Three Coyotes and a Booth

by Cynthia Pringle
director of public affairs

The eastward shift of campus physical development can best be felt by viewing plans for a second information booth on Coyote Drive, which leads into Jack Brown Hall and Coussoulis Arena.

Unveiling schematic drawings for the parking and information booth to be built on the driveway's grassy island, Bill Shum, director of physical planning and development, also displayed a small-scale model of a statue of three coyotes, which will adorn the entrance of Coyote Drive. The largest coyote points toward Northpark Boulevard and is 10-feet from nosetip to tail's end, Shum said in an Administrative Council meeting July 14. All three coyotes will be cast in bronze and mounted on a stone ledge contiguous to the booth building. The artwork will stand about 12 feet high.

Designed by Chinese emigrant XuanChang Guo, the statue will take about five months to cast. The perspective behind the work emphasizes "education, the passage of knowledge...(and) demonstrates care and sensitivity in this process," Shum explained. It illustrates "teamwork, not the glorification of one individual." Three generations of coyotes are depicted showing leadership and courage, caring and the emergence of the next generation, he added. The booth and statue are expected to be completed by spring 1998 and will be paid for through funds in parking services.

Improvements in existing parking lots also are scheduled for this summer, said Shum. The perimeter road along the campus grounds, running parallel to the parking lots, will be modified to allow delivery vehicles direct access to the Coyote Bookstore and the Commons from lots C and D, respectively. A parking dispenser will be added to Lot B near the Foundation Building and bollards restricting the use of internal sidewalks as roadways near Jack Brown Hall and the Student Health Center will be installed. Improvements to the science parking lot began just over a week ago and will include a walkway to the HPE building, 23 more spaces and modification of the gate arm.

Pesticide, Sexual Harassment Studies Among Top Winners

Students from Riverside, San Diego and San Bernardino counties won cash awards for their presentations in CSUSB's annual research competition. It was held in May.

Riverside County resident Jefferson Capras of Moreno Valley captured a first-place honor for his study on "The Synthesis of New Natural Pesticides Isolated from Avocados." He's an undergraduate biochemistry major.

San Diego resident Michelle Marriott took top honors in her division for her study on "Attribution of Sexual Harassment as a Function of Race and Job Status." She's a graduate student in the Industrial/Organizational program at Cal State.

First-place awards for San Bernardino County residents went to senior psychology majors Deborah Schultz of Rancho Cucamonga and Barbara Yong Stine of Victorville who co-authored the juried paper, "Public Speaking Anxiety and Cognitive Processing: The Effects of State Versus Trait Anxiety." Also earning a top prize was Paula Estrada of San Bernardino for her graduate thesis on "Thyroid Hormone Restores GLUT4 Translocation in db/db Mice." She is a biology major who is going on to Yale University to pursue a Ph.D. in molecular biology.

Second-place awards were given to Susan Keough, also a Rancho Cucamonga resident, who researched story-telling in support groups as a communication major; and Barstow resident Robert Collins for his graduate study of behavioral sensitization in mice. He's a general-experimental psychology major. Yucaipa resident Melodee Lopez also earned second place for her research on kombucha, also known as mushroom tea. She was majoring in foods and nutrition.

First-place awards were $400 and second place brought $200. The students presented their work at the 7th annual student research conference held at Cal State, San Bernardino. The event is designed to promote excellence in undergraduate and graduate scholarly research and creative activity.

A Note from Human Resources

Picnic at Knott's Lagoon, Plus Water

The Knott's lagoon is the site for this year's "End of Summer Picnic" put on by human resources. Friends and family can come Aug. 23 for an all-you-can-eat buffet, games, prizes and a visit from Snoopy. Picnic hours are from 11 a.m.-3 p.m., with lunch being served from noon-1:30 p.m. The park stays open until 1 a.m. Tickets for adults are $28.20, children ages 3-11 are $14.95 (under 3 is free) and parking is $5.

Summer prices at Raging Waters run through September. Adults are $16.99 and children are $11.99. Call Jenny Casillas or Twillea Carthen for tickets or more information.

A Health and Safety Checkup

An auditor from the CSU Chancellor's Office completed a survey of the campus's health and safety areas July 17. Among others, he talked to people enrolled in and in charge of employee and student training programs, and health monitoring programs at Cal State. The final report, which will be available for anyone to read, should be ready by mid-September.

Do You Know When to Use Pepper Spray?

If a group of teenagers makes a habit of coming into your yard and deliberately trampling your garden, can you use pepper spray to stop them? Or can you use it on a man who begins to run after snatching your wallet or purse that's sitting on a table while you eat lunch?

Answer: No to both. By law, pepper spray can only be used for self-defense. Anyone who uses it unlawfully can be tried in criminal court. Det. Randy Keller of the public safety office at Cal State will be conducting a class on the laws governing the use of the product and how to administer first aid to a victim of its use. The workshop will be held Aug. 8 at 9 a.m. in the public safety office located in the trailers on the north side of the campus. The session will last about two hours and is free. Call Randy Keller at Ext. 5165 to sign up.

CSUSB Alums Serve CSU

CSUSB Alumni Association president Chris Ahearn was recently selected to serve on the CSU Alumni Trustee Selection Committee. And elected as the 1997-98 vice president of programs and special events for the CSU Alumni Council was Pam Langford, the university's director of alumni affairs.

In Memoriam

The campus community extends its sympathies to the family and friends of Patrick Watkins (chair, Theatre Arts), who died of pneumonia in France on July 5. Said Teresa Morris, the former faculty senate chair, "Patrick was a wonderful colleague and a good friend. He worked hard and was well-respected on campus and in national and international theatre. ... He brought a special vitality and humor to the campus ... always ready to poke fun at our 'serious' campus concerns and to get us to laugh at ours."

Community Service

Jim Mulvihill (Urban Planning) is the president-elect of the San Bernardino Chapter of the League of Women Voters.
