Mrs. Medgar Evers draws 250 Tuesday

By MARK TRENAM

Last Tuesday night, Mrs. Medgar Evers spoke to a near capacity audience in PS 10 on the issue of "Black Protest". Her presentation kicked off the first in a series of Lectures and Public Affairs Committee programs designed this quarter around a theme of Black Expression.

Mrs. Evers, who currently lives in Oakland, Calif., is Associate Director of the Educational Opportunities Planning Commission, and has authored a book entitled, "Us, The Living". She has been an active lecturer and participant in the civil rights movement for years.

During her presentation, Mrs. Evers related that the Blacks, to a degree more than any other group of people in this country, have had to constantly work to prove their manhood, their citizenship, their education, and fight for the rights and responsibilities due them. She said the Blacks from the days of her forefathers as well. Every available media — art, music, dress, poetry, literature and politics — became a tool to carve out the Black man's identity. Gone were the decades of a negative self-image of inferiority, Black is Beautiful.

For years, legal and quiet protest was ignored by the deaf ears of an apathetic nation. Only the emergence of the violent protest succeeded in frightening, shocking and waking up the public to face the problems of racism. While violence is certainly not the most desirable form of demonstration, it has been the most effective.

Mrs. Evers concluded with a discussion of where the present struggle for Black protest will lead. National observers as seeing the movement in a state of rest. But, she warned, there is a great danger in assuming any permanence to the apparent quiet. Mrs. Evers ended her lecture with a call for unity among the Blacks, and the need for all people to work together to meet the challenges posed by the race problems.

Following the speech was a brief question and answer period. Halfway through, one member of the audience stood up and asked Mrs. Evers, "What part, if any, does violence play in an educational demonstration?"

Mrs. Evers responded with "Violence itself is an educational experience."

Another student thorn has pricked the side of the faculty, and it rhymes with “Unicorn Horn.” The unfortunate phenomenon of student polarization, once requiring eight food dailies and noon rallies, has now been condensed into a thirty-six page student publication. Consequently, our prof’s reactions have ranged from outright disgust to fervent approval.

Some of the criticism leveled at the “Horn” accuses it of having a vindictive theme, of not representing a majority of student opinions, and of being too one-sided with negative descriptions. Given the possible, even probable, validity of these accusations, can this first attempt at student evaluation of teachers at CSSCB be defended?

Damn right it can. Undoubtedly, much of the contrary reaction stems from the less than tactful wording in Jerry Rhode’s forward. A sentence such as “We are essentially doing to the faculty what they have been doing so long to us . . . evaluating their performance,” may easily be construed to imply revenge. However, the overall scope of the “Horn” was to serve as a student generated forum in expression of the qualms of the educational dialogue. The “Horn” was not trying to get back at the faculty: it only attempted to provide the remaining half of the educational equation. The “Horn” was not trying to get what they have been doing so long to us . . . evaluating their progress. However, the overall scope of the “Horn” was to serve as a student generated forum in expression of the qualms of the educational dialogue. The “Horn” was not trying to get back at the faculty: it only attempted to provide the remaining half of the educational equation.

Faults the “Unicorn Horn” has. But faults can be corrected, and the idea is sound and valuable to continuing educational quality. The thorny “Horn” did not come out smoking like a rose . . . but rather, like a Daisy. And that’s where we’re at.

u.m.a.s. airs new programs

by MIKE ZLAKET

Last Friday afternoon, the United Mexican-American Students (UMAS) held their first program of the year. The representatives of several schools and SBVC were organized under the leadership of the UMAS organization. Perhaps the most significant aspect of this program was the recognition of the importance of education for Mexican-Americans.

The program, which included a discussion of the failure of the schools to work with the Mexican-American students, was an important step towards raising educational levels of my brothers.

This program is important also because of what Ramon refers to as the failure of the schools to work with the Mexican-American students. Ramon, “I feel, as many others do, that schools have not done their work in the counseling area and have failed to really make even the slightest effort to interest the Chicano in furthering his education. We are not born with a college plan automatically instilled in us. It is possible, even necessary, that we can help others. Not enough can be said about people who turn their backs on problems and even negate them from pure ignorance.

People will not even take the time to understand and, therefore, just use the good old traditional labeling technique. Anyway, the problems are many and we, the ones who have recognized them, are not talking about the problems but initiating action to alleviate them.

There will be other projects and programs in addition to this. Ramon said, “My guess is that the highest activity will be a counseling and recruiting drive in the Chicano community. This program is a necessary and important step towards raising educational levels of my brothers.”

cac poetry reading next friday

By KARON HYDUKE

THERE is to be a poetry reading Friday, October 17, at 7:00, on room C116. Contributing authors will be Larry Kramer, Ben Jacques, Charles Chilton, and Muner Hanafi. The reading will be sponsored by the Cultural Affairs Committee and channelled to be used by the ASB for students, faculty, and administration to share color, sound, and movement with one another.

The Cultural Affairs Committee is hoping for an intra-departmental program, a blending of sciences and the humanities. Its purpose will be to launch an investigative and exploratory project into the sexual exploding universe of which we are a part.

Can you get behind this? Cultural Affairs plans to produce four student films and four student plays. Also, for maintenance of a straight heat, they will produce eight concerts, from classical to acid rock. They will also produce jazz ballets, happenings, and paint-ins, not to mention photography and art shows. Meetings will begin in the near future.

This is the first in a series of articles relating the history of famous Black Citizens of the world.

The Black Students Union believes that part of its function is to inform all students of the heritage of black peoples. The BSU will do all in its power to: Champion the human rights of black people both on and off campus; engage in and support all activities which serve to raise the level of Black Social consciousness; to unveil the evils of this racist and imperialist society; directed toward the material and physical liberation of black people and other oppressed peoples of the third world.

The price of hating other human beings is loving oneself less.

By JOE MCCRE

As another year begins it seems little has changed. None of the major problems have been solved and no solutions seem to be staring us in the face. The population explosion is threatening to starve or choke us off, we may vaporize ourselves at any minute, and after all these years, man still cannot get along with his neighbor let alone someone he doesn't know.

With all these problems facing us it would seem that the college student today would be trying as hard as possible to solve them as quickly as possible. However this does not mean that the "adult" world tells us many things are wrong with the college student being involved, and most students seem to agree with them. First of all the adult world tells us that we are in college "to learn and not change anything" (children should be seen and not heard.) "They tell us that solution to problems don't come easily, which is very true. But our parents' generation has been in power for twenty-five years and I can think of very few problems that have been solved.

Finally, the biggest excuse for not becoming involved seems to be that most college students are in college because of the money they will make when they graduate. It seems to me that is the worst reason of all, for money will be there when you graduate and continues on its present course.

What it all leads up to is this: before one can solve any problem one must first become involved. It is now time for everyone who has a stake in this world to try as much as one person can to better it.

The time of letting someone else "take care of things" is past. Joining a group is not in my mind, the first step one should take after resolving to become "involved." The first thing one should do is talk to people. In this way a person gets to know both people and their ideas. The reason for doing this is that it is much easier to be angry with an idea put forth by a person you don't know than by a person you do know. In the end, however, it will most likely be necessary to join a group. It is a truly sad fact that the only way to effect change is through the aid of an organized way it is.

The price one pays for involvement, and it is the most precious thing anyone has: time. But then, to live is to be involved.

Students Speak Out:

Interviews By . . . . . . Nancy Saunders

The Live-In Orientation for freshmen and new students, held at Camp Arbolado on August 19-21, was a fantastic success for some and maybe a rehearsal for others. In planning the weekend, the counselor strove for an unstructured situation as possible to allow for spontaneous activities and more personal atmosphere. Workshops, recreational facilities, discussion, and a multitude of improved events were at hand to do as much as the individual wished.

Complete informality was in existence, which was conducive to the making of friends and the interaction of people. A spectrum of opinions arose over the Orientation, as evidenced by the following series of quotes at random among freshmen and new students. They were asked the following series of questions: "Which, if any, of the workshops did you attend and why? Do you think that the Live-In could be termed a success? What could be handled differently next year to further enhance its chances for success?"

FAT CLAYTON, Freshman: "I attended the Student Is A Nigger discussion, but it had little or nothing to do with the basic topic. The Orientation was quite unstructured and should have had more organization.

I enjoyed the campfire singing and the folks in the crowd. I think it was a success as far as getting to know the high-mucky students of student government. I learned alot about this place. I didn't feel as if I was a kid in school. I think that for next year a few less stereotyped discussion groups, like the one on drugs, would be better. I really liked the camp; it was a very friendly atmosphere."

ROGER SCOTT, Freshman: "I attended the log-building workshop and got to feel alot of women during the micro-lab demonstration. I think the Orientation was especially the B.S.U. organized Sanitarium. The nights should be made longer next year (i.e. more drinking, etc.) It was alright, although I can't remember that much.

JOHN CHAVEZ, Freshman: "I attended the drug workshop and thought it was quite informal. The people spoke from an audience to another, not only physically but academically. I got to feel a lot of women.

after the east party (to p. g. p.)

after the party outside the home (three hours ago) thousand of small sucking the icy chewing the leaves
slowly injesting all of the greens

the morning was sunny and (from the evening) the dinner was a hit (three hours ago) thousands of diamonds dropped to the floor washing my face off printing its own.

sprawled out and sleeping

inhabitants... fifteen players idly dream
one honest fellow

waking the blind sucking the purses
inside the home
slowly injesting all of the greens

THE PRICE OF HATING OTHER HUMAN BEINGS IS LOVING YOURSELF LESS.
A contract has been negotiated between the San Bernardino Pharmacy Assn. and the California State College System to provide prescription medicine for CSCSB students at a reduced rate. Purpose of the program, explained Dean of Students Kenton L. Monroe, is to encourage students to get medicine when they need it. "Experience shows students have limited funds," he said "if they are given a prescription which will cost $5 to $6, they often attempt to get along without the medication because they don't have the money. They get progressively ill or eventually share their illness with someone else." Under the new program, a CSCSB student takes his prescription from any physician to a participating pharmacy, shows his college identification card and purchases the medicine at the reduced cost. If the student receives his prescription through the Student Health Center on campus, he receives an additional $1.35 off the reduced price. This, Dean Monroe hopes, will encourage students to see a doctor promptly.

The contract makes it possible for students to receive their prescriptions at approximately 40 per cent of retail cost, on the average, said Dean Monroe. Every pharmacy in San Bernardino County which wishes to participate in the program may do so, regardless of whether it is a member of the association, explained Jerry Boeeman of Boeeman's Pharmacy in San Bernardino, who was instrumental in working out arrangements with Dean Monroe and Dr. Samuel M. Plaut, director of student health services at CSCSB. A list of approximately 85 member pharmacies has been furnished to the college health center. Boeeman estimated 90 to 95 per cent of the independent pharmacies are members of the association and are participating. Several large chain firms are not able to take part. Under the agreement, the charge to students will be based upon the California welfare schedule plus a $2.30 handling charge for the pharmacy.

As far as Dean Monroe knows, only one other state college (San Jose State) has a similar contract with pharmacies in the community to provide services for the students. On larger campuses, he explained, it is common for a fully developed health center to have its own pharmacy.

Military Recruiters

Next week three organizations will be on campus to describe their programs to interested students, according to the Placement Office. Monday, recruiters from the U.S. Army will be available to discuss officer training programs for men and women. Tuesday, a team from the U.S. Air Force will similarly describe its programs. Wednesday, Business Administration seniors with a strong background in accounting are invited to discuss career employment opportunities now available with the Naval Area Audit Service. Interested students may reserve interview time in the Placement Office, Library Annex 2-B. Early sign-up is encouraged by Placement personnel.

Notices of other scheduled recruiting visits by business firms, school districts, and governmental and civic agencies will appear in the Pawprint and will be posted on campus.

ANNUAL STAFF?

Some interested students have expressed their willingness to start an annual that would be a mentor for the students of Cal-State S.B. If you are interested in working on the staff, please come to the meeting on Tues. Oct. 14, in room L 114.

Qualified students who wish to gain employment as tutors are asked to contact the Placement Office, Library Annex 2-B to learn more about available opportunities. We have had several requests from community as well as CSCSB students and local school districts in the area for skilled, upperclass students to tutor in mathematics, English, reading and foreign languages. Compensation for this activity typically ranges from $3.00 to $10.00 per hour, according to Gladys Hubbard, Placement Advisor.

THERE WILL BE AN ICC MEETING

On Monday, October 15, in room L 114. All clubs are encouraged to send a representative to this meeting, as plans are being formulated for the 4th annual Halloween Carnival on Oct. 31. It will be held in the quad area from 12:30 to 3:30 P.M. and will be followed by an evening dance and flicks.
