OBSERVATIONS ON SILENT SPRING AND THE READING PROGRAM

The Reading Program test for the Winter Quarter is part of the unmourned past, and we've finally heard some discussion of the book selection, Silent Spring (the consensus was "obvious propaganda"), and of the Program itself.

Most of the discussions were either with older students or in groups where these were distinctly in the majority. This wasn't planned — it just happened. It helps to make a representative sample of the student body, though, because it appears the average CSCBS student has been eligible to vote for quite some time.

One point, on which there was at least tacit agreement (someone in a fairly large group said it and no one argued) is that the Reading Program was apparently conceived for the younger students, especially those who may never have read a book that wasn't required for some course. The Program may broaden such a person's horizons, but it won't change his voluntary reading status.

There was widespread agreement that discussion of the selection should not be of the panel type with the general student body as a passive audience. It should rather consist of small groups with a faculty or guest moderator who is an authority on the subject the book treats, with active participation by each student.

Our suggestion of last week received gratifying support, most people urging a choice of three titles in widely-varying fields. Tests would be keyed to the selections, of course. A further suggestion of reading more than one book for extra test credit was received less enthusiastically, though, since there's more than enough required reading already in the college's accelerated pace.

We're disturbed over the timing of the tests. Whoever scheduled them seems to have forgotten that many or most of us have responsibilities elsewhere in the afternoon and on Saturday morning. This is prime time for off-campus employment and for family responsibilities. There are a lot of housewives here, remember? If testing were really necessary, it should have been spread through Friday, with make-up testing on Monday or Tuesday, for students' convenience. It may make more work for the proctors, but we feel that these tests are an ideal application of the honor system anyway. Their only value is to see that the selection is read, not necessarily comprehended.

MORE OBSERVATIONS

The College Wide Reading Program is an out-and-out failure. A letter by Carmen Molina and a editorial by Editor Bill Runyan in consecutive issues of this paper diagnose the ills of the "Widespread Reading Parce" with amazing insight.

However, I wish to clarify Mr. Runyan's statement that one of the program's goals is to stimulate discussion and interest on campus. As the administration implied earlier this year, the only goal is to promote this intellectual exchange of ideas on the given book. Short of ordering students to feverishly carry on these discussions, the college fathers will never see us complying on a large scale. With three murderous courses, jobs, and committee work, there is simply no time!
The administration has made no significant move to make the needed changes or eliminate the ill-starred reading venture. Several teachers have voiced their misgivings before both students and closed-coor faculty meetings.

Despite the chronic disinterest of many, the administration has refused to admit the program is on the rocks. How long this mockery of a "College Wide Reading Program" is to continue is a question only the administration can answer. Let us hope we get that answer—and soon!

ANOTHER QUARTER HEARD FROM

Editor of the COMMUNIQUE:

I highly condone the movement to obtain a choice of what book to read, in connection with the student reading program. I would think that if a student could select a book suited to his major, if he so desires, that the program would be contributing more on the intellectual side than is being accomplished now.

James V. Mulloy

Editor's note: Response to our invitation last week for student opinion on the Reading Program was disappointing, since this letter was the only acceptance. But it is an indication that we were on the right track.

The Financial Aids Office, A-112, now is accepting applications for the Spring Term and for the 1966-67 academic year. Applications for the Spring Term should be completed by March 15. The necessary forms may be obtained at the Financial Aids Office.

For the 1966-67 academic year an expanded Financial Aids Program will be available to students at CSCSB. Emergency loans, repayable within 60 days, will be available to help students cope with unexpected, short-term needs. Assistance for substantial needs again will be offered through long-term loans under the National Defense Student Loan Program. Alternatively, a student may meet all or part of his expenses through employment under the College Work-Study Program. In addition, a limited number of scholarships will be available.

Two new programs were authorized under the Higher Education Act of 1965. The Educational Opportunity Grant Program will provide a student demonstrating exceptional financial need up to $800 in gift assistance. The Guaranteed Loan Program will enable students to obtain low-interest loans from their home-town bank or other lending agency.

For the coming year the Financial Aids Office will employ a unified application form. Students submitting this application will be considered for all available sources of assistance, singly or in combination. However, in order to be considered for an Educational Opportunity Grant or for a scholarship, application should be completed by April 1.

Applicants for the 1966-67 school year are required to file the College Scholarship Service Confidential Statement, so that the College Scholarship Service can provide CSCSB with the results in advance of the deadline for application. Interested students should obtain and complete the necessary forms at their earliest convenience.

Students presently receiving assistance under the College Work-Study Program, a National Defense Student Loan, or a scholarship must submit a new application for the coming year.

COLORS and MASCOT ELECTION SET

There will be an election Tuesday, April 5 for the student body to choose college colors and mascot. The selections will definitely be independent of each other.

The ASB Executive Cabinet has asked that the Election Committee post the election results as a vote tally. The Cabinet ruled that the definition of results merely implies a tally and that the original ASB election involved a misinterpretation of that implication on the Election Committee’s part.

Cabinet activity at its meeting last Thursday included the appointment of Konnie Zaharopolous as Executive Cabinet Publicity Agent.

The State College Chancellor’s office has finished consideration of the CSCSB Student Body fee. Its approval was necessary before the fee became official.

Names of student are now being submitted for the consideration of the Cabinet in appointments to committees.
