IMMIGRANTS BECOME "CITIZENS BY CHOICE" IN RECORD NUMBERS

New Book Examines Latino Immigrants & Naturalization

(Claremont, CA) Countering the stereotypes that Latino immigrants have low interest in becoming United States citizens, newly released Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) data show that naturalization among this group has reached an all-time high. Over 300,000 immigrants naturalized in 1993. Only 1944 had a higher number of naturalized citizens (441,979). This high level of naturalization was the result of unique circumstances stemming from World War II when many immigrants sought to express their loyalty to the U.S. by becoming American

A just-released book, New Americans by choice: Political Perspective of Latino Immigrants, examines the process by which these Latino immigrants become naturalized Americans.

The book's authors, Dr. Harry Pachon and Dr. Louis DeSipio, President and scholar respectively for the Tomas Rivera Center (TRC), find that an increasing number of Latino immigrants are trying to become U.S. citizens. "Unfortunately, there is a stereotype that all Latino immigrants are undocumented or do not wish to become U.S. citizens," said Dr. Pachon. legal resident status and each year partisan organization.

85,000 become U.S. citizens through naturalization."

The book reports that half of Latino immigrants who seek U.S, citizenship do not succeed in their efforts. "The. naturalization bureaucracy proves daunting for many immigrants," according to DeSipio. "Many immigrants develop loyalty and attachment to the United States and begin to make their attachment formal through naturalization, but are stopped by a bureaucratic process."

Another major finding in the books show that Latino immigrants who have naturalized are active in political activities in the United States. Naturalized Latino immigrants register and vote at higher rates than native born Latinos or the population as a whole.

The book, New Americans by Choice: Political Perspectives of Latino Immigrants, was published by Westview Press in Boulder, Colorado.

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk

The thought of spending 800,000 dollars this holiday season is outrageous to most people, but that's the price we pay every time someone dies at the hands of a drunk driver. Serve less at holiday gatherings, because you hold the key to highway safety. Friends don't let friends drive drunk.

Eight young people died in car crashes today. America lost eight precious lives and its health care system lost 6.4 million dollars. Enforcing laws against underage drinking means saved lives and reduced health care costs. Remember, you hold the key to highway safety. Friends don't let friends drive drunk.

UCR Botanist Awarded Major Environmental Prize

Arturo Gomez-Pompa

Arturo Gomez-Pompa, professor of botany at the University of California, Riverside, is one of two scientists to be awarded the 1994 Tyler Prize for Environmental Achievement, generally regarded as the world's premier award for environmental science and leader-

Gomez-Pompa will share the prize and its $150,000 cash award with Peter Raven, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden. Both were cited for their efforts to understand and preserve tropical forests.

"I'm so pleased, but at the same time I have mixed, emotions. This is an honor given to just a few individuals, and there are so many outstanding and deserving people working on critical environmental issues," said Gomez-Pompa, an authority on tropical forest ecology, management and conservation.

"It is always gratifying to learn that your work is recognized and appreciated by your peers, but for me this is especially important because my solving have been controversial."

Born and raised in Mexico City, Gomez-Pompa has spent more than 40 years studying and teaching biology, tropical botany, ecology, ethnobiology ulty member at UCR since 1986.

Gomez-Pompa founded INIREB (the National Institute of Biotic Resources) in Veracruz in 1975, and designed the Institute's research programs to approach the problems of conservation and development together.

The work of applying traditional agricultural systems to modern conservation problems led Gomez-Pompa to a fascination with modern Mayan culture, which retains much traditional knowledge of tropical plants and resource management. In 1988, the MacArthur Foundation awarded Gomez-Pompa a grant that allowed him to establish graduate programs in the Yucatan, an important Mayan region.

Gomez-Pompa's research and his activities in international conservation have led to a number of specific actions designed to preserve natural environments, particularly in his native Mexico. He recently completed a two-year term as advisor on tropical ecology issues to then-President of Mexico Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

At the same time, under the-auspices of the Mexican Undersecretary of Forestry, he produced a pilot plan to save Mexico's threatened tropical forests. The effort involves the development of 27 community-based projects in sustainable development in southeastern Mexico.

Gomez-Pompa taught at the National University of Mexico for 20 years, and was a research fellow at Harvard University before joining UCR. From 1986 through 1992, Gomez-Pompa directed UC MEXUS, the University of California Institute for Mexico and the United States, a multiple-campus research unit headquartered on the Riverside cam-

Continuing, Salgado said, "Proposition 187 sets a dangerous precedent. If a government can convince people that one group is responsible for lack of housing, jobs and urban decline, then people have to ask themselves, who's next.

The CLCRN has planned future boycotts targeting other corporations that have contributed toward either the Republican Party or previously contributed and supported Proposition 187.

Ortencia Lopez, the group's chairperson stated that CLCRN has set a goal of organizing a broad-based collaborative network with other statewide communities. The meeting in December set the following objectives: to facilitate and coordinate technical assistance to obtain funding to provide citizenship programs throughout the state; voter registration drive to register
2 million eligible Latinos in preparation for the 1996 presidential elections; and a mass voter education program to acquaint Latino voters of issues confronting the community.

According to Patricio Guillen, director of the Libreria Del Pueblo and CLCRN member, the group has planned a pilgrimage to Sacramento for Wilson's gubernatorial inauguration on January 7. The CLCRN is planning to recruit 20,000 people from California's northern and southern regions to demonstrate the group's opposition to the governor's racist leadership.

The CLCRN has planned a second organizational meeting in San Jose on February 19 and 20.

Students wishing to enroll in Spring classes at San Bernardino Valley College ar advised to apply for admission as soon as possible.

The 10,000 student campus expects an increase in enrollment as tuition continues to rise at other colleges and universities.

"We will remain at $13 per unit this Spring; the lowest tuition for any college system in the country," said Dan Angelo, division dean of Admissions and Records.

New students need to apply immediately so they can obtain an early registration date in January. Registration begins Jan. 9 through 17 by appointment only.

"We don't know how much longer the state will hold the line on our enrollment fee," added Angelo, "but last semester our students saw the writing on the wall." Last semester SBVC experienced a dramatic 14 percent increase in enrollment as tuition continued to rise in both the University of California (UC) and California State University (CSU) systems.

Spring semester class schedules are available in the SBVC Bookstore (lower level of the Campus Center) for $1. The 122 page booklet lists all courses offered at SBVC, in Big Bear and Needles, and television classes. To apply, students should come to the Admissions and Records Office located on the first floor of the Administration Building.

For further information call (909) 888-6511. SBVC is located at 701 So. Mt. Vernon Ave. in San Bernardino.
