What is a community university?

THERE was a time to learn, not for grades or exams, but just because you want to learn," said Tom McBride, co-ordinator of the experimental—college courses which will begin April 21.

About six classes, ranging from folk guitar to the poetry of French Poet Max Jacob, will meet one to two hours a week. They will terminate the last week of May, so not in conflict with the pre-examination study rush, noted McBride.

The classes are open to anyone in the community and will meet at the time and place most convenient to those who join them.

Other areas of study to be offered are: Eastern philosophy, economics, Draft studies. One class, on Soviet poetry, is a specific course a community or College member wishes to teach, it can be taught in small group sessions and bring together our programmed responses.

There are no fees, no exams, no transcripts, no majors, and no one graduate," he continued.

To Speak On

Art Technology

Scuptor Ross Drago, who brought the Experimental in Art Technology project to the San Bernardino area, will speak at California State College, San Bernardino at 11:30 a.m., Thursday, April 15th.

The public is invited to the presentation which will be held in the Lecture Hall of the Physical Sciences Building under the sponsorship of the Lectures and Public Affairs Committee. There is no admission charge.

Drago is expected to explain the use of technology in the development of imagery and art, said William Haney, associate professor of art and director of the LPA committee. The speaker's EAT program has been directed toward creating new cooperation between the scientific and the artistic communities.

Drago's work is in collections of IBM Corp., Bell Aarosystems Corp., Bethlehem Steel, Union Carbide and Marine Midland Banks and has been exhibited in galleries in New York and California.
Dear Mom and Dad:

I think that one of the reasons is that there has never been any serious attempt at meaningful communication or understanding in our family. We are all playing our games, and I am sure that you realize this. I play my games too, but I am trying to find out just what they are and why I play them.

I have found something in my life that I think is very worthwhile, something that I believe in and something that I intend to express for the rest of my life: that is freedom.

Freedom for all people to work for what they want and achieve it, to the best of their abilities, regardless of what nations deal out to you within contexts of a political system. But the freedom that your seventh grade American history texts teach you to look for is a myth, a political myth, imposed on us by ideologies that nations deal out to you. It is not the "I" that is the unique, feeling, decision-making organism "I" freedom. Why it took twenty-four years to hit upon this look, and I am di^usted. I have taken this look, and I am disgusted.

I ask you, what more can one ask of a college education than this? I have found as I have what I can. I have found meaning in my life and have identified my goal, as I have related here to you.

I intend to do all that I can to assure that as many people as possible can see the things that I have seen. I do NOT want people to see things the same way I do. But I do want to give everybody the chance to make a wise choice for their future by having all the alternatives possible.

You may call this snarky, I call it freedom. The kind of freedom that this country was supposedly founded on.

I think it is time that man realized what he has been doing all these centuries. He has been trying to perfect a machine that will carry him to freedom. Well, the truth is, there is no such machine that can accomplish this end. Man has to just say that he is free and go on from there. Each man striving for his individual freedom.

And that, Dear Parents, is precisely what I am doing.

Dr. Rodney R. Ross, 43, President of the College and a professor of zoology, was fatally stabbed yesterday morning by a student in his zoology lab.

A J oint Biology Department-Student Health Committee investigation of the incident revealed that the student, a 22-year-old sophomore from Jersey City, N.J., had been attending the zoology class for the past three years.

The victim, he explained, "was found laying on the floor of his room, bleeding profusely. He was pronounced dead at 10:22 a.m."

The student, identified as Robert "the Enforcer" Giovani, was booked by members of the student organization — issued a statement saying he was being investigated.

Our goal is to develop a system whereby students can influence the teaching methods of their instructors and have some control over academic reprimands. Unfortunately, we didn't expect students to take the program quite so seriously. Revisions might now be in order.

While campus tension increases, we are prepared to work for meaningful changes and to raise statements regarding the situation. We understand that our efforts will continue to be met with resistance and that we must face the realities of the situation.

At the same time, we are committed to the goals of education and freedom for all. We believe in and stand for the freedom that all people to work for what they want and achieve it, to the best of their abilities, regardless of what nations deal out to you within contexts of a political system. But the freedom that your seventh grade American history texts teach you to look for is a myth, a political myth, imposed on us by ideologies that nations deal out to you. Letters

Dr. Ross Slain By Students

Dear Mom and Dad:

How can you give a person a grade on how well he lives, or how happy he is? I think I refuse to give you any grade, about grades.

You were raised in an environment that told you that you have grades. I was not. My environment tells me that's all is false, and therefore I must strive to give meaning to my life in whatever manner presents itself. I don't really know if all that makes any sense to you, but rest assured, I am not trying to destroy the world. In fact, it is quite the opposite.

What I have been talking about here is essentially what is happening all over this country. Young people coming out of college have been trained by a liberal arts education to really look around them and see just what is happening. I have taken this look, and I am disgusted.

I ask you, what more can one ask of a college education than this? I have found as I have what I can. I have found meaning in my life and have identified my goal, as I have related here to you.

I intend to do all that I can to assure that as many people as possible can see the things that I have seen. I do NOT want people to see things the same way I do. But I do want to give everybody the chance to make a wise choice for their future by having all the alternatives possible.

A new course this summer at California State College, San Bernardino will employ a 360-50 IBM computer.

The computer belongs to the University of California, Riverside, which is supplying the shared time to Cal State at a low rental cost.

"UCR and our college are interested in building a group of students who are trained in computer programming," commented M. Khokhlov, assistant professor of psychology, who will teach the course.

"Our students will have regular, daily use of the computer via a messenger service. We assure that they will not be 'bugged' the programs involved with a pilot series this winter," Khokhlov said.

The first course in computer programming offered at Cal State is designed as a general introduction to automatic data processing equipment. The class will survey the contemporary programming languages and will review applications in behavioral research. The course carries five quarter units of undergraduate credit.

Key punch, sorting and collating machines already in use at Cal State will be employed in the course, as well as the UCR computer.

There are no prerequisites or special requirements for the course, which will meet from 9:30 to 10:45 a.m. daily, Monday through Friday, June 24 to Aug. 1. Pre-registration is urged by Dr. Khokhlov in order to facilitate planning for the physical facilities because of an anticipated large enrollment. Forms for registering are available in the summer session catalog which can be secured by writing Cal State, San Bernardino, 92407.

The usual limit of 20 persons per class at Cal State has been waived for computer course, Dr. Khokhlov said, because great interest is expected.

"This summer course represents a breakthrough for Cal State, because behind it lies an elaborate plan for a whole range of computerized courses in the Social Sciences," Khokhlov said.

"Computer programming has a large role in the academic master plan at Cal State, where a Department of Computer Science is projected eventually. Professors in business administration, sociology, psychology and political science are currently programming 19 courses for the use of the computer in the fall. Cal State expects to receive its first on-computer course eventually.

The college's new six-floor library, now under construction, will house the computer center, which might be recommended by the faculty for consideration for these awards.

The prestigious Woodrow Wilson Fellowships are awarded to outstanding students planning to enter college teaching. Since the program began in 1945, more than 10,000 Fellows have been supported in their first year of graduate study by the Foundation's grants.

Ethnic Studies Controversy

By DAVE BROWN

The proposed student names for the Ethnic Studies Committee were brought up in Executive Cabinet meeting on Wednesday, April 2.

Two of the members voting on the proposed students were Barry Thompson and Ken Harper, the two candidates for A.S.B. president next year.

Thompson and Harper took opposite sides when it came to voting on the members: Thompson voting for all the candidates and Harper voting against all of them.

Harper said he voted the way he did because he did not agree with the manner in which the members were selected. "As I see it, it is the job of the Executive Cabinet to do a job like this and it is the best group to do it," Harper said.

"As I see it," said Harper, "it is not correct to assume that the only student qualified to serve on the Ethnic Studies Committee has to be a member of a minority group."

Harper said he would have selected the members in this way: Perhaps by inclusion of one such animal, the already obvious enhanced beauty of the models is doubly reported: "U.S.D.A. Choice - Grade 1-A."
THE PHYSICAL EDUCATION DEPARTMENT is taking the names of volunteers to assist with the recreation center at 9 a.m., April 12 in conjunction with the Science Day Fair. Last year there were 300 high school students who were fed at the outdoor grills and a comparable number is expected this year. Approximately thirty students are needed to help prepare and serve the food, in addition to assistants who can learn culinary skills (no class credit given), enjoy being with other people, or like good food in a relaxed setting.Extension 431 or sign up in Room 120 of the Physical Education Building.

I AM EXTENDING THIS OPEN INVITATION to all Black and Oriental students and to those of Spanish descent to join the Club (thereby integrate) the CSCSB. Unfortunately this course is not offered for credit to non-majors; neither is there money for scholarships. I therefore presume that your participation would be for love's sake. The only thing required is a minimum of attendance, but I believe qualifications are an ability to carry a tune and to sing on pitch (which is more than 50% of the students).

Before attending your first rehearsal though you should come by my office (C-108) for a very informal audition to allow me to judge quality and vocal range. Personally, I don't believe that-to say that is not to say anemic—but we could use more fire, color, or whatever you would like to call it.

The individuals selected will have their room and board paid for by the Orientation Committee. THE ACTIVITIES COMMITTEE is sponsoring a Speak Easy Saturday night, April 14, from 8:00 to 12:00 a.m. at the Little Gym. It's a dance following the theme of the Roaring Twenties and people are encouraged to come in costume. Admission is free.
