Unpaid Internships Becoming More Scarce

By Torilynn Qualls

College graduates all over the country are coming up short on opportunities and job offers after completing their unpaid internships and obtaining their degrees.

“Unpaid internships don’t seem to be giving college kids a leg up when it comes to look for employment,” stated The Atlantic.

According to the National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE), “Only 37 percent of unpaid interns got an offer after graduation; that’s not much better than the results for those with no internship—35.2 percent received at least one job offer.”

A recent NACE presentation stated, “unpaid interns managed roughly the same or worse in the job market compared to non-interns across a variety of fields, including; Business, Communications, Engineering, English, and Political Science.”

This data exemplifies that the necessity for an unpaid internship seems to be nonessential; based on the fact that students who did not complete an internship are roughly in the same position bracket as students who did, and have the work experience that should place them in a higher position.

In recent news the U.S. Department of Labor has established the standards and principles applying to unpaid and paid interns.

Undocumented immigrants in the green to drive

By Brenda Servin

California Gov. Jerry Brown signed Assembly Bill 60, which provides undocumented immigrants with the opportunity to obtain a driver’s license and will take effect as of Jan. 1, if not sooner.

According to CNN, a crowd gathered in front of Los Angeles City Hall on Oct. 3 to show their support at the signing ceremony of this new law.

Undocumented immigrants that are able to pass their driving exams along with proving their identities and residency will be issued licenses by the California Department of Motor Vehicles.

The design of the licenses will have some kind of markings or state that owner of the license did not provide a birth certificate or social security card and is of illegal immigration status.

The licenses that will be available for illegal immigrants will only serve as a non-driving license; it will not provide eligibility for voting or ensure employment.

Gustavo Deloera said, “I have a couple friends that I would rather be driving around with a license than without a license.”

When the law takes effect illegal immigrants can begin applying for licenses and can be assured that they will be protected from discrimination under Assembly Bill 60.

President Barack Obama has nominated Janet Yellen as the chair to the Federal Reserve, once Ben Bernanke finishes his term in January.

Prior to the nomination, Yellen served as the CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco from 2004 to 2006, and was governor of the Federal Reserve Board during the Clinton Administration. According to President Barack Obama, this is unmistakably the most important economic job in the world, and if elected she will have to face the challenge of high inflation and low employment.

Former Rialto School District assessment Judith Oakes was arrested on suspicion of embezzling up to $2.1 million from the schools lunch money fund.

It is speculated that she has been stealing money, giving so far as $100 into her bra, for the past seven years. As Oakes faces possible charges of embezzlement and grand theft, Rialto police officials are also investigating why this was not spotted sooner.

The District’s superintendent and deputies have been placed on leave by the school board. Rialto police Capt. Randy De Anda, said that she had access to funds from 29 different schools within the district.

California State University student employees got a pay raise on July 1, which will continue to increase over the course of a three-year contract.

Not all CSU students will get the pay raise, but those who will should see a significant increase in their salary over the course of the contract.

Teaching Assistants (TA) and Graduate Assistants (GA) will receive a 1.34 percent general salary increase (GSI) for the first year of the contract. The GSI will then increase 2 percent for the next two years of the contract. The contract also increases the minimum/maximum pay scale for TA’s and GA’s by 5 percent for each year of the contract.

“Given that most of our members are at or near the bottom of the pay scale,” said James Banks, an international representative for the UAW, “they will receive both the GSI and the scale increase.”

Hourly employees classified as Instructional Student Assistants (ISA) will get a $1 an hour raise for the first year of the contract with a 50 cent an hour increase each year for the next two years. ISA employees include graders, supplemental instructors, and tutors.

According to UAW Financial Secretary Lautaro Guilliegillos, about 2,900 ISA’s work at a minimum rate of $10 an hour, making the increase a welcome boost to salaries.

The three year contract comes after an agreement between California State University and the United Auto Workers union, with the UAW representing over 7,700 CSU student employees.

The agreement comes after five years of tuition hikes and no wage increases. This will put many members in financial debt, according to a press release from the UAW.

Student opinion on who does and who doesn’t get the pay raise was divided.

Many student employees who are not classified as TA, GA or ISA workers wished that they would get something out of the deal, saying that the tuition hikes and other expenses affect them as well.

Some students who were not employed by the university saw no problem with the divide in those eligible for the raise.

Manuel Del Rio, A Computer Science major, discussed his opinion when asked about the pay raise saying that he believed it was fair since the employees getting the raise do more meaningful work.

Even some employees had no problem with the raise going to certain employees only.

Edward Ceja, an International Business major at CSUSB, said that as long as the money is going to the people who need it he has no problem.

Daniel Madden, a junior studio arts major at CSUSB said that he knows the people getting the raise work very hard and that they deserve the money.

While no more proposals are being made at this time, Banks stated that the UAW will be working towards amending the middle class scholarship to include graduate students.

The pay raise will continue to increase for the next three years, with the contract ending in 2015 regardless of the divided student opinion.
Legal abortion clinics become accessible in California

By YARA DEL RIO-DOMINGUEZ Staff Writer

Governor Brown, signed Assembly Bill 154 and AB 980 increasing access to early abortion clinics, and those who can perform abortions this past Wednesday.

In California, AB 154 will allow practitioners, certified-midwives, and physician assistants to perform first trimester abortion without a doctors supervision. Assembly Bill 980 will allow more abortion clinics to be held at the same standard as other primary care facilities, making abortion clinics more widely available in rural areas.

CA has chosen to go the opposite direction of implementing new rules and regulations for better safer procedures for women, due to the current shortage of health care, professionals will be able to provide early abortion care in CA.

“Practitioners, certified-midwives, and physician assistants may not seem to be the first choice of doctor when making the choice to have an abortion. But many of these medical assistants who specialize in women’s health were already doing procedures such as inserting IUD’s and pap smears, and learning how to perform vacuum aspirations,” according to Tracey Weitz, an associate professor in the ob/gyn department UCSF.

Kathy Keener, President and CEO of Planned Parenthood affiliates of CA says, “AB 154 creates a two-tiered health system for women seeking abortion.”

“Women of means will seek care from physicians working in surgery-ready hospitals, while poor women will seek care from clinics lacking surgical capabilities without doctors present, should anything go wrong,” said Carol Hogan, spokespersons for the California Catholic Conference.

Women in Kern Valley, have one clinic to serve an area larger than the state of New Jersey. Many of these women face challenges to gain access to this clinic, often traveling by bus for long hours.

Student Alejandra Membreno, was worried when she found out AB 154 allowed nurses, physician assistants and midwives to perform suction aspirations on women without the presence of a doctor, but was relieved to know these women are certified and trained to perform these procedures already.

“Governor Brown is promoting safe legal abortions for women all through out CA signing off on AB 154 and 980, its comforting to know women will have a broader access to such clinics,” said Membreno.

Once illegal immigrants are allowed to get grants are allowed to get undocumented immigrants. It also means that more people will be informed about traffic laws and safety. If undocumented immigrants apply for licenses they will also be required, by the DMV, to take the written and behind-the-wheel driving tests. Without a driver’s license, undocumented immigrants make it harder for typical driver responsibilities to be held against them. This is the first step to taking the undocumented out from their shadows.

Flexible curved displays coming soon

By PHIL RUDDLE
News Editor

All the iPhone 5s talk about ‘forward thinking’ has been revealed in recent weeks, but everything could soon change this November once LG releases its first curved-screen smartphone.

According to reuters.com, LG Electronics Inc’s display unit explained Monday that it will start producing in mass of smartphone with new screens next month to catch up to bigger rivals Samsung Electronics Co Ltd.

LG and others market the screens as unbreakable which, if true, may revolutionize the durability of smartphones.

The display will be six inches and will contain an organic light-emitting diode (OLED) screen.

“The introduction of OLED Technology, allowing for ‘fold-able’ or ‘bendable’ designs, has the potential of starting a new revolution of product development, designed around a flexible screen instead of yesterday’s rigid screens and without the need for back lights, thinner and less power hungry screens can be produced,” explains San Casas, product engineer at Intelligent Computer Solutions.

It’s been rumored that Samsung will introduce their smartphone with a curved display in October, according to techcrunch.com.

It’s not for sure clear what the true benefits of a curved flexible display will bring, although Samsung states a curved screen would allow more viewing space in the same footprint.

Curved displays can already be found in large-screen televisions in which both LG and Samsung Electronics started selling curved OLED TV’s this year for around $9,000.

These curved displays are still in the early stages of development however features fold-able or bendable designs that allow mobile and wearable gadgets to reach new heights and possibly change the entire smartphone market.

“It has potential to be cutting edge, but it also treads the thin line of gimmicky and its taking a big leap from what we know as the standard smart device; whether or not it garners mass appeal is yet to be determined,” explains student Andrew Reveles.

Reveles has been using smartphones since the first iPhone was released, and has constantly upgraded to next best thing since as long as the upgrade was worth the cost.

In January, Samsung showcased a couple of prototypes with a flexible screen and a display that extended from the side of a device.

Another ad also showed the consumers their possible potential vision: flexible displays on a tablet that can fold into a phone.

At first its a normal tablet, but when you fold the display from left to right, it takes the shape of a smartphone.

You can view this ad inside of Samsung’s full keynote CES 2013 press conference at Youtube.

This could potentially launch the production of a device with a large display that can fold up to fit inside your pocket.

The issue that erupts is cost value, as technology firms have yet to find out how to mass produce the parts cheaply and come up with display panels that can be heat resistant and thin.

“Portability seems to be key to students. You can see a rise in tablets being used in classrooms. Shifting Apple, Samsung, or another company find a way to provide this at a reasonable price while maintaining product integrity it may benefit students positively,” explains Reveles. “Come will be the days when students will need to explain to their parents how their new phone no longer functions because they store data with breakable displays,” said Casas.

How to choose the right health care plan

By DANIEL DELMARCO
Staff Writer

The Affordable Care Act, also known as Obamacare, has launched, but there are other options for health insurance.

Obamacare was created for a purpose presented in the official title: To provide affordable health care for the masses in the form of a marketplace.

According to CNN, most Americans won’t have to use the new marketplace because they will still be getting next year’s insurance plan through work.

Brandon Crane (full-time factory worker, age 29) said, “I’m not really concerned with Obamacare, I’m happy with the insurance that my job gives me.”

Many argue that a health care plan is not something that should be chosen quickly or randomly, there are plenty of things to consider as one shops for the insurance plan which they will have the entire year.

If the biggest concern is money; how much one makes, how much one can spend, etc.

A concern equally important is how much health care one envisions needing.

There is a big difference between someone who is young, healthy, and has no honest issues compared to someone older, overweight, with bad eye sight, and tends to have a weak immune system.

Just as there is a big difference between two potential people, there is a big difference in the insurance plan that would best suit them.

It is impossible to predict major health issues such as cancer or a bad car crash that will appear without warning.

Many argue choosing a plan based on facts and known issues is best.

If there are a lot of health problems, in the long run it is better for to spend more on health insurance now and to save a lot of money when the health care is needed.

In the mirrored situation, a generally healthy person will probably save more money in the long run to spend less on insurance now and a little more on those occasional hospital needs that come.

Colleges provide health care, but not everything is covered.

CSUSB student Marlene Beltran, 22, shared her thoughts on health care. “I’m not looking forward to dealing with it.”

“I’m happy my parents have good insurance that takes care of me,” continued Beltran.

It is likely that parent insurance providers covers their child as long as they are under 26.

Even for those students who unfortunately do not fit into that category, most colleges include health insurance for their students as part of their tuition fees, however not all health requirements are covered.

According to the CSUSB website, “As a regularly enrolled student at CSUSB, you pay a Student Health Fee and you are automatically eligible for health and counseling care at the Student Health and Psychological Counseling Center [...]”

Although basic health care is provided by the Student Health Center, major illness and injury, as well as certain conditions requiring a specialist or hospitalization, are beyond our scope of service.”

Health insurance can be intimidating at first, but it’s really about knowing other possible healthcare options.

How much is too much reality TV?
Watching reality television is okay as long as you don’t let it take over your life

By MARIA PERRY
Staff Writer

Reality television has become a major genre in televised entertainment, a driving force in how we carry ourselves in different social situations and an influence on how we present ourselves as individuals.

Cruz. “I don’t think technology has made us lose our natural ability to survive or character, because they may rely too deeply on the advice or values presented by them.

However, the influence that reality television has on us isn’t all bad. There are some benefits its influence can have on its audience, however.

One benefit from watching reality television is to know that we’re not as crazy as we might think,” said student Hector Arivzu.

“There are people with much more questionable sanity levels.”

In addition Arivzu said, “One more thing that comes off as a benefit is to obtain some insight as to how other people react to certain situations. It may not be exactly how our situations may turn out, but with the newly obtained knowledge, there is more reason to act in a certain manner knowing what might be one outcome.”

Reality television can be addictive because it gives people the illusion that they are apart of the lives of the people in the television screen said Arivzu.

Thus, reality television can also become an obsession as well. It becomes an addiction or an obsession when people put all their time and energy into getting more of a single pleasure, such as a reality television show, rather than dividing that time and energy to explore or maintain other things sometimes important endeavors.

We miss important moments in our lives that are overlooked or miss out on because we focus all our energy into a made-up reality.

“If you’d rather watch the show than do anything else, or if it starts to take over your life to the exclusion of other activities, it’s safe to say you’re obsessed,” said student Kathryn Wall.

Although, some may draw inspiration from people in reality television shows we must learn our limits and how to moderate our exposure to reality television.

Reality television may be around for some time, but don’t let it take over your life.

Technology, a tool to dumb us down
As people use technology more and more, they rely less on common sense

By ANDY QUINTANA
Staff Writer

Technology can make people lose focus of the area surrounding. Here is an example.

The San Francisco Gate reported the Sept. 23, shooting death of a 20-year-old suspect, in an apartment.

“On the other hand, it has made us smarter, because we are exposed to innovative ways of obtaining information, making us able to grasp today’s knowledge in a much faster way.”

With technology innovations, there may be a possibility that we may lose certain skills in the process. Student Lupa Alatorre mentioned the lack of verbal communication technology brings upon, “I feel that we’re losing that sense of communication with one another.”

Other students also weighed in on the topic.

“I feel like it’s made us dumber, we research everything,” said student Joel Rodriguez.

“It’s good for certain things, but we start to lose our common sense.”

Student Jessica Payne felt that technology has assisted in our lives, from our entertainment, to our jobs, and our education, “We have such technology that memorizes for us, but with new inventions, it’s also educating us.”

PBS’ nextavenue.org brought to light how technology not necessarily makes us dumber or smarter, but is based solely on how we use it.

“Just because you can Google the date of Black Tuesday doesn’t mean you understand why the Great Depression happened or how it compares with our recent economic slump,” said NextAvenue.org.

NextAvenue.org continued to explain how the internet, in how we use it, can be both “our best friend—or a true enemy of deep, critical thinking.”

While use of technology has increased our intelligence it has also made us dependent upon its use. Because we depend upon its use we fail to pay attention to our surroundings because we are too busy looking at our gadgets.

Reality television can even be watched in the Student Union Game Room leaving people to wonder how much reality television can one watch without it becoming an obsession.

Celebrities not born to be role models
It is not the responsibility of celebrities to be role models, no one is perfect

By KATERINA MCCAULEY
Staff Writer

We attach too much meaning to the label “role model,” especially to people who are in the public eye. Some people feel that celebrities have the responsibility to be role models. I however would have to disagree. I don’t remember what celebrity I looked up to as a kid or even if I did. Today, I feel like there is a weird expectation that celebrities have to be kasher and squeaky clean in case there is an eight year old out there who thinks that celebrity is the best person ever.

Why should celebrities have the responsibility to be a role model? Is it just because they are in the public eye? And if that responsibility is such a big deal shouldn’t we only glorify the ones that behave “right?”

If that’s the case, what’s the definition of “right?” Liberal Studies student Michele Jimenez agrees celebrities do have the responsibility to be role models, because they are under the public eye.

Student Crystal Carrillo also agreed, she said, “Yes, they do have the responsibility, because of power and money, and they should use that and their image for things like charities.”

Most celebrities have no privacy, therefore they are under enormous pressure to be perfect. Society expects perfection from a small group of people, but we have to remember; celebrities are human too.

Student Sandra Mendoza doesn’t see celebrities as role models.

“I see them as entertainment. Everyone is a different person,” said Mendoza. Every year, there is always a new celebrity on ‘the bad one’ list.

The one that can’t have kids watching the show they starred in, or the one that kids can’t listen to their music any more; and this usually stems from a drunken tweet, a gossip magazine’s “new gory details of their private life”, or a picture that was supposed to be private.

As humans, we all have done things that we would run screaming from if the wrong people knew about it, so why do we judge celebrities so harshly?

Are you going to blame a celebrity for a kid mirroring a clothing choice said celebrity wears and not the person who bought it, or encouraged them to wear it? I won’t name any celebrities just to prove the point that this witch-hunt for perfect roles models puts any celebrity on ‘the bad one’ list.

Aside from celebrities being role models to kids, I think people have role models to help guide them to a goal they want, or to something that this person has been successful in.

It’s all for you as a person and the things you like, and for the celebrity as their own person with their passions. Celebrities as role models should be based on personal inspiration, and not on a responsibility owed to society.

As for having a celebrity role model as an adult, I think most students our age look up to people that inspire them, and think ‘this person has what I want in life, so I’m going to research their life, and follow their social media, and buy their products.

If they find something about the person that they don’t like or disagree with, you have two choices: get over it and move on or find another role model.

We may not be able to pronounce the name but with an arena that seats nearly 5,000 people, the Coussoulis Arena has been gathering crowds since it was built at CSUSB in 1995.

As students here, many of us do not know the history behind the arena that gathers thousands of people every year. In order to find out more about the arena I had to go to the Director of the Arena, Carol Dixon.

CSUSB’s Coussoulis arena is a 5,000-seat arena which opened in 1995. It was originally named the “James and Aerianthi Coussoulis Arena.”

Nick Coussoulis, son of James and Aerianthi, is a wealthy friend of this university who works in construction and development. He decided to give the gift of the arena with the intention of also putting the family name on the project.

I was intrigued by the fact that only one person contributed in the arena’s construction.

“In this community there aren’t a lot of people who can make major gifts,” said Dixon.

Before the arena was built, athletic events were held in the den, the building right across from Coussoulis arena.

The arena hosts a variety of events according to Dixon.

Events held here range from full-out rock concerts, hip hop concerts, comedy stage and banquets.

“We can serve thousands of guests for a sit down banquet to sporting events, disability fairs, Special Olympics, to basketball and volleyball tournaments,” continued Dixon.

With such a wide range of events, there is no denying the amount of money and people the venue brings in each year.

Dixon explained that on average the arena brings in anywhere from 70,000 to 90,000 people annually. And this does not include the athletic numbers, which vary year to year.

“Financially, in terms of special events that we do, we can come in at $25,000 dollars a year or we can come in at $100,000 dollars a year,” said Dixon.

“We can in all over the board and a lot of it is dependent on the athletic schedule.”

Since the arena opened in 1995, new renovations is the next question that comes to mind for this arena. Dixon explained that the arena had just gone through some slight renovations already.

New railings to the seats were just added in September.

As for what’s next for the arena is something Dixon has been preparing for since she got the job.

“Coming up next is Bill Cosby on November 16,” said Dixon. “He’s a legend along the B.B. King lines and he has made such tremendous strides as a humanitarian and his breaking down of stereotype barriers.”

It is safe to say with acts like Bill Cosby rolling through the arena, the Coussoulis family is proud to have their name across it.
Make home-cooked meals on a student budget

By COURTNEY MATA

We all know that life as a college student can have a big price tag. Students already have an obligation to pay for books and classes. We also know every one has to eat, that’s a fact.

Most students rely on Top Ramen to survive their college years. Not true!

“Top Ramen is good, but as a college student, I need more brain food,” said student Denice Ahumada.

Ahumada feels that the best way to save money is to create large meals and then save them. “Leftovers might not be everyone’s favorite, but it is definitely cheaper than going out to eat,” said Ahumada.

Ahumada’s favorite meals to create consist of rice, chicken and stir fry vegetables. “I love using rice, because it is cheap and filling,” said Ahumada.

When visiting her apartment, I was instantly greeted by an aroma of a home cooked meal. The cooking process can take up to an hour, but if you make enough food that will last you a week, then that’s not so shabbily of a wait time.

Ahumada explains that although leftovers can seem redundant, she’d probably get more tired of those fast food dollar menus.

Ahumada is not the only one that loves leftovers.

Student Sara Loza said, “The best way to save money on food is to go home for the weekend.”

Whenever Loza visits her family, she is sure to grab a take out box so she can grab some leftovers for the week.

“My mom always cooks and leaves lots of leftovers, which is better for me,” said Loza.

Leftovers are a great way to save money, but it is not the only way.

Many students told me that TV dinners, Top Ramen and canned food are also a cheap resource.

Another way to save money on food is to use coupons. The Coyote Coupon Club offers exclusive coupons for students.

Visiting websites like Pinterest can help you find recipes for cheap meals.

Recently, I explored my Pinterest and found many low cost recipes. One of them was called, “Poor Man’s Soup.”

Most of which are vegetarian or vegan, but also include a meat lovers pizza and BBQ chicken pizza, which I was told by a worker is one of their most popular.

It isn’t quite the level of a gourmet pizza restaurant, but it is definitely better than your average pizza delivery joint, and probably quicker.

I would recommend Pieology for anyone that is trying to find a quick and relatively healthy lunch spot at a reasonable price, regardless of what you choose to put on your pizza.

Pieology is not a spot I would recommend, if someone is seeking more of a restaurant-like atmosphere.

The ingredients were fresh and the overall food quality was exceptional for a gourmet personal pizza, in less than five minutes.

The shopping center and the building looked brand new.

I noticed an umbrella covered patio for outdoor dining, as well as a modern-looking inside, with air conditioning ducts running across the ceiling.

The overall aesthetic feel seemed very clean.

The atmosphere inside was more relaxed than a usual restaurant.

Since you pay and pick up your food at the end of the toppings line, I didn’t feel rushed or hurried unlike having someone wait on your table at a normal restaurant.

This also allowed me to leave as soon as I pleased.

Students find guidance at Counseling Center

Campus professionals are here to help and counsel students

By SUNG WI

Did you ever feel depressed? Having anxiety or sleeping problems? If yes, you might want to visit our Psychological Counseling Center (PCC). The PCC is located in the Student Health Center building next to the Santos Manuel Student Union (SMSU). The entrance is on the north-west side. Their goal is to provide professional counseling services to all students on campus.

The PCC is funded by the student health fee, included in our enrollment, so there is no additional cost for their services. You already pay for it. They offer different types of counseling from private to couple's counseling.

Counseling at the PCC offers a safe, confidential environment where students can share thoughts, feelings, explore concerns, gain awareness and make appropriate changes to their lifestyles. Many students have expressed that the center has helped them deal with difficult situations.

Counseling is completely confidential, so no one can be notified that the student patient uses the service including professors, deans or parents.

Students may attend one or more sessions with professional counselors as many times as they want. Anyone can make an appointment by visiting the center or contacting them by phone.

Their weekly hours are Monday and Thursday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday and Wednesday 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Friday 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and closed from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. everyday. The PCC also offers group counseling sessions that meet on a regular basis, so that students can interact with others.

The Psychological Counseling Center is open Monday through Friday, offering students professional guidance every day.

It's an interesting concept, isn't it? Paying the same price that is marked on the sticker. No matter how many people have tried to explain it to me, I still don't understand why the tax isn't included here as well.

It's something I never had to think about before arriving to California. Maybe it's a good thing, since it creates consumer awareness of how much tax we're actually paying. It does, however make it more difficult to budget your spending.

Instead of paying a flat rate for everything, you have to be a better friend, how to overcome ADHD and even more.

Group days and times are determined that students may contact PCC to set up and appointment.

They also offer wellness workshops that are beneficial to students in various aspects of their life such as tips for healthy eating, how to be a better friend, how to overcome ADHD and even more.

Workshop schedules and locations are available on the PCC website. If you need more information, visit their website: http://psychcounseling.csusb.edu/ or call (909) 537-5040.
Television enthusiasts rejoice over the ability to stream their shows from network websites, Netflix and YouTube.

A recent study by Neilson Research found that 37 percent of U.S. households watch television online. That can explain the spontaneous gasps or laughs coming from all those students during their break in between classes.

“I mostly watch Korean dramas online,” said Vanessa Robles. “My favorite show is Coffee Prince, it was my very first Korean drama and is amazing. The whole plot line, everything just pulls you into the story and you begin to feel what the characters feel.”

Chris Burns has been interested in two new shows released earlier this season and watches them as they air.

The Blacklist, on NBC is about a fugitive criminal of the FBI, who seems to be the mastermind behind all headaches.

The criminal, Robert Reddington, who claims the FBI and he has the same interests, that is, getting rid of dangerous criminals and terrorists.

In the last two decades, he’s made a list of criminals and terrorists he believes matter the most; a list the FBI doesn’t know exists. Reddington calls it The Blacklist.

“These shows are intense I also like ‘Breaking Bad,’ ‘Dexter’ and ‘The Walking Dead’,” said Burns.

Television purist Chelsea Galves tunes in every week to ABC Family to watch her beloved program.

“I started watching ‘Pretty Little Liars,’ while I was in high school and now that I’m a college junior, I still find myself watching the show at the air time, because I just can’t miss it,” said Galves.

Galves finds herself unable to miss an episode, needless to say she is hooked.

“It definitely feels like it’s become a culture, because all these people talk on Facebook about it, share ideas of potential plot twists and you can start a whole friendship on the question, ‘do you watch ‘Pretty Little Liars’?”

His favorite show is, “Doctor Who,” said De La Rosa. “There is always time for that and: The Walking Dead, Supernatural, New Girl, and Orange is the New Black, and The Blacklist. I love October.”

One thing is for certain, CSUSB television traditionalist and new-age media consumer alike are making time for TV shows new and old.

Did Miley take it too far?
Miley Cyrus and Sinead O’Connor battle over social media sites

By DEVIN RAMOS

A feud emerged between artists Sinead O’Connor and Miley Cyrus when O’Connor wrote a letter to the 20-year-old artist about her position in the music business.

The Irish singer/songwriter wrote to Cyrus on her website that “the music industry doesn’t give a sh about you, or any of us, they will prostitute you for all you are worth, and clearly make you think it’s what you wanted… don’t be fooled.” The letter came as a response to Cyrus’ music video to the song “Wrecking Ball” and her role in the MTV Music Video Awards in August 2013.

Cyrus responded to O’Connor by posting a photo of her tearing a photo of O’Connor’s face in a fit of anger.

She continued by tweeting, “Before Amanda Bynes… there was…,” and attaching a picture that contained a collection of Sinead O’Connor searching for a psychiatrist in Ireland.

O’Connor revealed on the Oprah Winfrey Show in 2008 that struggled with bipolar disorder and that she had attempted suicide on her 33rd birthday.

Cyrus’ mention of O’Connor’s mental illness caused O’Connor to respond in another letter on her website.

O’Connor wrote, “Have you any idea how stupid and dangerous it is to mock people suffering illness? You will one day suffer such illness that is without a doubt.” She continued by addressing her display on Saturday Night Live. “Furthermore, you posted a picture of me tearing the pope’s photo… By mocking it, you mock every child who suffered sexual abuse at the hands of priest’s and have it covered by the Vatican.”

In an interview with Matt Lauer on NBC’s Today Show, Miley Cyrus said, “I’m a big fan of hers and so it really doesn’t matter. You can write as many open letters as you want… it’s nothing too new to me.”

In her latest letter to Miley Cyrus, O’Connor says that she’s received numerous messages from Cyrus’ fans telling O’Connor to “kill herself” and that the tweets that Cyrus posted made O’Connor seem “unemployable,” because of the previous condition of her mental health.

O’Connor says, “No person, myself included, should have to wake up to the types of e-mails and communications I have had for the last few days urging that I should kill myself.”

“She should have it to have management write to half of the show-business world to explain my tweets were two-years-old and that I am very fit for work. I have four children to support. I can’t do that if people believe me to be unemployable,” stated O’Connor on her fourth letter to Miley.

Aida De La Rosa watches his show on television and invests in Netflx only content, like the popular series “Orange is the New Black.”

His favorite show is, “Doctor Who,” said De La Rosa. “There is always time for that and: The Walking Dead, Supernatural, New Girl, and Orange is the New Black, and The Blacklist. I love October.”

R.I.P. Hannah Montana
Miley Cyrus re-invents herself in new album Bangerz

Miley Cyrus makes it known that her Hannah Montana days are dead and gone as she shows the world her bigger side on her new album Bangerz. Miley Cyrus’ fourth studio album Bangerz was recently released Tuesday, Oct. 8.

Artists such as; Britney Spears, Nelly, Big Sean, Ludacris, and Future all lend their voices to tracks on Miley’s new album. A huge transformation from her previous albums, Miley attempts to rap in songs such as “Do My Thang” and expresses a more vulnerable side in songs “Wrecking Ball” and “Maybe You’re Right.” Hip-hop seems to be the biggest inspiration for Miley’s most recent album, but she still throws in her original pop sound.

According to Entertainment Weekly, “It also utterly fresh, a pop blitz from a hip-hop blueprint, and proof that Miley won’t settle for just shocking us... She’s obviously infatuated right now with hip-hop and its perennial drive for new and exotic sounds.” “Bangerz may be about breaking up and wailing out, but it also agitates for the future.”

Several songs in the album were primarily aimed and inspired by her troubled relationship with ex-fiancé Liam Hemsworth. She expresses how their relationship began crumbling and reveals how helpless she felt while knowing it was over before they officially called it quits.

This album is the first by Cyrus to be labeled as explicitly needing parental advisory. She has geared away from her younger fan base who helped rise her to fame by not only her explicit music, but her suggestive performances.

Recently, Miley has been making headlines with her provocative outfit choices and her outrageous performances, such as the now infamous 2013 MTV Video Music Awards. Following her VMA performance, Miley shocked audiences again with an outfit that hardly left much to the imagination at the iHeart Radio music festival.

Miley, now 26, is transitioning from childhood star to young adult and her music and image is a prime example of her growing and evolving into a young woman and not wanting to be recognized as an innocent little girl.

Miley has the talent and voice to make great music, however her new album Bangerz does not do her justice. She has an amazing vocal range and can really belt out those notes, but the only song that really reflects her true talent is “Wrecking Ball.”

Jim Farber, writer from the New York Daily News expresses his dismay by calling Miley’s new album a “disjointed mess that seeks to provoke instead of delight.” The album so far has been doing stupendous, already breaking records with selling over 250,000 in it’s opening week bringing Miley her highest album sells.

True fans of Miley Cyrus will notice that she is no longer staying true to how she has previously portrayed herself and that it shows in her music. The only tracks that show Miley’s true potential are ones she sings about her relationship while the rest sound like she is trying too hard to evolve into something she is not.

Aside from her new professional image, she is gearing her music to a new crowd and the younger crowd that once looked up to her will be influenced the wrong way.

Bangerz overall, was not Miley’s best work.

Though she has some catchy party tunes on the album, it is not the talent of Miley Cyrus her fans have seen from her in the past.

“Princess of Pop” is here to stay
Even stars of this decade cannot deny Britney Spears is an icon

Britney Spears is the original triple threat; singer, dancer, and actress. She’s had the crowd on their toes since the 90s when she was crowned the “Princess of Pop.” It all started with her jump start into the entertainment industry on Disney’s. From 1993–1995 Britney was a member of the Mickey Mouse Club when she was only 12 alongside Justin Timberlake, Ryan Gosling, and Christina Aguilera.

Ever since her breakout role as a child, Britney has been put under the microscope of the media. Her growth as an entertainer and her icon has been epic, making her the “good girl gone wild.”

Selena Gomez is the all-time super fan of Britney Spears. Gomez says that Britney has been her inspiration to become a performer since she can remember. She loves and adores Britney and is obsessed with her elaborate dance routines. Her favorite Britney moment is when the epic music video of “I’m a Slave 4 U” was released.

Upon releasing her new single and music video for “Work Bch,” which has over 20 million YouTube views, Britney is also going to be starting a Vegas tour this December going into February, of next year.

Recently Britney collaborated on Cyrus’ new album featuring on single “SMS (Bangerz)”. Britney Spears is universal and helped transform the world of pop.

She continues to inspire many artists and it seems like this pop princess isn’t going to be stopping her career any time soon.

Miley Cyrus has tried her best to maintain a better life and persevere in her career. Throughout her career she has pushed the world of pop.

Of course with every triumph there is also going to be stopping her career any time soon. Her growth as an entertainer has been put under the microscope of the media. Her favorite Britney moment is when the "Blackout" bonus track album featuring popular songs like, “Piece of Me” and “Gimme More”.

Even fellow pop stars are huge fans of Britney such as; Demi Lovato, Miley Cyrus, and Selena Gomez.

Student Sarah Khooravanzadeh, expressed her favorite Britney moment was the release of the "Blackout" bonus track album featuring popular songs like, “Piece of Me” and “Gimme More”.

Britney has gone as far as to ban her entourage from drinking alcohol around her as she was determined to stay sober since rehab back in 2007. TMZ stated, “the strict booze ban was too much for the pop princess’ entourage to take, and the second she retired for the night, they hit the bar hard.”

Students are still able to find their inspiration in the amazing talent of Britney Spears.
Trance music consists of a variety of synth sounds, electronica, danceable beats, subtle buildup, and breakdown with instrumentals and DJ skills.

To stand out in the scene what seem to be imitations of static and repetition, Andre Tanneberger, better known as ATB, knows what it takes to dominate LA dance floors on Oct. 5th at the Hollywood Palladium, with his musical persona.

ATB is one of the most famous producers and musicians for electronic dance music (EDM), especially in the trance sector.

When performing live, ATB is in complete control of the audience taking them on a journey that passes through beautiful melodies, intense build-ups, and epic drops.

He took center stage and created an exceptional performance.

This was not ATB’s ordinary DJ set; it was an experience comprised of a band including a drummer, guitarist, bassist, and keyboardist.

ATB was joined with singers who were featured on his previous albums and shared his exclusive tracks from his forthcoming album Contact, out this December.

Artists who performed included Ramona Nerra “Never give up,” Sean Ryan “All I Need is you,” Jon Lochel “What About Us” and “Move On.” Tiff Lacey performed “My Everything,” as well as special performances by JES and Stanfour.

He played his famous hits including: “9pm,” “Distant Earth,” “Ecstasy,” “Let U Go,” “I Don’t Wanna Stop,” and “Apollo Road.”

Cris Novoa, a longtime fan of ATB stated, “The collection of artists that ATB collaborated with and playing his new tracks completely astonished me. The performance was amazing and brought so much euphoric.”

ATB guaranteed his live tour would be an exceptional show and unlike any other performance.

CSUSB student Nadia Kahil believed that this unique was extraordinary in contrast to any other event she has partaken in.

“The experience was amazing. Having a band with the DJ and performing the music live was inspiring. Knowing the music wasn’t pre-recorded made ATB standout amongst all other DJs I’ve seen. It made my night above and beyond what I expected,” said Oscar Laddaga.

ATB proved that his creativity does not stop in the DJ booth; he went in front of his audience and presented a guitar solo that was unexpected.

He kicked off his tour in San Francisco and is currently heading to the big cities of Chicago and New York, which is his last stop.

LA holds events for the biggest electronic music artists including Kaskade, Deadmau5, Above & Beyond, Dash Berlin and included ATB’s live concert, that took over LA’s EDM scene.

The Hollywood Palladium was the perfect venue located on Sunset Blvd. The venue gave the entire audience a great view of the musicians and of course ATB.

ATB has always been close to his fans and his live concert proves it.

The music was presented to the fans live directly with energy, passion, and bringing an amazing set.

His sets serve as a universal language for his audience around the world.

With massive success comes a massive following, and I am impressed to find a DJ that gives back to his fans.

Coyote soccer team frustrated over defeat

By MIKE SESSIONS

The CSUSB men’s soccer team fell short once again as they traveled to Seaside against Cal State Monterey Bay.

The Coyotes extended their losing streak to six games, playing their hearts out only to come up short in the end. There comes a time when a team faces adversity and challenges, only to be used as fuel for the future. This could be one of those times.

In the first period of the game, the Coyotes battled the Otters back and forth for supremacy on the field, utilizing their various foot techniques to score a goal.

In what seemed to be a game changing move, star Senior Lee Nishanian came across an opportunity with an off corner kick and he took it, scoring the game’s first goal and his first goal of the season.

Nishanian, who started 53 out of 54 games last season, understood what it was going to take to secure the win, and he wasn’t going to stop until that was accomplished.

It wasn’t over, however. The Otters had other plans during the second period of the game, coming together to play at a higher level than the previously played.

6-1 freshman Chris Koski of CSUMB has no prior varsity experience in high school and put the team on his shoulders after a straight goal shot with the assist from Julian Salas.

The tie game appeared to rattle the Coyotes and the Otters utilized their home field to take the momentum.

Sweat dripping from the brows of the players under the clear skies and sunny Seaside California, the Coyotes were determined to score the next goal and put away the lead for good. In this case, unfortunately, things just wouldn’t work out as much as they’d hope.

CSUMB ended up in a slump, where the Otters were called for too many foul calls. Then a shot attempt by freshman Carlos Bailon was blocked. After a few substitutions from both teams, CSUMB were ready for the next move.

Forward Alberto Anguiano, with the assist of junior Max Madrigal scored the last and final goal of the game, putting the Otters up 2-1 in front of their home crowd.

In a frustrating loss, junior Andy Reyes could only reflect on the outcome, and how things could’ve been different. “Late we haven’t had the results we would want, I got injured in the second game of the season. That took me out for eight games, I just started playing this last weekend” said Reyes.

The Coyotes would love to have all of their players available to play, as one player could possibly make a huge difference in this outcome.

However, these are the conditions they are placed in, and therefore they have to move forward and hope things will progress during the rest of the season.

Maybe this is one of those times that adversity strikes, but let’s hope this is also that frustrating situation we’d like from our Coyotes, “Make never meant to happen, happen,” says Reyes.

Best of luck to our players in their upcoming games! Come and support them on one of their home games. Let’s go ‘Yotes!

Cross country girls sprint to finish line

Coyote's Women Soccer goalkeeper and senior captain Chelsey Jones is halfway through her final season with the Coyotes. Jones recently received her second California Collegiate Athletic Association player of the week honor after holding Cal State Dominguez Hills and Cal State Los Angeles scoreless in 1-0 victories. Furthermore, Jones now leads the CCAA with seven overall shutouts this season.

As a child, her parents called her the fire engine, because of how much energy she had, so family friends suggested to get Jones involved in sports.

That is when Jones’ journey began, starting with being a member of the undefeated Green Iguanas of the Hesperia Youth Soccer League.

Jones went on to play at Sultana High School. In her senior year the team won the California Interscholastic Federation Southern Section championship.

Jones was awarded CIF Defensive Player of the year and second team all league honors.

She graduated in the top one percent of her class and was awarded Valedictorian. Jones then received a Presidential Scholarship to attend CSUSB with no intent to play soccer.

“Everything that I’ve done in life has worked out, because I have persisted with it and have believed in myself the entire time,” said Jones.

In the Summer 2009, Jones tried out for the Coyote soccer team; at that time the team already had three other goalkeepers.

However coach Travis Clarke wanted Jones on the team as his fourth string goalkeeper because of her hard work and dedication. “Her tryout was so good, her attitude and how hard she worked, I just thought it would be infectious to the team,” said Clarke.

She went on to redshirt her first season playing no minutes, and very limited in her second year. “If you have a goal in your mind and you work hard you will reach that goal. Many times you will need to persevere through tough times in order to succeed,” said Jones.

In her third year, the team was struggling during the start of the season. Jones was inserted as the starting goalkeeper in an attempt to create a spark. She helped the team to the school record eight game unbeaten streak. “I got the opportunity and the chance to prove myself,” said Jones.

As a junior Jones was named CSUSB’s Female Scholar Athlete of the Year. “She went from a walk-on player to a scholar-ship player to possibly the best goalkeeper in this school history. It’s a remarkable story,” said Clarke.

Jones’s dedication and support from her family have been her motivation, as she gets ready to pursue her career in becoming an elementary school teacher.

This last year is bittersweet for Jones as her time playing for the Coyotes is coming to an end. Jones’ final home game as a Coyote is Friday Nov. 1 against Chico State University.

Jones commends her teammates, “This is the best team I have ever been a part of, thank you for giving me some of the best memories in my life,” said Jones.
