A Victory for our Cities

Last month we published a three-part series on the efforts of concerned citizens throughout the Inland Empire who were exhausted by the seemingly self-serving individuals they had elected into city leadership.

In San Bernardino, business and community leaders banned together and led a recall initiative, gaining enough momentum and signatures to place on the ballot a recall of several city council members as well as the city attorney. In Moreno Valley citizens are working to recall their city leaders as well.

This week both cities benefited from those efforts as citizens slowly regain control of their local government, replacing self-serving individuals, and punishing wrong doers.

I admit as I visited the polls in San Bernardino this past Tuesday, I was concerned. While I understand that the vast majority of voters submit their ballots in advance of the big day either via mail or making a trip to the registrar’s office, I like to gauge the level of voter interest by the energy at the polls. And what I saw this cycle was nothing like the last.

Last Election Day at the same polling place during the same time of day, there was a 45-minute wait. Yes, people lined up during their lunch hour, sample ballot in hand, and waited for their turn to perform their civic duty. This year, I walked in, all alone. Chatted with the poll workers. Asked them if there had been much activity that day. They couldn’t agree. I left a little concerned that voters were not pissed off enough to cast their vote.

However, when the ballots were counted, even though the turnout was poor, there was a resounding clarity to the message sent by those who voted. Longtime San Bernardino City Attorney Jim Penman, who was often credited as the catalyst for the city leadership’s dysfunction, was recalled and replaced. Robert Jenkins, who recently was arrested on felony charges, was replaced. And even though Wendy McCammack received the most votes in the mayor’s race and will be in a run-off against Carey Davis, her own ward constituents recalled and replaced her.

In Moreno Valley, the concerned citizens must have felt vindicated and encouraged in their ongoing attempt to take back their city, when the Riverside County District Attorney and US Attorney announced that former Moreno Valley Councilman Marcelo Co will be pleading guilty to what is believed to be the largest bribe accepted by a public official in an undercover operation. Co was caught accepting a cash payment of $2.36 million in a complex land deal. And he will admit to regularly trading votes, land, and confidential information in exchange for cash.

No doubt this will help fuel the recall effort as citizens continue to hold their elected city leaders accountable.

Last week I published a quote by Abraham Lincoln. He once said that elections belong to the people: “It’s their decision. If they decide to turn their back on the fire and burn their backs, then they will just have to sit on their blisters.” It’s refreshing to see that Inland citizens are not simply turning their backs on the fire and burning their backs. But instead they are turning up the fire on those individuals who believe their positions are for their own benefit and not for the people who elected them to serve.

Moreno Valley

In a case stemming from what is believed to be the largest bribe ever accepted by a public official in an undercover operation, a former member of the Moreno Valley City Council has agreed to plead guilty to a federal bribery charge for taking a $2.36 million cash payment from an undercover operative posing as a real estate broker.

Marcelo Co, 64, was charged this week with one bribery count and one count of filing a false corporate tax return. In court documents filed in United States District Court, Co agreed to plead guilty to the two charges that could send him to federal prison for as long as 13 years.

“Mr. Co orchestrated an elaborate and brazen scheme to undermine the democratic process in Moreno Valley,” said United States Attorney André Birotte Jr. “Whether he was motivated by power or greed, these crimes constitute a wholesale violation of his oath to work for the citizens who elected him.”

Co, who was elected to the City Council in November 2010 and resigned from his seat in August after being charged in state court in an unrelated welfare fraud case, is expected to make his initial court appearance in the federal bribery case early next month.

“It is a very sad day for the citizens of Moreno Valley when one of their elected council members sacrifices his legal and ethical obligations for power and greed,” said Riverside County District Attorney Paul Zellerbach. “This type of unlawful conduct by Mr. Co undermines the very fabric of good government and what we all hope and expect from our elected officials.”

The case against Co is the result of an ongoing investigation by the Inland Regional Corruption Task Force, which is comprised of prosecutors, agents and investigators from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, IRS – Criminal Investigation, the Riverside County District Attorney’s Office and the United States Attorney’s Office.

“Mr. Co regularly traded votes, land and confidential information in exchange for cash to fund his personal bank account, rather than what was in the best interest of the residents of Moreno Valley,” said Bill Lewis, the Assistant Director in Charge of the FBI’s Los Angeles Field Office. “This case was a result of seamless collaboration by the Inland Regional Corruption Task Force, whose members share a mission of rooting out corruption across the Inland Empire.”

The court documents filed this week outline a bribery scheme in which Co told a businessman and an undercover FBI operative posing as a real estate broker that he would control a voting majority of the Moreno Valley City Council and would be able to guarantee land use decisions that would benefit the businessman and the land broker. Co also promised to always vote in favor of land use decisions that would benefit the real estate broker.

Co solicited campaign donations from the businessman, who was cooperating with the investigation, and the FBI undercover operative. Co eventually received payments of $5,000 and $10,000 that he said were to be used to finance the campaigns of individuals who would vote with him on land use issues.

In the fall of 2012, Co met with the undercover operative to discuss a multimillion dollar sale of a 30-acre parcel that he owned. Co told the real estate broker that once he had control of the City Council, he could change the zoning of the property and the land value would dramatically increase. With the City Council election in November 2012, Co told the undercover investigator that he had the votes to alter the zoning and increase the value of Co’s 30-acre parcel, which had been appraised at $710,000. Co proposed that the undercover operative purchase the property for $5.36 million, which would include a cash payment of $2.36 million.

At a meeting on January 30, 2013, Co agreed to sell the property for $5.36 million, but that the publicly filed documents would reflect a sale price of only $3 million. At this meeting, Co accepted $2.36 million in cash.

At Co’s initial appearance in federal court, which is expected to be in early December, the case will be assigned to a District Judge who will schedule a hearing for Co to formally enter the guilty pleas.

Why Reputation Management is Important

By Davina Samuel, Union Bank, N.A.

At Union Bank we define reputation management as a solid, ongoing commitment to responsible banking. Ours is a culture of performing ethically at all times in decisions concerning customers, partners, employees and the communities where we conduct business.

This philosophy has proven successful for Union Bank, as customers ranked the company highest among the top 30 bank holding companies in the United States in a recent survey conducted by the Reputation Institute and American Banker Magazine. The results of the 4th Annual Survey of Bank Reputations appear in the July 2013 issue of the magazine. Union Bank received the highest cumulative score of any bank since the inception of the annual survey in 2010 on measures of trust, admiration and respect. The bank also finished in the top five in several key categories such as governance, performance, workplace, citizenship and leadership. The complete rankings of bank reputation scores and full coverage can be viewed online at www.unionbank.com/Images/ABM-ReputationReset.pdf.

“Banking at its heart is built on trust and reputation is built on earning it,” said Union Bank President and Chief Executive Officer Masashi Oka. “For this survey to recognize the trust we’ve established with customers and communities over our nearly 150-year history—particularly through our focused efforts this past year—is a huge honor for our bank and validates what we consider important.”

Banking at its heart is built on trust and reputation is built on earning it.

Our approach to responsible banking is built around five core tenants: 1.) responsible lending; 2.) sound financial management; 3.) support of community; 4.) diversity and inclusion; and 5.) responsible products and practices. These principles are fundamental to the way we conduct business everyday throughout our bank, and have been a part of our legacy for nearly 150 years.

“At Union Bank, we take pride in empowering our customers and our communities, including businesses, families and diverse communities,” said Union Bank Executive Vice President Julius Robinson, head of Corporate Social Responsibility. “Our 2012 CSR report illustrates a broad cross section of environmental, economic and social contributions that together represent Union Bank and the character of our business and employees.”

The report, the survey and other recent recognitions help to illustrate our commitment to responsible banking, a commitment that will continue as we embark on the next 150 years.

Richie Incognito and Jonathan Martin Incident

Richie Incognito, a veteran professional football player for the National Football League’s Miami Dolphins, used some harsh and threatening language toward Jonathan Martin, a rookie on the team that was so bad Martin quit. Some say it was hazing that every rookie goes through. A hazing ritual that evidently includes rookies taking the entire team out to dinner at a cost in the tens of thousands. I am sure they do other things like playing silly pranks on the new members of the team. However, the question now is did Incognito cross the line of hazing and did management know about what was going on and did nothing about it.

According to investigative reports, ESPN and other news outlets, this is not the first time Incognito has displayed behavior so bad it caused him to be suspended from a team dating back to his college days.

This time Incognito has been suspended from the Dolphins for an undetermined length of time and as for Martin he is out as well.

By now you are probably wondering what was said by Incognito to Martin that would cause Martin to walk away from a multi-million dollar career and lead to Incognito’s suspension.

“Hey wassup, you half N------- piece of s---. I saw you on twitter, you been training 10 weeks. I want to s--- in your f----ing mouth. I’m going to slap your f----ing mouth. I’m going to slap your real mother across the face, then he laughed; f--- you, you still a rookie. I’ll kill you.”

They said that this is only what they could or would release at this time but there is more to come.

Many are saying that management should have known and put a stop to this. While others are saying the players on the team should have told Incognito to back off and that his hazing had crossed the line of the locker room norm.

I am sure Incognito is one of those guys who would have said if females want to report on football then she must put up with what males say and do.

I recall that is what male employees said when Kaiser Hospital wanted to hire a female biotech engineer in the engineering department and the male department head said if a woman was hired she would have to put up with all sorts of bad language and pictures of nude women on the wall. The hospital administrator responded, “I did not know that is how your department behaved when I am not present.” He went on to say, “let me say this to you, she starts in two weeks and if you cannot clean up your department by then have your resignation on my desk.”

In my opinion these kinds of things happen in our society because people at the top set the tone for what kinds of behavior are acceptable.

I believe, it is more difficult for one who comes from the privileged side of town to regulate their tongue or behavior because they have never had to worry about the consequences of their actions.

I believe Incognito crossed the line and thus should not be allowed to play in the National Football League.
A Great Day In San Bernardino!

It was indeed a “Great Day in San Bernardino” Tuesday October 29 at the Grand Opening of the Dr. Mildred Dalton Henry Elementary School. The San Bernardino City Unified School District’s Facilities Management Department, and contracting construction companies, presented a first class, state-of-the-art facility to the community.

The young student scholars at Henry Elementary School were ecstatic as they participated in festivities to officially open their school. The ceremony took place on Mt. Vernon Avenue, the Historic Route 66, made famous by singer Nat King Cole. With much anticipation they watched representatives from national, state, county, and city governmental agencies present the numerous commendations to the new school and namesake honoree. The Arroyo Valley High School of performing arts band was splendid in uniform as it entertained the audience. The Dr. Mildred Dalton Henry Elementary School’s Logo of “The Trailblazers” was further exemplified through the Henry Scholar representatives, Gabriela Gutierrez and Gilberto Castro, who thrilled the crowd with their beautifully delivered welcome address.

The keynote speaker challenged the youth in song and verse. Dr. Henry opened the remarks with a presentation of “The Impossible Dream”, and closed singing “Climb Every Mountain”. The youth were reminded that they stand on the shoulders of many predecessors on the road to success. This writer acknowledges, among many others, the shoulders of Mr. George Lee, who placed my name in nomination, and Mr. Alonzo Thompson, who mentored me upon arriving in San Bernardino. A “Torch of Excellence” was passed to the Henry Scholars and accepted by Gilberto Castro who proudly held it high over his head.

The adoption ceremony of the school by the San Bernardino School Employees Federal Credit Union was a highlight of the event, with young scholars’ representatives signing the documents with District and Union officials.

Dr. Marcus Funchess, Principal and Master of Ceremonies, reminded the scholars of their motto: “I am Smart, I am Intelligent, and I am full of Greatness!”

If the Grand Opening of the Dr. Mildred Dalton Elementary School is any indication, the Henry Scholars will climb every mountain to live up to their motto.

Thank you San Bernardino for a great day in the city.

Dr. Mildred Dalton Henry, Professor Emeritus, CSUSB, Founder and CEO (Ret.), Provisional Educational Services, Inc., DBA The PAL Center & Charter Academy

Former San Bernardino resident “Travis” at the age of 28 was honorably discharged from the United States Army after serving in the Afghanistan War and found himself back in the states, unable to find work, and homeless.

“I found myself going from shelter to shelter in order to have a restful nights sleep, well somewhat of a restful night of sleep,” Travis reflects. “It was harsh. I felt alone and the country I fought to serve and protect was rejecting me.”

It’s estimated that in 2006, nearly half a million U.S. veterans, spent some time homeless. And according to the National Alliance to End Homelessness, homeless veterans on average are younger than the total veteran population with approximately 9% between the ages of 18 and 30. One in four homeless are veterans.

Local elected officials are aggressively tackling this issue by authorizing legislation to assist veterans not only in the area of housing but jobs, education, and CalWORKS benefits to aid the men and women who valiantly fought for this country to ease the transition back into civilian life.

Last month, California Governor Jerry Brown signed into law the Veterans Housing and Homeless Prevention Bond Act of 2014 (AB 639) authored by Speaker John A. Pérez (D-Los Angeles). AB 639 allows California voters in June 2014 the opportunity to repurpose already existing veteran housing funds, nearly $600 million, for better housing options for today’s diverse and expanding veteran populations and their families. More than $1 billion of voter-approved funding has been set aside for single-family homes and farms, while the need for multifamily, transitional and supportive housing has greatly increased.

“I am proud of the actions that the Governor and the Legislature have taken this year to tackle veterans’ homelessness in our state,” Speaker Pérez said in a media statement. “Veterans have devoted their lives to the protection of our country and it is absolutely unacceptable when they cannot afford a place for them and their families to sleep. As citizens, it is our basic obligation to stand up for these men and women who have served our nation, and I look forward to seeing California voters approve this measure.”

California has the largest veteran population in the US, with almost two million veterans calling the Golden State home—a number that is expected to rise by over 200,000 when the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq wind down. California also has more homeless veterans than any other state. Both Riverside and San Bernardino counties rank in the top 10 counties by veteran population in the country.

“Every year in California more than 32,000 veterans suffer deteriorating health, repeated incarceration, and worsening mental conditions because they are homeless,” said Sharon Rapport, Corporation for Supportive Housing Associate Director for California Policy. “They cost our state and local governments almost $3,000 a month in response to repeated crises. Using existing bond authority to create over 10,000 affordable places to live, AB 639 will leverage $3 billion in private and federal funds, will make a crucial commitment to move chronically homeless veterans into housing with services—supportive housing—and will save the lives of veterans now struggling to survive life on the street,” she said.

Housing is not the only issue legislators are tackling. Education is also a top priority that is gaining bipartisan support. Ranking Member of the House Veterans’ Affairs Economic Opportunity Subcommittee Congressman Mark Takano (D-Riverside) recently received a nod from his colleagues on the unanimous passage of the Veterans Economic Opportunity Act of 2013 (H.R. 2481) included in the Act was H.R. 331, which Rep. Takano joined Rep. Ken Calvert (R-Corona) to introduce in January.

The legislation will help decrease education benefit processing times by eliminating unnecessary and duplicative paperwork for individual community colleges that are part of a group, district, or consortium.

Rep. Takano said of the passage of H.R. 331, “With Riverside Community College District campuses in both of our congressional districts, and with Riverside county having the eighth largest veterans’ population in the country. I’m proud that Representative Calvert and I joined forces to make it easier for veterans to receive their veteran education benefits.”

“Our legislation will help decrease education benefit processing times by eliminating unnecessary and duplicative paperwork for individual community colleges that are part of a group, district, or consortium. Specifically, it will allow a multi-college system, such as the Riverside Community College District to verify a student’s class enrollment number with the Department of Veterans Affairs, instead of requiring each individual constituent college to do so.”

Rep. Calvert agrees, “Our veterans deserve a simple, straightforward education benefits process that is free of unnecessary, bureaucratic delays. I appreciate the strong, bipartisan support shown by my House colleagues and I look forward to our continued work to simplify VA benefits for veterans and our colleges. I am hopeful the Senate will act soon on this important legislation and our veterans can start to benefit from a more efficient process.”

Adequate healthcare for veterans is also on the legislative agenda for inland lawmakers. Last week veterans were given a boost in benefit claims as the House of Representatives passed legislation that included a provision authored by Congresswoman Gloria Negrete McLeod (CA-35), HR 1623, the Veterans Administration (VA) Claims Efficiency Through Information Act of 2013.

Inland Empire resident and Tuskegee Airmen Archives co-founder Col. Ralph W. Smith contends the real problem with the federal healthcare system is government. “They have [the government] cut down federal employees and slowed down the whole thing. This is the problem. They have sucked this government up so bad that they have slowed down the process. You go down to the VA and sit or stand in line for 20-30 minutes.”

McLeod’s provision would require the VA to track the time spent evaluating each medical condition in a disability compensation claim. The VA would then have to report the number of completed claims by region and by medical condition for the current and preceding month and year. With this information, Congress and the VA would direct resources more effectively to specific regional VA offices across the nation struggling to end the claims backlog.

“As Veterans Day approaches, we must not forget those veterans who are struggling to find work while living with a service-connected disability,” said Negrete McLeod. “The VA’s legacy paper system has made it difficult to process claims of older veterans who need additional compensation later in life. Claims of younger veterans can also take longer to process because they have multiple medical conditions. The passage of this legislation in the House is an important step towards resolving the backlog of benefit claims in the VA.”

Travis, the former serviceman, is employed as a HAZMAT worker and is no longer homeless. He is excited by the passage of the new legislation. “It took me a while to get back on my feet,” he says, “but hopefully other vets won’t have to go through what I’ve been through. It was rough. But thank God he saw me through. And with this new legislation, other veterans will have a fighting chance after fighting for this country.”

Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital Celebrates 20 Years with Public Events and Festivities

Children of all ages and their families are invited to take part in a free outdoor family movie, games, and a fireworks finale on Sunday, Nov. 10, to celebrate the 20th anniversary of Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital.

The festivities, open and no cost to the public, will be held from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Loma Linda University Medical Center Lawn, 11234 Anderson Street, Loma Linda, Calif. 92354. Participants are encouraged to bring blankets, chairs, and a picnic basket to watch the family movie at 6 p.m.

“It’s hard to believe that it’s been 20 years since our region has been blessed by the opening of Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital,” LLUCH Administrator Zareh Sarrafian said.

“Over the last two decades, our hospital has had a tremendous impact on the lives and health care of our children. On behalf of our doctors, nurses, and staff, I would like to thank all our patients, families, and supporters for entrusting us to provide world-class care to the most precious people in our lives,” he said.

Among the activities in store for the event include hot air balloon rides, exhibits, and a petting zoo. Wholesome food will be offered for sale by food vendors.

LLUCH opened 20 years ago as the only facility of its kind in the Inland Empire, with 275 beds and one of the world’s largest newborn intensive care units. Cost of building the hospital was $36 million.

Since then, LLUCH has developed into a leading medical center focused on the health of the smallest, most vulnerable, and sickest patients. Now with 348 beds, it remains the only dedicated children’s hospital in a four-county region – Riverside, San Bernardino, Mono, and Inyo counties – with a population of about 4.5 million.

LLUCH has pioneered and continues to lead in the area of infant heart transplantation, and has received acclaim for its many programs to treat pediatric patients, including proton treatment for cancer, trauma care, physical rehabilitation, intensive and acute care, and organ transplants.

Kenya Jackson knew she had to do something. The principal at View Park Preparatory Accelerated Charter Middle School in Los Angeles noticed the “smart, bright young lady” was suddenly failing school. Jackson says even more disturbing was the fact the 8th grader wasn’t eating. “I found out her parents were homeless. She had nowhere to go. So I actually had her live with me for a couple of weeks – she ate well, her grades shot up,” Jackson recalled with pride.

Things have gotten better – much better. That “smart, bright young lady” is now thriving in high school and looking forward to going to college. Jackson admits she will never forget her face. “She is what I call a ‘bullet-proof’ kid,” added the principal, who admits the daily challenges of educating can be overwhelming at times. “Unfortunately, it’s not unusual for students in under-resourced areas to have seen loved ones killed by gang violence or have lost relatives to other forms of violence. We do what we can to help.”

Jackson oversees one of a dozen Inner City Education Foundation (ICEF) schools, where 83 percent of the 4,200 students come from low-income families. Despite all of the hardships, the network of K-12 charter schools is known for sending African American students from South Los Angeles to some of the top colleges in the country. “In this neighborhood, more than half of the students drop out of high school and less than 10 percent go on to graduate from college,” said ICEF CEO Parker Hudnut. “We are changing that 10 percent go on to graduate from college,” said Hudnut.

At E.C. Reems Academy of Technology and Arts in Oakland, administrators say they use a majority of their supplemental Lottery funding to help pay for 75 percent of the books that make up the library. Every drop in the bucket counts. “For a small school library, without these (Lottery funds) we just wouldn’t have the books,” explained Executive Director Lisa Blair. “Large and small amounts all contribute to providing materials students need.” We wanted to get an up close look at how this supplemental Lottery money is playing a role in the academic success at E.C. Reems, so we took our cameras to the East Bay campus!

California public schools are getting an additional financial boost with the sale of the Big 6 Bingo Scratchers® game. For a $5 investment, players get six bingo cards and a chance to win up to $75,000 in cash. This is the first Lottery Bingo game offering six cards on one ticket. Previously, there were no more than four cards to play on one ticket. Additional features of this game are an extra “free” space on each card, up to a 10X multiplier and a $50 fast spot. Through the first four weeks of sales, Big 6 Bingo has sold about $9.3 million worth of tickets.

The mission of the California Lottery is to provide supplemental funding to California schools while simultaneously supporting local communities. More than 96 cents of every dollar spent by our players goes back to local communities in the form of contributions to public schools and colleges, prizes and retail compensation. The California Lottery urges its customers to play responsibly and within their budgets. If you feel you have a gambling problem, or know someone who does, you can get help at 1-800-GAMBLER.
During the recent government shutdown many numbers were thrown around. But there is one number that stands out and it has nothing to do with the debate over the federal budget.

More than one a day. That is how many members of our active-duty military, National Guard and Reserve forces have committed suicide over the last year. Simply put, we are losing more servicemembers by their own hands than we are by the enemy in Afghanistan.

Only those who experienced firsthand the horrors of combat can understand why most of these young men and women feel compelled to take such drastic and permanent measures.

As Veterans Day ceremonies and parades occur throughout the country, it is important that we commit ourselves to do everything possible to prevent these needless and tragic deaths.

We are their friends, their family, their co-workers and their neighbors. It is up to us to ensure that every veteran feels that his or her service to this country is appreciated by their fellow Americans. There are many tangible ways that we can acknowledge their sacrifice, but the easiest is to simply say, “Thank you for what you have done for our country.”

If he is showing signs of unhappiness or depression, encourage him to seek help through the VA immediately. If she has had difficulty obtaining the benefits that she is entitled to, let her know that The American Legion has thousands of trained service officers nationwide that will help her navigate the bureaucracy free of charge.

And if that veteran has made the Supreme Sacrifice, remember the price that has been paid for our freedom and offer your support to the loved ones left behind.

But Veterans Day is a time to honor not just those who have fought for us in battle, but, in fact, all of the outstanding men and women who served in our nation’s Armed Forces since our founding more than 237 years ago.

Not all veterans have seen war, but a common bond that they share is an oath in which they expressed their willingness to die defending this nation.

Perhaps most significant in preserving our way of life are the battles that America does not have to fight because those who wish us harm slink away in fear of the Navy aircraft carrier, the Coast Guard cutter, the Air Force fighter squadron or the Army soldier on patrol. Or they have heard the words that recently retired General James Mattis shared with his Marines: “Be polite. Be professional. But have a plan to kill everybody you meet.”

While we should all be grateful for the remarkable advancements made in military medicine and prosthetics, the fighting spirit and inspirational stories of our veterans are not due to technology.

These traits come from the heart.

And many of these veterans are women, such as Army Chief Warrant Officer Lori Hill. While piloting her helicopter over Iraq in 2006, she maneuvered her chopper to draw enemy gunfire away from another helicopter and provide suppressive fire for troops on the ground. Despite flying a damaged aircraft and suffering injuries, she landed the helicopter safely, saving her crew. For her actions, she became the first woman to receive the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Women are major contributors to our military presence in Afghanistan and many have given their lives in the War on Terrorism. The American Legion recently issued a report calling upon VA to improve its response to the unique needs of women veterans. The VA and military health systems need to adequately treat breast and cervical cancer as well as trauma that resulted from domestic violence, sexual harassment and assault. America is home to more than 1.2 million women veterans and they deserve our support.

In the poem “Tommy,” the great writer Rudyard Kipling lamented over the rude treatment a British soldier received at a pub. Writing in classical old English, Kipling compared the abuse with the more favorable treatment that “Tommy” receives by the public during war.

“For it’s Tommy this, an’ ‘Tommy that, an’ ‘Chuck him out, the brute!’

But it’s ‘Savior of ‘is country’ when the guns begin to shoot;

An’ it’s Tommy this, an’ Tommy that, an’ anything you please;

An’’Tommy ain’t a bloomin’ fool – you bet that Tommy sees!”

Let us always treat our 23 million veterans as the saviors of our country that they are. Even when the guns are no longer shooting.
