Impact on Current Assignment/Teaching (How was this info applied)?
I found this to be a very productive conference. In addition to the sessions I attended, I was also able to speak with several vendors at the exhibits and get some information about some products that may prove extremely useful.

Three of the sessions I attended focused on trends happening at the Library of Congress and how those changes will affect cataloging at libraries all over the country. These changes will necessitate more collaboration among libraries and also the loosening of standards applied to cataloging and what we will accept from other libraries. Another result of this conference was the finding that the PromptCat record service is now a free service offered by OCLC. Although there is a small fee charged by our approval vendor for this service, we have just begun implementing this service which should enhance library service by getting the books cataloged much faster and up available to the patrons sooner.

At the Cataloging of Children’s Committee meeting, I was assigned to create a wiki for the group in order to put current cataloging information needed to catalog these materials online. Currently much of this information is internal to the Library of Congress and it will be a great resource to have available for everyone.
