SPRING 94-95
GIVING VOICE to the 4TH FORCE

One counseling approach focuses on ethnic differences, another on human similarities. Is it time for a marriage—rather than sacrifice—at the altar of understanding?
If the earth were flat and all its guests were of one race, one language, one nation, whether under God or not, one socio-economic class and possessed of one set of values that lit their way, psychotherapy would likely be a much simpler pursuit and run a customer a dime for 50 minutes of “cookbook” advice. But we are all a piece of this and a piece of that. Ethnicity alone does not make the man. Religion alone does not make the woman. Gender alone does not make either. We are these things and more. We are where we have lived, where we live now, our age, our income. And more still. And while some of the pieces can fit any group, Faith McClure and Ed Teyber know that, because the earth is round, it’s key for a counselor to understand differences and similarities, to enter into a client’s “subjective worldview,” to be sensitive to multicultural issues—what psychology is calling the “fourth force.”

Clinical and counseling psychology, says Teyber, who wrote a nationally-acclaimed book in the mid-'80s on helping children deal with divorce, has focused too much in recent years on ethnographic influences or for too long—decades—on the idea that, as one researcher said, “all humans are cut from the same cloth.” By pulling these two approaches together, Teyber and McClure are among the first to set foot on fertile middle ground.

In fourth force psychology, says McClure, herself an expert in matters multicultural, there is a place for stereotypes. But there is no place for counselors who will assume the stereotypes are true of everyone. Men tend to show more anger than women, but not always; some Asian-Americans might avoid eye contact with an authority figure, but that doesn’t mean they are shy, depressed or unassertive. The stereotypes—even when they prove untrue—help counselors ask good questions of their clients. They get to know them.

“The relationship provides the framework for working with the client,” she says, “and for understanding their experience.”

To that end the two Cal State faculty will be publishing a book later this year on multicultural-relational therapy for children and adolescents. The book, aimed at guiding counseling students, takes case studies of children who suffered from such disorders as depression, bulimia, anxiety or hyperactivity and demonstrates how these children’s cultures played a part in treatment. “What we’ve done,” McClure says, is apply rising multicultural sensitivities to counseling “systematically.” The movement is international, she and Teyber say, and “we are trying to help shape it.”
University Boosts Regional Economy by $145 Million

BY TOM PIERCE, PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS

There are many yardsticks by which to measure the effectiveness of an educational institution. Certainly Cal State, San Bernardino’s greatest contribution to the inland southern California region is its lasting effect upon the intellectual, cultural and personal growth of its students. That growth is reflected ultimately in an improved quality of life for both graduates and the communities in which they reside and in increased lifetime earnings for the graduates themselves.

In the process of meeting the needs of students, however, Cal State also positively influences the economy of the surrounding area. So last year the university commissioned a study last year to investigate the approximate annual impact Cal State has on economic activity in San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

Taking care to measure only the university’s net annual contribution to the regional economy and employing conservative assumptions in the process, the primary findings of the study reveal that the university’s presence increased regional output by approximately $145 million and regional earnings by almost $66 million in 1992-93. The sources of that net increase in economic activity are as follows:

• $55 million of additional local output and $37.5 million of additional local earnings attributable to the university’s direct provision of instruction and other educationally related services associated with the Office of Extended Education, the Children’s Center and grants;

• $7.9 million of increased regional output and $2.7 million in increased regional earnings attributable to university purchases of goods and services in San Bernardino and Riverside counties;

• $45.8 million and $14.3 million of additional local output and earnings, respectively, resulting from consumer spending by Cal State employees in the two-county area; and a

• $35.9 million boost in regional output and $11.2 million of additional household earnings related to local spending by Cal State students.

While the purpose of this study was to examine the university’s annual economic impact, it is important to recognize CSUSB’s contribution to the quality of life in the Inland Empire in ways that can’t be measured in dollars and cents or even by the number of degrees conferred annually. Student clubs and organizations, for example, provide hundreds of hours of community service annually. Student interns in health science, marketing, social work, criminal justice, psychology and other areas work directly with local organizations in both the public and private sectors, gaining experience for themselves and providing valuable service in return.

Cal State faculty and staff also serve on school boards, the boards of local agencies and museums, local government committees and commissions; a few have held elected public office. Numerous faculty provide service in their areas of expertise to local agencies and small businesses through consultations, training workshops and seminars, and work with elementary and secondary schools in cooperative efforts to enhance student skills and understanding in areas such as reading, writing, science, music and economics.

The campus itself increasingly serves the community by hosting events such as the annual San Bernardino County Schools’ Academic Decathlon and by providing for the public’s use of university facilities for sporting events and summer camps, among other activities. Of course, the university’s theatrical productions, concerts, art exhibits, public lectures, as well as its annual health, fitness and environmental workshops/festivals and its intercollegiate athletics events, among others, attract thousands of local residents to campus annually.

These various activities attest to the mutually beneficial effects of the ever-increasing interaction between the community and university, and clearly demonstrate how that partnership enhances the quality of life in the Inland Empire in ways that cannot be gauged merely in monetary terms.

Condensed from The Economic Impact of California State University, San Bernardino on San Bernardino and Riverside Counties by Dr. Thomas J. Pierce and Marcus A. Cuda, ’94.
GTE INVESTMENT BOOSTS TELECOMMUNICATIONS CAPABILITY

Campus communication capabilities are being bolstered by GTE California's work to install 14,000 feet of fiber optic cable, subduct and optics equipment at the university and the company's local switching office, reports Ken Foshee, GTE's regional public affairs manager. The project, valued at $338,000, brings state-of-the-art telecommunications technology to the campus including video conferencing, high speed data transfer, T1 and T3 capabilities, for distance learning, among other services.

“This effort stands as a classic example of a true partnership between the education and business community, something more often talked about than producing a tangible result,” Foshee comments.

The project has enabled the campus to upgrade its system from an analog to a digital system that provides clearer voice and data transmission, notes Don McKenzie (Telecommunications & Network Services).

TOP PROFESSOR: MARKETING'S MARY SMITH

The university's Outstanding Professor for 1994-95 is Mary Smith (Marketing). Recognized for her teaching, professional activities and public service, Smith is well known for giving her students hands-on experiences, allowing them to do research and present concepts to large companies. An ad campaign for Apple computers and participation in the American Advertising Competition are just two of the undertakings of her students (see the next page for more news on her students' involvements).

Smith is the first School of Business and Public Administration faculty member to receive this campuswide distinction. She has achieved the university's top award for faculty early in her career, having only finished her Ph.D. in 1988 and capturing the honor in her first year of eligibility at Cal State. She joined the university in 1987 and has 19 years of teaching experience.

With an M.B.A. and Ph.D. in marketing from the University of Texas at Arlington, Smith attributes some of her success as a teacher to her bachelor's and master's degrees in English from Oklahoma State University. "What I'm trying to show them (students) is how to organize and write reports," to "present them in a clear, concise manner that makes sense to managers."

BLIND STUDENT'S TECHNIQUE ATTRACTS MEDIA INTEREST

A technique developed by graduate student Dan Kish, who has been blind since he was a toddler, has been as effective as "radar" in helping him navigate the world. The uniqueness of the feat has brought him some national media attention, too.

Using a procedure of tongue clicks that rebound off of surfaces, Kish can tell generally the size of a room and what it contains almost immediately. The clicks, which sound like soft finger snaps, have impressed mobility instructors, including those at the Braille Institute, who teach the visually impaired how to get around. In fact, his methods are considered innovative by at least one specialist.

His self-styled system earned him a guest spot on the national television show, "The Other Side," in December as well as a report in The San Bernardino County Sun that month.

As part of his master's thesis project, Kish has taught school children how to "read" echoes, but he has no plans to make a career out of his teaching method. He is trying to develop a device that will send out clicks that are superior to tongue clicks, however.

"Many blind people don't develop much of an echo skill at all," he says, noting that working with a cane takes far longer to provide the visually impaired with the same kind of information that his system does.

Foad Derakhshan (Management) has two articles that have been accepted for publication. "Aiko Morita and SONY" will appear in the Journal of Business Leadership and "A Field Investigation of Country of Origin Effects on Consumer Product Evaluations" will be published in the International Journal of Management. Additionally, his business policy case on Pan American Corporation was published in the new text, Strategic Management. He also is in the midst of reviewing a text in international management for West Publishing.

Sung-Kyoo Huh (Accounting and Finance) has co-authored and will publish two papers this year. "How Can the Sophisticated Variance Investigation Model Be Applied to the Real World?" is due to appear in this spring's edition of the Journal of Cost Analysis while "Performance Evaluation of Foreign Banks in Korea" will appear in the fall issue of the Multinational Business Journal.

Elisabeth Ryland (Management) will be teaching a new course in environmental concerns for the M.B.A. program in spring. The topic also is the subject of a paper, "Greening Business Education: Teaching the Paradigm," submitted to the Journal of Management Education and this summer’s Academy of Management Conference in Vancouver.

Victoria Seitz (Marketing) published “Corporate Etiquette in Marketing Curriculum” in the proceedings of the 16th Annual American Marketing Association International Collegiate Conference.

Mary Smith (Marketing) has several accomplishments to her credit, not the least of which is her selection as this year's Outstanding Professor at the university. This distinction recognizes her teaching, research and university service activities that are exemplified by some of her latest accomplishments. Currently her graduate advertising management class is competing with other AACSB schools in California to design the best, most creative advertising campaign for marketing Hyundai Motor America's newest automobile, the Accent, to college students in California. In addition, her graduate marketing class designed the alumni survey and bookmark that appears in this issue. Credit for the bookmark concept goes to student David Enriquez. Some of her professional development activities include a co-authored article, "Measuring Involvement: An Examination of Grocery Shopping Involvement," which was published in Retailing: Theories and Practices. Another collaboration, "The Differential Effects of Cues and Types of Information on Marketing Students’ Retention and Exam Performance," appears in the American Marketing Association 1994 Educators’ Proceedings. And another paper, "TQM in the Health Care Environment," which she co-authored with Jay Varzandeh (Information and Decision Sciences) and another colleague, appears in the proceedings of the Decision Sciences Institute Southwest Region.
Colleagues Lynne Diaz-Rico and Ruth Sandlin (Elementary/Bilingual) are immersed in helping first-year teachers in San Bernardino-Riverside counties hone their on-the-job skills and confidence. The Inland Empire Beginning Teacher Support and Assessment Program is funded by more than $600,000 from the state, matched with contributions from 17 participating area school districts.

Phyllis Fernlund (Secondary/Vocational) succeeds departing Dean Jean Ramage at the helm of the school. She will serve as an acting dean and is succeeded as chair of her department by Alvin Wolf, who will carry the title of acting chair.

Cheryl Fischer (Advanced Studies) is the co-author of a new text, Authentic Assessment: A Guide to Implementation.

Louise Fulton (Advanced Studies) co-presented a session on the “Diagnosis and Treatment of Autism in Young Children” at the Regional Early Childhood Education Conference in Palm Springs last fall.

Building upon her travel and study of the Laotian cultures last year, Rosalie Giacchino-Baker (Secondary/Vocational) has been a presenter within the past four months at seven professional conferences. Her work to understand the Hmong, Lao, Mien, Lahu and Khammu cultures is reflected in her talks, such as “Meeting the Needs of Laotian Refugees in American Schools” and “Breaking the Language Barrier: Making Lessons Comprehensible for Limited English Proficient Students,” among others.

Sherry Howie (Secondary/Vocational Education) recently completed the data gathering for a study of middle-grades teachers’ usage of and concern about technology in education. Her San Bernardino County school research will be compared with a similar study she conducted during her Fulbright fellowship in Taiwan last year. She is collaborating via e-mail with a Taiwanese colleague to write the results. In addition, her winter quarter English methods class introduced student teachers and interns to technology and linked them via e-mail with teachers in Germany and Taiwan for a multicultural exchange. They learned how to enhance the teaching of secondary grade English with technology.

By the end of this year faculty involved in infusing the first-grade reading intervention program, Reading Recovery, into California’s classrooms expect nearly 20,000 children to have been exposed to this technique. They include Becky Shook, Stan Swartz and Adria Klein who work with nearly two dozen professionals at CSUSB alone to promulgate the method throughout California.

A FAIR FOR ALL SEASONS
The Environmental Expo (pictured) attracts thousands to campus annually to review the latest in environmental education. The fair, held this year April 22 (see Calendar), is the brainchild of Darleen Stoner (Advanced Studies/Environmental Education), who now is the chair of the Global Network of Environmental Education Centers. Her book, Taking Action!: An Educator’s Guide to Involving Students in Environmental Action Projects, will be published this spring.
Jill Buroker (Philosophy) presented her paper, “Arnauld on Judgment and the Will” at a fall conference on Autoine Arnauld, a 17th Century French philosopher and theologian.

Bertram Fairchild (English) is a judge for the Claremont Poetry Prize, the second-largest monetary award in the country.

Sandra Kamusikiri and Ed White (English) are co-editors of a book on crosscultural considerations in writing that will be published next year by the Modern Languages Association press.

Dominique Louisor (Foreign Languages) presented her paper, “Jorge Luis Borges and Translation,” to the Sixth Biennial Northeast Regional Meeting of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese.

George McGinnis (Art) was honored several times by the Inland Empire Ad Club, which bestowed awards for his book cover design and art direction on covers for Plague in Siena, Three Flute Notes, and Kafka, all published by Ariadne Press. His art direction of the books Try Your Luck and The Cassowary for the same publisher also was recognized as was his design of Cal State’s poster for the 24th annual student art show. The annual awards show typically selects from among 500 entries in a variety of categories.

“Manager Gender, Strategy Choice, and Satisfaction with Alternative Approaches for Dealing with Difficult Subordinates” is the topic of a paper Craig Monroe (Communication Studies) presented at the Western States Communication Association Convention.

“This is Only a Test,” the award-winning cable access series produced by Meryl Perelson (Communication Studies), has been released nationally on the 90s channel. Now in its second season, the show features experimental, documentary and activist video. It premiered in Philadelphia last fall. The project has been underwritten by Cal State and two grants from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts.

Dolores Tanno (Communication Studies) wrote the chapter, “Some Ethical Implications of the Ethnic ‘Text’ in Multicultural Communication Studies,” that will be published in the text, Communication Ethics in an Age of Diversity. She also co-authored with Fred Jandt (Communication Studies) the article, “Redefining the ‘Other’ in Multicultural Research” that appears in the Howard Journal of Communications.

Edward White (English) taught a graduate course on Assessment of Student Writing at the University of Arizona last fall. He has two books that will be published this year: Composition in the 21st Century: Crisis and Change and a third edition of his Assigning, Responding, Evaluating: A Writing Teacher’s Guide.
Susan Addington (Mathematics) and Yasha Karant (Information and Decision Sciences/School of Business and Public Administration) are creating a hands-on California Math Show with the help of Suzanne Alejandre, a mathematics teacher at Frisbie Middle School in Rialto. Designed to be a traveling exhibit, the Math Show will encompass the kind of intrigues generally found in science museums, such as the decorative arts of different cultures to illustrate the concept of symmetry. Funded by an Eisenhower grant from the California Postsecondary Commission, the project also will include hand-outs and classroom activities to reinforce the lessons conveyed.

Richard Botting (Computer Science) wrote the “Confessions of a Computing Chameleon” that appeared in IEEE Computer.

Klaus Brasc (Biology) is the co-author of the chapter, “Nuclear Remodeling in Response to Steroid Hormone Action,” for the International Review of Cytology.

Leo Connolly (Physics) has received $71,000 from the National Science Foundation to continue his summer science program in Ojai for talented high school students.

Jerry Frieschlag (Physical Education) wrote the chapter on “Violence in Sports” for the text, Sport Psychology: An Analysis of Athlete Behavior.

Thomas Timmreck (Health Science & Human Ecology) presented a paper on “Accommodating the Administrative Residency in Part-time Programs: Innovative Fits and Approaches” to the annual national conference of the Association of University Programs in Health Administration. He also wrote the article, “Creative Health Education and the Healthy Stuffed Animal/Muppet Adventure,” which appeared in the Journal of Health Education.

IT ALL ADDS UP

Encouraging Laurie Riggs to complete graduate work in mathematics and go on to work on a Ph.D. is Cal State’s Graduate Equity Fellowship that provided her a $1,635 scholarship this year. Riggs taught math for seven years at a private high school before deciding to pursue this opportunity, which is designed to aid women, studying math, science or computer science, as well as minorities and disabled students with postbaccalaureate work.
Robin Balthrope (History) presented a paper on “Potential Allies: Women of the Anti-Lynching Crusaders and the Universal Negro Improvement Association Against Lynching” to the Third Southern Conference on Women’s History.

Frances Berdan (Anthropology) was honored in December with the James R. Wiseman Book Award for her publication The Codex Mendoza, a chronicle of the life and times of the Aztec peoples. The award is one of the highest honors conferred by the Archaeological Institute of America. Her work on “Mexican Textiles” with a UCLA colleague was published in the journal of Research and Exploration.

Robert Blackey (History) has two chapters, “Henry VIII: English King & Renaissance Prince” and “James I: King of England & Scotland,” in the text, Historic World Leaders.

Diane Halpern (Psychology) will be spending August in northern Italy working with a Muscovite colleague, Alexander Voiskounsky, on the beginnings of “a book on East-West views on continuing issues in psychology,” she says. Her collaboration with the acting head of psychology for Moscow State University is an outgrowth of her one-year Fulbright fellowship there in 1993-94. Recently she finished the third edition of her book on critical thinking.

Marilyn McShane (Criminal Justice) presented a paper, “Mentoring with Incarcerated Youth: An Implementation Evaluation,” which she co-authored with a graduate student, to the annual meeting of the Western and Pacific Criminal Justice Association. She also co-authored the article, “Community Corrections Advisory Boards and Commissions: Decision Makers or Decoration,” with alumnus Wesley Krause ’90 for Public Administration Quarterly. Her work with colleagues Frank Williams and Dale Sechrest (Criminal Justice), “Barriers to Effective Performance Review: The Seduction of Raw Data,” appears in Public Administration Review.

Jim Pierson (Anthropology) published “Three Views of (and Ways of Viewing) Australian Aboriginal Cultures” in Reviews in Anthropology.

David Shichor (Criminal Justice) co-authored a paper, “Victimization of the Rich: Telescam Investment Fraud,” and presented it at the 8th World Symposium of Victimology.

Geraldine Stahly’s (Psychology) expertise as a social scientist, who specializes in research on spousal abuse, has put her in the middle of the defense proceedings for O.J. Simpson. A long-time associate of Simpson’s lawyer, Johnnie Cochran—dating back to her days as a women’s shelter coordinator—Stahly was retained in August to teach the defense lawyers about victim dynamics and partner abuse. She also conducted psychological tests on Simpson in jail, working with one of the nation’s pioneering authorities on the battered woman syndrome, Lenore Walker.

Athletics Fund-Raiser Joins Staff

Curt Apsey

A new position of athletic development director, made possible by increases in student fees approved in a referendum last year, has been filled by Curt Apsey, former assistant director of athletic development at Cal State, Bakersfield.

With two years of experience in fundraising for athletics at Bakersfield plus six years of service as men's assistant soccer coach for Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, Apsey joins CSUSB at an ideal time.

"As the Coyote sports teams compete in some of the new facilities, including Coussoulis Arena next season, the opportunities for the community to get behind Cal State's athletics program will expand," notes Judith Rymer, vice president (University Relations). "Curt will be a major player in helping us syn­ergize that support and build our program to its potential."

Apsey will oversee corporate and foundation relations, alumni relations and annual giving for athletic scholarships.

Simpson Named Athletic Director

Nancy Simpson succeeds David Suenram as athletic director April 3. She is the first woman to hold the position at Cal State.

Serving as acting athletic director since January, Simpson has a variety of administrative experience at Cal State and UCR. In addition to the title of assistant and associate athletic director at Cal State, she has served as senior women's administrator for three years. At UCR she was senior associate athletic director.

Coyote Athletic Association Membership Campaign Begins

The Coyote Athletic Association (CAA) will hold its annual membership campaign between April 12 and May 24 this year.

The primary mission of the CAA is to generate financial support and interest for student-athlete scholarships allowing CSUSB programs to compete with all successful programs across the nation. Those interested in volunteering during the campaign should contact Curt Apsey in the Athletic Development office at 880-5049.

"Come join our team today and be a part of our climb to the top," remarks Apsey.

STUDENT RETENTION EFFORT MARSHALS SUPPORT
BANKS BEGIN TO MATCH CHALLENGE GRANT

Bank of America's $50,000
Matching Gift Challenge Grant to Cal
State has sparked early interest from other financial institutions. A total of $16,000 has been committed by five area financial institutions, including
Chino Valley, Inland Community,
First Interstate, Life Savings and Riverside National banks. The effort will launch a new program in the university's School of Business and Public Administration to recruit and retain minority business students.

Bank of America will match every dollar raised until the $50,000 goal is reached. The funds will underwrite minority student scholarships and initiate a broad-based university outreach program in the Inland Empire.

MUSEUM NOW NEEDS ONLY $20,000

DUTTON GALLERY ESTABLISHED

The conclusion of the private fundraising effort for the Robert V. Fullerton Art Museum is in the offing thanks, in part, to the generosity of Ted Dutton and his wife, Jo, whose pledge of $60,000 was the largest campaign contribution in recent months. The Duttons' gift propelled the university toward meeting its $760,000 goal for the 4,000-square-foot visual arts museum and leaves the campus in need of approximately $20,000 to conclude the campaign. In honor of this gift, the main gallery in the museum will be named the Dutton Gallery.

Other recent gifts include $5,000 from William and Linda Tiger, and $2,000 pledges each from Rosemary Binney '69, in memory of Nona Tilden and Edna Lyon, Randy and Jolynn Harrell, Dr. Kenneth M. and Connie Espinoza Johns, Karen Gail Nelson '74, and Lois Lauer. The university's new vice president for student services, Dr. Frank Rincon and his wife, Diane, and retired vice president emeritus Dr. Joseph Thomas and his wife, Verla '81, both have made a similar commitment to the project.

While the conclusion of the capital campaign is within reach, university officials and volunteers welcome funding for an endowment for the museum, notes President Anthony H. Evans.

SNEAKING A PEEK AT COUSSOULIS ARENA

EXCLUSIVE—Members of the Coyote Sports Complex Campaign Cabinet, athletic boosters, alumni and special university guests sneak a peek at Coussoufis Arena as it gets its finishing touches. The "nicest indoor sports facility this side of The Pond in Anaheim," according to the Sun sports editor, Cal State's new 5,000-seat arena will be a spectacular venue for Coyote basketball, concerts, trade shows, major speaking engagements, and other sports and special events. Grand-opening festivities are planned for fall.

FORECAST HOMES PRESIDENT JOINS U.A.B.

James Previti, president of Forecast Homes in Rancho Cucamonga, is the newest member of the University Advisory Board. Previti launched Forecast Group in 1971. Currently he directs all operations of the corporation and serves as chairman of Rancho Mortgage & Investment Corp., Inland Southern Services Co., and director of Civic Plaza Escrow. Forecast's business currently approaches $1 billion in residential, office buildings, strip shopping centers, mini-storage and warehouse construction. Previti becomes the 27th member of the advisory board for which members serve four-year terms.

GET YOUR AD IN FRONT OF 30,000 EDUCATED READERS THREE TIMES A YEAR. CALL CAL STATE MAGAZINE AT (909) 880-5006
Dear Alumni,

The sum is the whole of its parts. Each of us is the sum of our parts. One large part that made us who we are today was our exposure to the largest educational system in California—the campuses of the California State University system. For some of you, CSUSB was a point of departure into adult life and the working world, for others it was a step toward higher education and increased opportunities, for others still it was the completion of a lifelong dream of personal accomplishment. For whatever reason, you came, you succeeded. You will always have a lifelong relationship with the university; you were part of it and it is part of you. To borrow from a 1960 speech by Henry T. Herald, then president of the Ford Foundation, you are “keepers of the tradition, preferred stockholders of the enterprise, the mark of its accomplishments.”

I extend to you the invitation to join us in helping others succeed and at the same time “adding to ourselves” through community involvement. Community consists of members actively contributing their efforts for the benefit of all. As a way of giving back, of helping others as you were helped (or would have liked to have been helped), I ask that you join our Association, join our activities, join our board of directors, join our committees, or ask how you can help us at special events and activities. The success and value of a university can, in part, be measured by the contributions made to society by its alumni. By sharing in Alumni Association activities, individuals help shape the university’s future, help ensure that CSUSB is meeting the needs of the Inland Empire, and help deepen the university’s roots in the community.

The destiny of the university and the destiny of its alumni are forever intertwined. Continued involvement of alumni helps ensure that quality educational opportunities exist for future generations to come. So keep adding to the sum of your parts. Expand the whole person by giving back a portion of your time and energy. We truly want and need your support!

Contact the Alumni Affairs office on campus at (909) 880-5008 and ask how you can help. We look forward to your future participation.

Sincerely,

Terry E. May

ALUMN I DIRECTORY
SOON TO BE RELEASED

Soon you will find that locating fellow alumni will be as easy as turning a page with the CSUSB Alumni Directory. You may reserve your personal copy when your Harris representative phones, but do not delay because only prepublication orders received at that time will be guaranteed.

On June 17, Commencement Day, representatives of the Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc., will start phoning alumni for the verification phase of the CSUSB directory. If you have any questions, or did not receive information in the mail from Harris requesting your cooperation, please call the Alumni Affairs Office, (909) 880-5008.

ALUMNI AUTHORS FETED IN LIBRARY

Are you a part of the Alumni Authors’ collection? We are proud of our bibliography that includes the names and publications of more than 35 alumni authors. Most of their published materials (including novels, poetry, articles, cartoons, musical compositions, self-help tapes) are available through restricted circulation. We’d like to include your published materials in that collection. Please send two copies (if available) of your publications to Mary Colacurcio, Director of Alumni & Donor Relations, CSUSB, 5500 University Pkwy., San Bernardino, CA 92407-2397. Call (909) 880-5008 for further information on acceptability of material.

SHARING GIFTS—Published alumnus Robert Rose (center) updates Cal State staff Judy Dymond of Theatre Arts and Mary Colacurcio, Alumni Affairs director, while Michael Burgess (far right) chats with Hollywood screenwriter and alumnus Paul DeMeo.

At an event sponsored by the Library Associates, several of our Alumni Authors returned to campus during the 1995 Homecoming festivities in February and participated in a panel discussion that highlighted their careers. The panel consisted of Sondra Heimark-Anderson, B.A. psychology/sociology ‘87, a certified hypnotherapist who began making private relaxation tapes for clients and is now distributing them commercially; Paul DeMeo, a 1978 graduate from Theatre Arts who has succeeded in the TV and film industry; Michael Reaves, B.A. English ’74, a prolific writer of science fiction novels, in addition to short stories, articles, computer games, comic books, teleplays and screenplays; and Linda Stockham, B.A. anthropology ’75, a CSUSB staff member who is also a published playwright. Because several professors brought their classes, the students had an opportunity to meet with the authors at the reception that followed.

FAX your facts to (909) 880-7017, c/o Mary Colacurcio, Director of Alumni & Donor Relations, CSUSB, 5500 University Pkwy., San Bernardino, CA 92407-2397. Or fill out the enclosed survey and send it in the envelope that is in the center of the magazine. Don’t just think about it. Do it! ☉
Dear Alumni,

In the last issue of the Cal State Magazine, I requested assistance in locating Sam Hlapaty '80. The response was overwhelming—five alumni, one of whom was Sam’s wife, called us with his address! Buoyed by that success, I’m requesting your help in locating a few alumni named COLLINS. Scattered through the years you will find their names. Call me at (909) 880-5008, if you know their whereabouts. A reward will follow!

Alumni Director

Alan G. Dyer, B.A. sociology, was reappointed to serve an additional four-year term as a board director on the Inland Empire West Resource Conservation District Board. He also serves on the West San Bernardino County Water District Board and is employed as an adult school supervisor/teacher for the San Bernardino and Rialto adult schools.

Dr. Yolanda T. Moses, B.A. sociology, became the eighth inductee into the San Bernardino Valley College Alumni Hall of Fame on Feb. 14, 1995. Moses, a member of SBVC’s Class of ’66, is a prominent anthropologist and became the tenth president of The City College of New York/CUNY in October 1994. She received the CSUSB’s Alumni Association Distinguished Alumni Award in 1988.

Robert Hodges, B.A. sociology, M.A. education ’75, is the new superintendent for the Redlands Unified School District.

1970

Thomas Fitzpatrick, B.A. history, has been appointed as the police chief at the new California State University opening in fall ’95 at Monterey Bay. He’s no stranger to the CSU system as he has coordinated law enforcement for all 20 campuses for the past four years. The new campus is located on the vacated military base in Monterey Bay.

Lynn Hritz, B.A. political science, is one of two alumni recently appointed to the Cal State, San Bernardino University Advisory Board. At the invitation of President Anthony H. Evans, Hritz is the co-owner of Dan’s Lawnmower Service and also serves as a councilwoman for the city of Rialto.

I.S. “Smiley” Paredes, B.A. administration, M.B.A. ’78, is the affirmative action manager at Montgomery Watson, whose motto is “serving the world’s environmental needs.”

Bob Botts, B.A. administration, is the second of two alumni recently appointed to the Cal State, San Bernardino University Advisory Board. (See Lynn Hritz, ’70.) Bob, the 1980 winner of the Alumni Association Distinguished Alumni Award, is the manager for the Office of Business Development in the city of San Bernardino’s Economic Development Agency.

Patricia J. Carthen, B.A. English, M.A. education ’75, was one of eight outstanding educators honored at the first Golden Apple Awards Dinner sponsored by the San Bernardino Mayor’s Education Round Table. (See also Maryellen Anderson ’85.) She is a guidance counselor at San Gorgonio High School. Three Cal State professors were also honored at this dinner.

In February ’95 Jonni Kincher, B.A. psychology, saw the release of her fourth book: “Psychology for Kids Two” (40 fun experiments to help you learn about other people), Free Spirit Publishing. Some of her earlier books are included in the Alumni Authors collection in the CSUSB library.

“One of Ten Who Made a Difference”—that’s Sharon Sedrowski, B.A. English! Sharon was one of 200 nominees who made the list of 10 San Bernardino County residents honored in the Christmas day edition of The Sun. In her fourth year as principal of Abraham Lincoln Elementary School, Sedrowski was nominated by Guenther Griebau who said that she has done so many things to help children. She is most proud of making Lincoln School a child-centered environment that involves the community.

Robert Woolery, B.A. psychology, spent the decade after graduation following his trade as a steamfitter welder before he realized that what he wanted to be when he grew up was a chiropractor. So he studied at both LACC in Whittier and Life West in Hayward, where he earned his Doctor of Chiropractic degree. While in school he “also met the love of his life,” Dorrin Rosenfeld, with whom he operates the Miracle Chiropractic office about three miles south of CSUSB.

Karen Nelson, B.A. art, is an interpretive specialist for the Oakland Museum in Oakland, CA. Upon a recent trip to CSUSB, she requested and received a guided tour of the new privately funded 4,000-square-foot Robert V. Fullerton Art Museum that is being built concurrently with the state-funded visual arts classroom complex. (If you are planning a trip to the campus and would like a tour, please call the Alumni Affairs office, (909) 880-5008.)

Robert Rose, M.A. education, one of our Alumni Authors, has created a beginning reading program called SIGHT, SOUND, TOUCH that will be ready for sale in early 1995. It utilizes all the modalities, has four tapes and games, and is accompanied by a 112-page workbook.

Donna Conant

Donna Conant, B.A. art, who also obtained secondary credentials in art, English and elementary education, is teaching English and art at Cajon High School. Having been involved in the community service of feeding the homeless for 15 years, she now involves her students and their parents in this work. They feed approximately 400 people three or four times each year in San Bernardino. She is also coordinating a district-wide effort called International Togetherness Day (IT Day), an attempt “to bridge the chasms that separate people from each other... and produce a program of singing, dancing, drama, rap, literature and art to display the multicultural talents of people of our city.” Her son, (Fred) Richard Jensen, B.A. philosophy ’94, working on his Ph.D. at U.C. Santa Barbara, is also a published writer. His first book, Wings of Steel, published in 1994, is about his world-record-breaking climb on El Capitan in 1982; it can be found in the Alumni Authors collection in the Pfla Library.

Susan Haugh, B.A. psychology, M.A. ’78, writes that the following alumni have joined her in her private practice as Marriage, Family, and Child Therapists: Lynda Snyder, M.S. psychology ’87, and Kimberly Helzer, B.A., psychology ’84, M.S. ’87, Bridget Tucker, M.S. psychology ’85, former staff member of the CSUSB Student Counseling Center has also joined this practice.

Linda L. Knowles, B.A. music, received an M.A. in counseling from the University of San Francisco. In addition to teaching second grade in Contra Costa County, she does grief support counseling at Mt. Diablo Hospital.

Dell Richards, B.A. English, having started a public relations firm that specializes in authors, is being featured in the recently published book "Success Secrets of Sacramento’s Business Professionals." A published author herself, Dell is one of more than 35 alumni authors whose books can be found on the shelves of the CSUSB library.

Juan N. Ramirez, B.A. sociology, recently retired as a probation officer in San Bernardino after 34 years of dedicated and conscientious service attempting to make a better and safer community. In 1988 he was selected as the "Probation Officer of the Year." He also received two commendations—in 1974 for involvement in implementing an employees’ recognition program, and for a personal rescue in 1983, using the Heimlich maneuver.

Dr. Marilyn R. Rogers, B.A. child development, M.A. education ’84, received her doctorate in education (early and middle childhood studies) at Nova Southeastern University in Ft. Lauderdale, FL.

Gary Sullivan, B.A. psychology, is teaching math and science at Cabrillo Middle School in Ventura. His wife, Karen Wilkinson Sullivan, B.A. psychology, is a claims manager at the Oxnard District Office of the State Compensation Insurance Fund.

1978
Charles (Chuck) Bird, M.B.A., retired from the U.S. Navy and is a government account manager for Picker International, a large radiology equipment manufacturer and distributor. But, he writes, “more importantly, Chuck is now a grandfather.” He lives in Frederick, MD.

Kathryn Guerin, dual major, M.A. education ’84, is a resource specialist at Pacific High School in San Bernardino.

Robert J. Redden, B.A. administration, is an accountant at the San Bernardino Community Hospital.

Adrian Sanchez, B.A. economics, is vice president and regional economist for First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles. One of three featured speakers at the annual CSUSB Economic Forecast Breakfast, his responsibilities with First Interstate primarily involve the analysis and economic forecasting of California and its major metropolitan areas. He was chosen in 1994 as one of 25 young outstanding business leaders in San Bernardino County by the San Bernardino Sun newspaper.

1980
Russ Russell, B.A. liberal studies, captain of the Cherry Valley Fire Station, was chosen as the Honored Citizen for the 1994 Beaumont-Cherry Valley Cherry Festival. Fighting fires is his profession, but his avocation is making his community a better place to live.

Captain Kelly McPeters, B.A. sociology, is currently assigned in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, as the Director of Operations and Deputy Commander for Aeromedical Evacuation in Southwest Asia. This is his second tour in the Persian Gulf.

Harold (Phil) Myers, M.A. national security studies, retired from the U.S. Air Force in October '91 after 22 years of distinguished service. He is now the Eighth Air Force Historian at Barksdale AFB, LA, and will research and write histories of headquarters activities and strategic programs. He also served as combat historian for F-117A Stealth operations in the Gulf War (Desert Shield/Desert Storm).

Faye Nieto, M.A. psychology, writes that she is “loving life in Alaska! I am now a licensed marriage and family therapist. I have a counseling center called Alternatives.”

Dr. Annette Annechild, M.S. psychology, the author of “Your Man and His Mother,” received her Ph.D. in counseling psychology from Kent State University and is now in private practice in Georgetown, VA. She is now working on her ninth book, “The Annechild Report on Women’s Relationships” for Random House.

Gerald Duncan, B.A. administration, member of the Alumni Association Board of Directors, played with the Rockford Lightning in the Continental Basketball Association (CBA) this winter. While at Cal State in the late ’80s, Gerald played point and shooting guard at Cal State, averaging 23 points-per-game in his senior year; he earned an All-District player award and an All-American honorable mention, too.

Val Limar Jansen, B.A. theatre arts, a Ph.D. candidate in theatre arts at U.C. Santa Barbara, was the recipient of the Outstanding Teaching Assistant Award of 1993-94 in the Humanities and Fine Arts given by the Academic Senate. Readers may remember her as the star of "Ethel," a one-person show at CSUSB about the legendary African-American entertainer Ethel Waters that she co-wrote with Professor Bill Slout. In addition to being a teaching assistant for a large Theatre Appreciation class last year, she was simultaneously playing the lead role in a production of Alice Childress’ "Trouble in Mind," for which she won an Independent Award as one of the best performances in Santa Barbara theatre.

Let the Good Tunes Roll

What’s summer and the open-air without music and a lazy picnic on the grass? Make Cal State your backyard July 12-August 30 as the university presents the Eleventh Annual Summer Entertainment Series. Every Wednesday at 7 p.m. the sounds of swing or blues or oldies-but-goodies and more will roll through the Lower Commons Plaza. Bring the family and friends and enjoy an evening under the stars.
THE COLOR OF YARN—Crafted in Guadalajara and Tepic by local artists, this woolen yarn painting is one of 55 donated last fall by Cal State professor Joel Stein to CSUSB’s permanent collection.
