia
Staff Writer

"Mission Impossible III" fails to deliver. The big budget action film has too much action and you feel lost in it. It was directed and cowritten by J. Abrams, the man behind "Alias" and "Lost." The 126 minute long movie is filled with explosions and small scale love scenes. Tom Cruise (Ethan), who revisited his role for the third installment, fails to take the movie beyond explosions and somewhat predictable action scenes.

Flash back several days to pick up Ethan in happier times. We're at a party in the suburban home of Ethan and his family, Jules (Melissa Manoogian). When asked about his profession by one of Jula's friends, Ethan goes on and on about his job studying traffic jams for the Department of Transportation. It is easy to realize that Ethan is living a double life, one he hides even from the woman he loves.

Ethan still works for the Impossible Mission Force headquarters, where he has retired from field duty and now directs operations performed by others. He comes out of retirement when an agent he personally trained (Keri Russell) is reported missing and is captured by an arms dealer.

Ethan launches a new rescue mission and calls on some old friends to help. Computer geek, Simon Pegg, guides their every step from his monitor in D.C. From here, Ethan jets around the world on explosive and death defying journeys.

Most people know that they do not watch "Mission Impossible" for the plot. You go see it for the big stunts and actions scenes that MI:1 delivers. The special effects in the movie are good and so are the stunts.

As for the drama, it is silly. Despite the welcomed addition of a romantic relationship to Ethan's life, the film is essentially a series of big action sequences too overpowering that we forget just what our tears are trying to accomplish.

Cruise does a great job performing those love scenes, but we often forget the point of the movie because all the stunts are distracting. All of the supporting actors did a good job attempting to save the movie, but it was still not enough.

There were no real let-downs in the movie, just a sequence of action scenes that had nothing to do with one another.

This installment of "Mission Impossible" had something missing. If you are already a big fan of "Mission Impossible," check this one out. For you, I did not want to wait until the DVD.

The new Red Hot Chili Peppers album, "Stadium Arcadium," was released on May 9. The band, which has been together for over a decade, has released ten albums and has been called "the ultimate band" for their unique sound and huge following. With a total of 28 songs, there is sure to be a few songs that you will love.

The video starts out in black and white with the lead singer dressed like Elvis Presley. The band then goes through other performers by performing their own songs in concerts and acting the way several famous performers have in the past. The video ends out black to white in lead singer's dress a contract addition of 'Arcadium,' in the end it

The current band members are Kim, Hyla, guitarist John Tetz, referring to how the band's music and image have changed over time.

"We come from the musical category- Akers earned his B.A. in "We never forget that we're that was big in my mind. "The name itself is a reflection of that...of fascism," said Tetz, referring to how "the universe reflectin g the cosmos on Earth reflectin g the cosmos on Earth."

The new Red Hot Chili Peppers album, "Stadium Arcadium," is the band's eleventh studio album, and has sold nearly 50 million copies worldwide. I would still recommend buying the album even with its short- comings. It only cost me around $12 and came with two sides. It's not the "Rock & Roll" style of music I was expecting when I bought it, but it was still pretty good.

This album offers more songs with a slow pace and almost totally different vibes. You can really check out "Dani California," "Save 10," and "Tear It Up" on their MySpace site at www.myspace.com/redhotchilipeppers. I really enjoyed the music video to the song "Dani California." Eduardo González's "Titan's Head," from Sony Computer Entertainment America's "God of War," was only one of the pieces shown.

Last week, the Los Angeles Convention Center hosted an event outlining the world of digital art entitled "Into the Pixel: An Exhibition of the Art of the Video Game.

Ryan Church, an IT judge and senior art director for Industrial Light & Magic said, "I once swore I would never use a computer to produce art ... Now I can't see working any other way.

Now in its third year, "Into the Pixel," the only juried art exhibition in the world, allows digital artists to showcase their work in the entire digital and fine arts communities.

The exhibition contained the six top nominees, along with previous years' nominees. Basically, the pictures exhibited were of future video game concepts or games that are currently in design.

Kevin Schuitman, one of the ITP judges and creator of "Pixels & Drawings" at the Los Angeles Country Museum, said, "Call it life influencing art, or games influencing life, or art influencing games. Or better yet, why not call it art.

Some of the computer-rendered images were so life-like that it was no wonder why they were chosen out of the 150 other applicants.

The exhibit was located in the West Hall of the convention center. Techno-hop music played in the background and there were also three full bars to quench their thirst.

The space had really comfortable lounge chairs and couches that helped set the mood, along with sexy, relaxed lighting that helped emphasize the art being shown. It is a bit unfortunate that the exhibit only ran May 19-21. I imagine that next year's exhibit is also going to be a blast.

Church said the act when he said, "The level of talent displayed by this year's ITP artists really showed...it's clear that these certain artists have pushed the boundaries of their capabilities to new levels."

The film "Aeon Flux" is more intelligent and intriguing than most people realize. Even though the movie flopped at the box office, it was truly entertaining. This film made $22,857,867 at the box office and an additional $11,500,000 in rentals.

Charlize Theron stars in the Karyn Kusama-directed film "Aeon Flux," with co-stars Marian Cokas and Jenny Lee Miller. The chemistry between the actors will keep viewers engaged.

This science fiction fantasy film is about life in the future. Aeon Flux is part of a gang of rebels known as the Monicans who want to stop the government from kidnapping subjects and performing experimental tests on them. The Monicans are trying to stop a plague that will break out and destroy all mankind.

I was really impressed, while watching the movie at home, at how the quality of the film is almost like watching it in the theater. The DVD had an anamorphic 2.35 to 1 transfer that looks nice on home televisions. All of the colors are very vivid. The film color is well defined. Fleshtones look very life-like and natural.

The DVD includes English and French subtitles. The dialogue is clear, crisp and easy to understand. The thing that was nice was that the background music did not overpower the sound. It adds to the sound like in many other DVDs.

The added DVD features include a commentary track with Charlize Theron, director Karyn Kusama, screenwriters Hay and Matt Manfredi, the two screenwriters of the film. There are also some featurettes that explore different aspects of the film's production.

For instance, "Creating the World" lets you go behind the scenes to look at how the film was developed by the art and design department.

There is also a nine-minute featurette titled, "The Stunts of Aeon Flux." For all Charlize Theron fans, this shows her going through physical training and how she did many of her own stunts in the film. The only thing not covered is her injury on the set. Another featurette shows the location spots of Aeon Flux, such as Berlin. It provides information about why and how they chose Berlin for the movie. There are many featurettes for viewers who would like to learn about the film from top to bottom.

Even though this movie did not get that many good reviews, I really enjoyed the film. It is not too bad for a science fiction flick. It is action-packed and has a very good story line. Anyone who missed it in the theaters should definitely miss the opportunity to rent it on DVD.
Chaudhry said, “This happens to people that live in that social construct, not just Muslims.” There have also been cases of this practice happening in the United States. Here in the U.S. this will not go unpunished due to our court system.

About 70 percent of Pakistan women suffer, and most of them are unaware that they have rights. The few women who are aware of their rights are either being told to be quiet because they always live in fear, or the men will usually get out of jail due to a corrupt court system.

In a documentary by National Geographic, called World Diary, there was a woman a few years ago who was a victim of an honor killing. The story of a lady who was seen by her husband talking to another man and for that simple act he abused her terribly.

The man was talking to ending up being one of her relatives. She was one of the few women who took her husband to court, which is unheard of in this county.

Her husband received a sentence of 14 years in prison. When the film crew questioned other people in the area, the men were in support of her husband because of their religious views. They claim that the Qur’an advocates this kind of violence. Women and men in this country are not seen as equals.

Even the President of Pakistan denied that there is no major problem with the issues of honor killings and that he is unaware of any acts. Some members in the SIK club believe that this is due to so much political pressure about other issue going on in the world. Chaudhry said, “Bringing awareness here at Cal State San Bernardino is good because I am able to get feedback from students about what they think about this problem.”

The Student for International Knowledge club has discussions every week about these issues. For more information you can contact Andrea Castillo, President of SIK, 909-558-8555 or casell1@gmail.com.

The Inter Fraternity Council (IFC), the Panhellenic Council (PHC) and the United Sorority and Fraternity Council (USFC) came together to award top Greek scholarships and the top chapters of the Greek system.

Alpfa Delta Pi, Alpha Phi, Delta Sigma Chi, Delta Sigma Pi, Kappa Delta, Lambda Theta Phi, Lambda Delta Alpha, Sigma Chi, Sigma Pi Alpha, Sigma Nu, Sigma Pi Epsilon, and Zeta Tau Alpha were the beneficiaries and sororities in attendance of the event.

The honor society of Gamma Sigma Alpha presented honor cords to its graduating members. The society also presented Sigma Chi, Kappa Delta and Lambda Theta Phi with awards for holding the top GPA’s of their councils.

Zeta Tau Alpha took trophies for having the highest GPA by chapter of the Panhellenic sororities, as well as member Alisha Methery having the top GPA of the Greek system.

Top GPA by class for the Inter Fraternity Council was split equally between Sigma Chi and Sigma Nu, and was also split throughout the United Sorority and Fraternity Council.

In addition to academic and philanthropic awards, chapters were recognized for their achievements in Greek Sports Week. Sigma Phi Epsilon competed not only men’s Greek Sports Week but the JFC Sports League as well.

The women of Delta Sigma Chi were commended for their winning of the women’s Greek Sports Week. Alpha Phi was also awarded a trophy for their win in the Lip Lynx.

Other awards given to individual members of the different councils included the Unsung Hero Awards, Greek Man of the Year, awarded to Christopher Cruz of Sigma Nu, Greek Woman of the Year, awarded to Karen Semans of Kappa Delta and Leader of the Year, awarded to Vanessa Flores.

The most prestigious awards included Most Philanthropic Individual Chapter, received by Kappa Delta; Panhellenic Presidents Award, received by Kappa Delta, Inter Fraternity Presidents Award, received by Sigma Nu, United Fraternity and Sorority Council Presidents Award, received by Lambda Theta Alpha and the United Sorority and Fraternity Council Most Involved Chapter, received by Delta Sigma Chi.

The members of Sigma Nu received the President’s Award for overall fraternity participation.

CSUSB’s first Ombudsman

CSUSB promotes fairness and integrity with the aid of a brand new service to the university community.

As of March 2006, CSUSB selected Chani Beeman for the position of University Ombudsman.

Beeman is a long time employee of CSUSB who has served as an information technology consultant, intern, union steward, sexual harassment advisor, diversity officer, and an active member of various committees.

The Ombudsman service provides support, resource information, guidance, and informs individuals of their rights and responsibilities.

The service attempts to work out problems for those who feel they have been treated unfairly or unreasonably before the dilemma gets out of hand.

Our University Ombudsman can address concerns such as acts of mistreatment from peers or faculty, impolite treatment over the phone by a University staff member, issues dealing with discrimination regarding gender, race or status, or even simple questions such as where to buy his/her tickets.

Beeman said, “The service is important because, as the University gets larger, it becomes more difficult for individuals to recognize university policies, learn the system and get questions answered.”

According to Beeman, about 75 percent of the service is utilized by the matrics.

Beeman said, “When individuals aren’t sure where to get their questions answered, they can come here and see me.”

The University Ombudsman can help individuals by facilitating communication, obtaining inaccessible information, guiding individuals to support services, and helping them find constructive ways of preventing concerns.

Beeman said, “The service’s key goal is to bring about change by improving current policies because fairness matters.”

In the immediate future, the Office plans to create workshops to talk about conflict, communication and fairness.

The Office of Ombuds Services is located in the Student Union, Room 202.

Beeman’s hours of availability are 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Beeman can be reached by telephone at x5635.
LBSA prepares students for the future

This is a corrected reprint from the previous issue.

Providing endless possibilities for the students of Cal State San Bernardino, the Latino Business Student Association (LBSA) can provide help to all those who seek it. Established as a Latino/ business organization, LBSA is diverse and open to all ethnicities and majors.

As their mission statement states, "LBSA exists for the purpose of exemplifying and encouraging professionalism amongst Latino students of all majors at CSUSB.

Furthermore, we will provide our members with the opportunity to participate in programs and activities that will enhance their academic, personal and professional abilities."

Our organization introduces our members to aspects of corporate and professional America, creating opportunities for interaction with accomplished individuals, creating a support network on campus, active involvement in the Latino community, cultural awareness through education for this and future generations," said Yvette Vasquez, member of LBSA.

Every month, LBSA has some type of event. This month they will be hosting its first-ever Corporate Mixer to be held at the university's Samuel Manet Events Center, 6-9 p.m. Wednesday, May 10. This event will be to develop a sense of communication with many of these companies, and a competition to see who gets more business cards in a period.

There will be representatives from local and national corporations, including: Target, Enterprise, Beneficial Financial, Advantage Bank, and Wells Fargo. Also, there will be many members from the 13 California State University campuses. These 13 campuses give network opportunities to LBSA, since it is linked with the large United Latino Student groups.

Another event that LBSA will be hosting is their car wash on May 21, which will be held in Bakersfield; the location is still to be announced. You can find much information and dates on their myspace.com account: LBSA at CSUSB. It is their visual website where many pictures and events are being posted regularly.

Also on their list of upcoming events: a social at Tremors Club on May 25 in the city of Riverside, where a small fee will be charged to enter.

"LBSA is providing their students with a great asset to their college experience by providing them with the privilege of performing as guides," said Vasquez. Their associated advisor, Dr. Tom Rivera, always has a task for them. LBSA is always participating in community service such as, "I'm going to clean up.

Students may attend their weekly meetings on Wednesdays at 6 p.m. in rooms SMSU 210-211. A $15 charge for the year, and the ability to commit, is all that is required to become part of LBSA.

For more information contact Freddie Martinez, president of LBSA, at (909) 520-2419.

Successful dreams

May 15, 2000

Fortunato Malik - Staff Writer

When we have the word success we all think of something different. I believe we all have our own definitions or idea of success.

For some, being successful may mean making lots of money and being filthy rich. For others, it may mean accomplishing your goals and being more productive. Some may feel successful just having all their family being healthy and safe.

We all have different ideas of what it means to be successful, but it really comes down to what everyone sees as being important.

To accomplish great things we must first dream. Once we dream we can plan and begin the most important work of realizing our dreams.

What we believe it means to be successful.

The process of setting goals helps you choose where you want to go in life. By knowing precisely what you want to achieve you will know how to get there. Once you set your goals it is important to review them. Goal setting is an important method of deciding what is important for you to achieve in life. Without it we may find ourselves not achieving what is important and that results in frustration.

Goals give you more than a sense of direction. Not only are they an incentive to keep you going, they also provide a target for goals that are important to them, so that they can make sure the goal is accomplished.

One is very important to set goals that are important to you and that you believe will contribute to your success. Not being successful means being rich, working or having a family.

Once you make that important step to set a goal, you can begin to see results. Some of us may have long-term goals and others may have short-term goals.

However, the important thing is to make a distinction between a good goal and a bad goal. You may set goals that are not followed up on and that is not worth having is simply a waste of time. We do have the ability to turn a step into a goal and that goal is achieved. Many success stories begin with a dream and it is important for us to dream as well.

To quoteinstein's famous, "We accomplish great things, we must not only act, but also dream, not only plan goals before us, but also plan to achieve these goals."

High school exit exam: a test of necessity

Jerson Ignacio

If you are a good day to be a competitor. As previously stated, the university does great things in order to be competitive. The University of California, San Diego's Super Court Judge Robert Freeman decided to delay a decision whether to suspend the high school exam at the urging of state officials.

The final state is not rewarding some accomplishments with a grade. Not being able to pass basic English and arithmetic should not keep you from going to college; you should not keep you from going to high school; you should not keep you from obtaining your high school diploma.

In summary, in order to be competitive, we need to make a distinction between a good goal and a bad goal. You may set goals that are not followed up on and that is not worth having is simply a waste of time. We do have the ability to turn a step into a goal and that goal is achieved. Many success stories begin with a dream and it is important for us to dream as well.

Student Leadership Coordinator

Dear Mark Lauree,

On March 9, 2006, I forwarded the piece to the President or thanking you for amending the student association. I believe these clarifications may be important:

You refer to Title 5 of the California Code of Regulations as a "blueprint attorney that makes it a fact, state law.

The university, in order to be recognized by the university, student organization must get an attestation from their statement in their constitution that they do not discriminate on the bases of race, color, gender, religion, ethnicity, color, age, gender, marital status, citizenship, sexual orientation or disability. The press release which I sent to you in my first language so I know what I'm like in the language. Because the university has a lot of things, however, just by the university, we need to be in the exam of which exam it can pass this test.

But outside of these two groups, the poor and the non-English speakers, everybody else should have to pass that exam to get out of high school.

Let's face it, graduating high school is not a big deal anymore. Body can show up and gradu­ate.

The exam doesn't completely guarantee that those who pass it are not bright people. It means that the person behind the counter at McDonald's will probably work as many as third that some idiot the entire community or working in industry.

It all comes down to passing a test at the end, which is all accounts a very simple test. If you don't pass it, then you need to go to high school and they do it's what is best for society, and the society is what we need some productive leaders.

Bonds vs. Ruth

Amber Garlington
Staff Writer

- Forty thousand fans stand up in their seats just to capture the moment when Barry Bonds steps up to the plate and attempts to break Babe Ruth’s career home run record. Although many people consider the two a match, they still want to see if it can happen.

Giants fans these days are not nearly sure how to deal with Bonds. It seems that the cheers are indifferent towards Bonds. It seems that Bonds is struggling in his pursuit of the record because he has not hit any home runs so far this season.

The fans may believe that Bonds somehow performed an upset of sorts into his body to hit more home runs because he may have heard rumors that Bonds might play for the American League team next year of the Giants are not willing to offer him a contract.

Not only is there a slight disappointment coming from the fans, it is also coming from Major League Baseball. According to www.espn.com, MLB does not want to hold a party for Bonds at the same time that the organization is investigating him for using steroids. The Giants make no secret of the plan to step up for No. 714 before the final season.

As Bonds inches closer and closer to Ruth’s career home run record, he must move beyond the whispers of Bonds being a steroid user. Linda Tourtouri, watches and waits patiently. The issue is based on the fabric of the family that is still there although the issue may be a bit too late. The truth is that a lot of Bonds is still there. Ruth had a drifting problem, but being able to enjoy a reminder of that for young children, according to espn.com.

“Tourtouri: ‘In my heart, it’s hard for me. I like to do things in its proper order. Bonds is a mixed up story in some ways.”

The Giants have invited Ruth’s family to be there when Bonds comes even with his grandfather, but they have politely declined. One thing is for sure: Ruth could not be attending the games.

Tourtouri said, ‘They’re a great family and I really think they want to help them out, call me for anything. I’m a pretty good gal. I’ve got a lot of my grandfather in me,” according to espn.com.

As baseball fans across the US hold their breaths, waiting for the 63-year-old Bonds to hit No. 715, they know that if Bonds, they will all be in a state of confusion due to the waiting game. They do not know whether to praise him or not because he may have used steroids to get this point in his life.

Cutting Edge Talent

Kristyn Joy Evans is a "dazzing" good ice-skater! Now, almost twenty years since she started skating competitively and after a four-year break, she is going to try and prove it to everyone once again.

Evans, a senior, is trying to represent CSUSB in the National Collegiate Championships in August in order to recapture the national title. Since she will be graduating, she will not be in contention for a national championship and a medal in the event, it will be her last chance to win it at the college level.

"I have been working my butt off the last year to get back in shape. I am almost there!” said Evans. "It is in the process of getting my competition programs choreographed for the season.

The last time Evans competed in the National Collegiate Championships was in 2000. She was representing CSUSB and won the National Collegiate Title with a medal. She has now finished second with a silver medal two years in a row, both in 1997 and 1999.

A repeat medalist in Regional and National Championships, Evans has contended with some of the greatest skaters in the world. She is a figure skating, including Olympic silver medalist in figure skating, and Sao Cohen, the upcoming U.S. champ.

Her list of accomplishments on the ice is pretty mind-blowing, but competing is not the only thing Evans is into. She started skating competitively and was a principal performer in a Fidelity.com Super Bowl commercial.

She also participated in NBC’s “Beverly Hills Ice on Ice” in 2000.

A full-time student, Evans maintains a solid grade point average and has been known to skate for as long as three days a week. Before and after classes. Add to that the time she spends coaching other skaters, and you have a very busy lady.

"If you want to just always buy and well organized,” Evans said.

Evans recently attended a figure skating camp in Ontario where she takes instructions from Perry Lewis, a coach she has previously worked with in Lake Arrowhead. Center for Ice is also where Evans coaches other ice skaters of all ages and levels.

Evans is again trying to capture the Collegiate Championship.

"I have been a coach, a sales associate, a desk worker and a actor, yet skating seems to work,” Evans added. “I guess I have learned that when you have a passion in life, it will always be a part of you, and you will always return to it.”

As for the rest of us, perhaps we should consider our classrooms more carefully. After all, goodness may only be a desk away.

Sixth place disappointment

Justin Blsson

Game Over. There are no more chances for the Coyotes baseball team, whose season ended last weekend at the hands of the Golden Eagles of Cal State L.A.

The Coyotes lost three out of four games this past weekend, dropping the Coyotes (19-17, CCAA, 25-22) to a sixth place tie in the conference and finishing four games out of the conference mark.

Although the season ended in disappointment, there were some bright spots. In a game that celebrated individual awards given to some Coyotes.

There were five players who were selected to the all-CCAA team. Senior Roger Rios and Jake Puckett made the first team, as well as junior Michael Rocco. Junior reliever Ryan Hanks and junior outfielder Branden Buxton made the second team.

Nieto finished the season leading the team in hitting with a .365 average, as well as leading the team with 38 RBIs. Nieto’s average was also good for fourth place amongst the conference leaders.

As for the deep ball, junior Patrick Walker and Brad Cronin tied for 18th with 11. Their other honor is being tied for fourth in the conference leaders for home runs.

Junior Jake Puckett made the first team as a utility player, playing half the season at third and the other half at shortstop. He was a solid fielder committing only six errors in 152 chances all year.

Hanks made the all-CCAA second team as a reliever and led the team with nine saves, not allowing any scored run in 13.2 innings.

He was the main reason why the Coyotes had a record of 10-8 when they were leading into the sixth inning.

Rios threw back-to-back no hitters in consecutive games, March 7 and March 8, against Cal State Stanislaus and UC San Diego, respectively. The no-hitters were the first and second of her collegiate career.

With only one senior’s presence this season, the Coyotes are expected to have plenty of talent back for next season and hope to build on the momentum of this year’s 10-game turnaround.

Much improved

Shel Johnson
Staff Writer

With a 5-1, 6-3 sweep of Sonoma State last weekend, the Cal State San Bernardino softball team ended the season in style.

Under first-year head coach Tacy Riddle, the Coyotes went 12-15 overall and 12-16 in conference, winning a total of 10 more games than they did last season. The 10 game improvement was the best since 2002 when the Coyotes won 19 more games than they did in 2004.

For the third time in her three seasons, Junior Kaitlin Henderson was recognized for her outstanding play by the California Collegiate Athletic Association. Along with freshman teammate Leslie Carmasco, Henderson was named to the All-CCAA Honorable Mention team. Henderson was the 2004 CCAA Freshman of the Year, and was named to the All-CCCAA second team last season.

Henderson led the team with a .346 batting average, 14 home runs and 32 runs batted in. For her third-year career, Henderson has hit 18 home runs, which places her just two shy of the second most set by Nicole Fiske from 1998-2001.

Junior Michelle Caldarelli led the team in both hits and triples (3). The Coyotes, who compiled their best record since they went 32-31-2 in 2002, were 16-1 in games which they lead after six innings. They were 14-3 when they held opponents to 0-2 runs.

Red shirt freshmen standout, Kait Roons, led the Coyotes in slugging (.484), batting average (.406), and strikeouts (34). Finishes of those three core players, with the battery looking, Roons finished the season with a .489 batting average and an 8-5 record.

Roon’s three back-back-back no hitters in consecutive games, March 7 and March 8, against Cal State Stanislaus and UC San Diego, respectively. The no-hitters were the first and second of her collegiate career.
