COUSSOULIS ARENA Creates ADVANTAGES FOR COYOTE ATHLETICS

Heralding a new era in Coyote athletics, the university’s entrance into NCAA Division II and the construction of a new Health and Physical Education complex are giving the athletics program one-of-a-kind opportunities for growth. During the next few years, the program’s progress will determine its nature well into the next century.

Moving into the California Collegiate Athletic Association and NCAA Division II last year was the first critical step. The CCAA, known as the “conference of champions” because of the many national championships won by its members, provides an ideal arena for the Coyote teams to develop top-notch NCAA Division II programs. As the “new kid on the block,” Cal State will work hard to develop teams that can challenge traditional conference powers such as Cal State, Bakersfield and UC Riverside.

A conference championship in men’s soccer and a successful season in men’s basketball, including an upset win over nationally ranked UC Riverside in the season finale, marked the Coyotes’ first season in NCAA Division II. There were many other individual and team successes during the ’91-’92 year and all helped to establish the Coyotes’ credentials at the new level of competition. Joining the CCAA has set the stage for strong rivalries with UC Riverside, Cal Poly Pomona and others, and can only increase local commitment to Coyote athletics.

Now that the university is about to break ground on a $25 million Health and Physical Education complex this spring, Coyote athletics is poised for the next phase of its maturation. Included in the project are the 5,000-seat Coussoulis Arena, a track-and-field facility, 10 new tennis courts, a baseball field, swimming pool and outstanding support areas. The new facility will have the largest seating capacity of any indoor arena in the Inland Empire. This will put Cal State, San Bernardino in a position to host regional and national competitions, as well as invitational or post-season events involving area high schools or community colleges.

Moreover, Coyote sports, for the first time, will have outstanding playing, practice and support facilities. Recruiting will be enhanced, and sports camps and clinics for area youth will be conducted in an environment that matches the high caliber instruction offered by Cal State coaches. Student-athletes, fans, and, ultimately, the university will all benefit.

It would be short-sighted if we failed to develop these new facilities for maximum use, both for the present and into the next century. To be utilized fully and enjoyed by their users, many of our facilities will require enhanced funding that can come only from private sources. This was true for the arena and it was alumnus Nick Coussoulis who stepped forward with the added financing needed to build it.

The enhancement of these facilities is an ideal means of investing in the future of Cal State, San Bernardino and the Inland Empire. We invite you to become a partner in this endeavor as we prepare outstanding facilities that can make a significant contribution to the lives of thousands in this region.

Inspired by the motion picture “Field of Dreams,” we believe that “If you build it, they will come.”

Construction crews continue to make progress on Jack H. Brown Hall, the new Student Union and the expansion of the library. Here’s the current timeline for these and other projects:

Brown Hall is expected to be completed by mid-fall of 1993. Most of the exterior paneling, frame and window work was completed a few weeks ago.

The Student Union addition, with a large multipurpose room and expanded recreation areas, will near completion before the school year ends in June.

The comprehensive addition to the library will reach a mid-way point this spring, with completion anticipated in May 1994. A topping-off ceremony, signaling the completion of the framing, will be held later this year.

A contractor was expected to be selected in December for the Health and Physical Education complex project, which was released for bid a second time following some changes in the building’s specifications. If an award can be made based upon the project’s budget early in January, a groundbreaking ceremony is likely in February.

A new information resources and technology division is being created at Cal State, San Bernardino to better coordinate current operations, announces President Anthony H. Evans.

Dr. William Aguilar, university librarian, is being appointed to head the unit, which will include the university library, computer services, audio-visual and telecommunications. Although he will continue to oversee the Pfau Library, Aguilar’s new title is vice president for information resources and technology.

The campus is invigorating its grant-writing pace and the results are clear. Approximately $4.5 million in awards were received during 1991-92, which compares with some $900,000 in grants bestowed to the campus just two years ago, notes Vice President Dennis Hefner (Academic Affairs).

The campus’s 1992-93 budget of $60,852,267 represents a five percent cutback overall, when state general funds and other revenues and reimbursements are taken into account, reports Don McKenzie (Budget).

“We did not hurt as much as other universities” in the CSU system because we decided to maintain enrollment current with last year’s level, he adds.

The university now is serving more than 1,000 full-time equivalent (FTE) students beyond the state general funds allocated by the CSU system. Funded for 8,262 FTE, the campus enrolled 9,352 FTE this fall. The total student population, or headcount, is 12,493.

The 40 percent increase in student fees was used to fund additional class sections for students and other critical needs, McKenzie notes. “We anticipate additional revenue corresponding to enrollment over and above the budgeted FTE,” he concludes.

San Bernardino attorney Bruce Varner is the chair of Cal State’s University Advisory Board for 1992-93. A member of the panel since 1987, Varner succeeds Elise Traynum of Best, Best & Krieger in Riverside in the leadership post.

Now in his second four-year term, which will expire in 1995, Varner will oversee the 21-member board, which provides a community perspective on a broad range of issues affecting the operation and future development of Cal State.

“We are honored that Mr. Varner has agreed to assume this leadership role at a time when public-private partnerships are so critical to the future development of Cal State,” remarks President Anthony Evans. “His long association with the university and his stature in the community make him ideally suited to lead the Advisory Board.”

The university’s area code changed from 714 to 909 effective Nov. 14, 1992.
Naomi Caiden (Public Administration) is the only person to be honored twice by the American Association for Budget and Program Analysis. Receiving a distinguished service award, Caiden acknowledges that she also has received support from the university for her work as the editor of Public Budgeting and Finance, a publication for scholars and practitioners in public administration. Her work in public budgeting over the past 20 years has led her, most recently, to give expert testimony at state legislative committee meetings on the implications of Proposition 165, the budget reform initiative that was on the November ballot.

The “Application of Financial Techniques in Taiwan” was the subject of research by Foad Derakhshan (Management), who presented the results at a conference in Kuala Lumpur.

The benefits of belonging to a computer users group were revealed in a study done by Arthur Saltzman (Marketing), who found that such groups typically have influence on the software and hardware buying patterns at their workplaces.

The creative talents of George McGinnis and Richard Johnston (Art) have been honored with four awards for excellence by the Inland Empire Ad Club for the catalog and printed promotions on the Egyptian art show last January.

Winifred Scott, a single mother of twins, age 2, is one of 40 nationwide recipients of a competitive scholarship from the American Accounting Association. Rarely granted to students attending state universities, the $2,500 Arthur H. Carter scholarship is the first such award to this campus, notes Dr. Eldon Lewis (Accounting and Finance). A licensed certified public accountant since 1990, Winifred currently is a full-time student at Cal State and a second-year recipient of the university’s Graduate Equity Fellowship award, in the amount of $1,700. She also has received a $1,000 Albro Scholarship for African-American students, a $2,000 National Black M.B.A. award and a CSU predoctoral scholarship in the amount of $3,000. A resident of San Bernardino, Winifred intends to seek a Ph.D.

Teachers throughout the state and, specifically, in the Fontana School District, will benefit from more than $1.5 million in National Science Foundation grants awarded to this campus for the purpose of improving science education. A statewide Science Teacher Development Project will be coordinated through CSUSB’s Institute for Science Education with the help of $850,000 in funding attained by Lou Fernandez (Natural Sciences), Bonnie Brunkhorst (Geological Sciences/Secondary and Vocational Education) and Herbert Brunkhorst (Biology/Secondary and Vocational Education).

The second grant, for $797,000, is targeted at Fontana schools and will help foster “uniformity in the quality and type of science education in the schools,” says Klaus Braseh (Biology). Research suggests that elementary school teachers nationwide are poorly equipped to teach science and “may be especially ill-prepared to teach science to Hispanics and other minority students.” Iris Riggs and Esteban Diaz (Elementary and Bilingual Education) also contributed to the grant project.

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL AND BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES

Knowledge of ancient Aztec civilizations has been expanded greatly by a comprehensive, four-volume set of texts published after 12 years of research by Fran Berdan (Anthropology) and a colleague at UCLA. The 23-pound set of oversized volumes features a pictorial manuscript drawn by Aztec scribes about 20 years after the Spanish conquest in 1521. “The Spaniards wanted to know what they had in their empire,” Berdan explains, so they had the Indians’ illustrations labeled in Spanish. In addition to being a complete reproduction of the original Codex Mendoza, the volumes contain reprints of the Spanish passages with simultaneous English translation, descriptions of the Aztec provinces and rulers, and offer an analysis compared to other documents on Aztec civilization.

Evaluating the prospects for Third World development by comparing India and Mexico, Brij Khare (Political Science) published his study through the Institute for Afro-American Scholarship.

The costs and benefits of retiring cropland to meet water quality goals was evaluated by Kazim Konyar (Economics) and two colleagues. The research, presented to the American Agricultural Economics Association, earned Konyar a certificate of merit from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Archaeological work in Uganda occupies the interest of Peter Robertshaw (Anthropology), who is conducting radiocarbon dating of a site in Munsu, Uganda with the help of a British Institute in East Africa grant.

The effectiveness of three drug treatment programs in the San Bernardino-Riverside county area has been examined by Dale Sechrest (Criminal Justice) in a report to the state Department of Corrections. Recommendations include developing better ways to collect and evaluate data, and the crucial need for strong follow-up programs. These elements, says Sechrest, are essential if treatment success rates are to rise.

Shedding light on the dynamics of domestic violence was the goal of a training session that Geraldine Stahly (Psychology) provided for the California District Attorneys Association last spring.
Soccer Season Ends with Conference Honors

The men's soccer team ended its season with a disappointing 6-11-1 record. But there were some bright spots as Robert Pedace was placed on the CCAA First Team, while teammates Rolando Uribe and Tony Rossi made the CCAA Second Team. Frank Felix received an Honorable Mention for his play.

The women's soccer team fared much better, finishing its season with an impressive 12-6-1 record, including a shut-out in the last game. The Coyotes saw Jackie Powers make it to the CCAA First Team, highlighted by her winning the CCAA Scoring Champion honors. Kelli Brew joins Powers on the First Team. The CCAA Second Team is heavily populated by Coyote players, including Brandi Singleton, Alicia Scott, Merinda Tenace, Pam Davenport and Rosanne Dominguez. Becky Peterson received Honorable Mention.

Scholarship Honors Veteran Coach, Ollie Butler

Ollie Butler's name is synonymous with basketball to High Desert residents who watched him lead the Victor Valley Jackrabbits through 28 seasons, accumulating a 512-205 record during his tenure.

Now an assistant coach for the Coyotes' men's basketball team, Butler is lending his name to an athletic scholarship at Cal State that benefits Victorville native and sophomore guard, Carlton Hyder, for this initial year of the award. The honor has added poignance for Hyder because he played for Butler while attending high school.

"This scholarship is established not only to honor the accomplishments of Ollie on the court, but also to recognize his lifetime achievements as an educator and motivator of young minds," says David Suenram, athletic director.

Coyotes Acquire Restaurant Sponsorship

Chili's Grill and Bar on Hospitality Lane is the inaugural member of a new support program for the CSUSB Athletic Department. Chili's "in-kind" sponsorship will allow the Coyotes to have visiting teams and have team meals before games. In exchange for their support, Chili's will receive promotional consideration at various Coyote home games as well as advertisement in Coyote publications.

Additional restaurants are being sought by the Athletic Department to join the list of "Official Restaurants of the Coyotes."

Athletes Honored Off the Playing Field

Greg Wilson and Robert Pedace are winners of the 1991-92 CCAA Conference Academic Award for excellence in sports as well as in the classroom.

Wilson, a junior majoring in accounting and member of the Coyote golf team, hopes to become an All-American and continue on with his golf career, picking up his CPA certification along the way. With his 3.43 GPA, he is well on the way to achieving his goals. Soccer star Pedace is a senior economics major. He is a member of the National Honor Society in Academics and plans to pursue his Ph.D., eventually becoming a professor. With a GPA of 3.48, this should not pose a problem for the 22-year-old.

The Feb. 6 Homecoming contest between the men's basketball team and Cal State, Dominguez Hills is preceded by a chili dinner, sponsored by the Alumni Association. Why not make it an evening out at Cal State and start with the dinner, which comes in three flavors—vegetarian, mild American, and zippy South American? Dinner starts at 5:30 p.m. in the Upper Commons. Tickets, which include admission to the basketball game, are $10 for adults and $5 for children. For information call (909) 880-5008.

1992 Coyote Golf Classic Scores an Eagle for Athletics

This year's October Coyote Golf Classic doubled the amount of money raised for scholarships over last year's tournament. Nearly $10,000 was raised during the two-day event.

More than 100 "friends of the Coyotes" attended a celebrity dinner show and auction on the Thursday evening preceding the tournament. The next morning 114 golfers took part in the "best ball" competition held at Shandin Hills Golf Club.

NEC and GTE led the list of companies that supported the event with sponsorship contributions.

Next year's tournament is scheduled for Oct. 9.
WHERE THERE’S A WILL THERE’S A WAY

by Mary Colacurcio
Director of Alumni Affairs and the Annual Fund

Jim Kennedy has ensured the creation of his own legacy.

The president of the Cal State Alumni Association since 1989, Kennedy (B.A. ’72, M.B.A. ’77) has named CSUSB in his will and says, “This is a good time and a good way to give something back.”

Kennedy, who is a managing partner of the San Bernardino CPA firm Kennedy & Kennedy, has served on the Alumni Association Board of Directors since 1982. He has been instrumental in organizing Alumni Association members to raise more than $14,000 for the Student Emergency Loan Fund.

“Giving our time is very important,” Kennedy says, “but it’s not enough. We must also give from our treasure. The amount doesn’t matter—the giving is what matters.”

Kennedy is part of a family tradition of generosity and loyalty to the university that has educated several family members. His father, John Kennedy, Sr. (B.A. ’79 and ’85), brother, Donald (M.B.A. ’85), and nephews, Steven (B.A. ’85) and Jeffrey (B.A. ’91), all have proven their devotion in many ways. John and June Kennedy have created the John Winn Kennedy Economics Scholarship that has been awarded every year since 1986 to a deserving student of economics. John Kennedy, Jr., a San Bernardino Superior Court judge, and David Kennedy, a CPA and treasurer of the City of San Bernardino, also contribute to this scholarship.

Kennedy continues, “This is a difficult time for me to make a significant direct gift, but I can accomplish my goal by including the university in my will.” Because of Jim Kennedy’s gift in his will, he and his wife, Jeanne, will be recognized permanently in the university’s Legacy Society. The Society was created to recognize those making special deferred gifts to the university. The Legacy Society honors all who, by naming the CSUSB Foundation in a will, trust or insurance arrangement, will provide future enrichment for Cal State’s programs.

You, too, can create your legacy at Cal State by including California State University, San Bernardino in your will. By doing so you will ensure that your annual support and legacy will continue in perpetuity. If you already have made these arrangements, please call the Director of Major Gifts, Stephen Christensen, at (909) 880-5006, to be formally recognized in the Legacy Society. Such gifts are common ways for alumni to pay tribute to their alma mater. There are three ways to make gifts that include the university through your will:

1) Percentage:
“I give, devise and bequeath to California State University, San Bernardino Foundation, located in San Bernardino, California, _____% of the residue of my estate to support the university.”

2) Dollar Amount:
“I give, devise and bequeath to California State University, San Bernardino Foundation, located in San Bernardino, California, the sum of $____ to support the university.”

3) Specific Property:
“I give, devise and bequeath to California State University, San Bernardino Foundation, located in San Bernardino, California, my interest in (describe the property and exact location)
to support the university.”

Your bequest can be unrestricted as to its use, or restricted for a specific capital or equipment purpose, for an endowment, or for program or scholarship support.
A LIFE IMMERSED IN ART

San Bernardino resident Jane Matthews has donated nearly 90 pieces of African art to the permanent collection of the university.

Although the African art she's donated to the university’s permanent collection hints at the many interests of one-time professional singer and stage actress Jane Matthews, they can’t begin to reveal the broad scope of her devotion to the arts throughout her colorful life.

Appearing in her youth under the stage name Jane Aldrich in East Coast productions, Matthews performed with theatrical groups and on radio. She toured nationally with the New York Civic Opera Company’s production of a Gounod opera and with the Ben Yost singers in “The White Plume,” a Shubert musical.

Matthews was drawn to higher education in the early ’60s when she worked for the Committee for the Arts and Lectures at UC Berkeley. She then ventured into coordinating exhibitions and in 1965 assisted with a presentation of the Jordan Dead Sea Scrolls at Berkeley’s Lowie Museum.

Her interest in African art emerged in 1983 when she curated a debut exhibit in Sedona, AZ. It was a “baptism by fire,” she admits, because she had to research the subject of African art while assembling the show. Her efforts were rewarded with public accolades and, since then, she has curated similar displays for other venues in California.

Matthews has become a self-taught expert on African art, having twice traveled to Africa to learn more about its cultures. Her goal in giving the collection to Cal State is to create a culturally enriching experience for the Inland Empire. "I gave the collection to an educational institution because I feel students and the public can learn from it.”

In the '50s, when Bill Shott worked early TV, commercials and summer stock theatre, he believed the most glorious way to die was on an stage. He is since lost interest in acting, so with his retirement this past October, a 24-year career as a Cal State theatre professor, Shott will leave the desires for glorious ends to his students: Some of whom must have wondered if they would indeed ring down the curtain after taking one of his classes. Shott was hard, they'd hear him boasts, intimidating. But in class students also would hear him tell them things. If they met his work, chances were he'd see them smile. Or receive him an encouraging word. Maybe he was tough because he knew something. If students went to succeed in the theatre, their skin was as valuable as a technique: acting demanded duplicity. "Writing playswrights, particularly his playwrights, "Wearing Absence," a writing project, he continued the way to the Kennedy Center last year. For this piece, Shott doesn't credit his teaching. He's merely a fair teacher, he says. Yet he can spot talent, insight, what has made him a compelling influence behind the scenes, a guiding figure calling from the wings.
