Tickets are now on sale through ETM.com. “An Evening with Nancy Wilson” will be held at the Riverside Convention Center on Friday, July 8. Proceeds from the event will benefit Alternatives to Domestic Violence (ADV), the 20-year-old domestic violence agency serving western Riverside County.

Among other major sponsors is Texaco, a Partner in a Black Enterprise.

For the event with Wilson, one of America’s leading jazz vocalists, the Convention Center will be transformed into a dinner theater. The evening will begin with cocktails at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m. Wilson hosted by the Mission In after the performance. The Mission Inn will be offering a special guest room rate for concert-goers.

Tickets will be $55 for general dining and $525 for seating at the Head Start at 12 p.m. For tickets are available through ETM.com, which opens kitchens at all locations. Texaco also offers a special ticket package through www.etm.com. Nancy Wilson hosted by the Mission In after the performance. Texaco Oil Corporation, headed by its African American female distributor-partner, Helen Crawley, is charging Texaco with refusing to do business with the company, according to a complaint made under Target 2000 program.

Rev. Jakes, chairman of the Christian Council of Urban Affairs and former chairman of NAACP (Westside Branch) is calling for community support in his efforts to have Texaco justify its record on corporate diversity and help minorities.

Rev. Jakes, according to a complaint made under Target 2000 program, filed a complaint of a civil rights lawsuit on July 28, 1999, as both Cheryl and Hardy Blankenship. He continued: “I then asked for the log number of my recorded phone call, and “received the number P992120154. Another ironic part of our lives is that the police also subsequently spoke with the Brown’s attorney Mark Tucker, a partner in the Westside Story Newspaper, who were on the scene and had spoken personally to the officer. The officer who was asked to take the police report refused to do so, according to Blankenship, that “the scene was not as I was requesting a report from Officer No. 102,” stated Attorney Blankenship. “As a matter of fact, I think it is interesting to note that, according to Blankenship, that “the scene was not as I was requesting a report from Officer No. 102,” stated Attorney Blankenship.

Dr. Amos Isaac

Dr. Amos Isaac, who garnered 5,241 votes as a candidate for the Redlands Unified School District in 1997, has again thrown his hat into the ring for a seat on that board. He missed being elected in 1997 by 414 votes.

There are 35 school districts in San Bernardino County. The Redlands Unified School District is the sixth largest district in the county. Its student enrollment exceeds 18,500, it has more than 1,200 employees, and its 1999/2000 budget will exceed $100.4 million.

Communities in the Redlands service area are Redlands, Loma Linda, Mentone, East Falls, Highland, the southeastern tip of San Bernardino, and Forest Falls.

Dr. Isaac notes that the extent to which any school district provides quality education to all of its students is directly proportional to voter turnout. In 1997, only 23.7% of the 51,000 registered voters in the Redlands school district area cast their balls in that race.

Voters are urged to attend candidates' forums that may be scheduled, and cast their ballots on election day.

For information on Dr. Isaac's campaign, call (909) 335-9115 or fax (909) 748-0099.

NBA's young stars come out to play in all-star game

Magical Weekend will again benefit deserving students

SPORTING STEIN'S WAY

Magic's Philanthropy efforts are becoming en vogue in sporting community

LOS ANGELES - Martin Luther King wrote: "Our tent-making task is to discover how to organize our strength into compelling power."

In the past, the task of collective empowerment King wrote about is generally not associated with athletes; however, more and more of today's professional athletes are becoming socially conscious of the environment they inhabit.

Earvin Johnson Jr. is one person, in particular, who has embraced the "tent-making task," of organizing our strength.

"The plural precious King used, of course, refers to the ability of African-Americans to work collectively for their own communities...still, the plural "our," the way King used it, is also holistic in its application to all of humanity.

Based on my synopsis of Johnson's 5th annual "Midsummer Night's Magic," fundraising weekend, I say Johnson and the Magic Johnson Foundation are great in spurring King's "our" to humanity.

Johnson, nicknamed "Magic," was indeed Magic on the basketball court.

During his illustrious 13-year career in the National Basketball Association (NBA), Johnson led the Los Angeles Lakers to free NBA titles. Additionally, he won three MVP awards and played on the 1992 original "Dream Team" which won gold in Barcelona, Spain.

Although Magic fashioned a Hall of Fame career on the hardwood, it's his post-basketball life that's elevating him to the upper echelon in the business and philanthropy community.

Johnson and the leaders of his Foundation have implemented an impressive array of corporate partnerships that is working collectively to meet the Foundation's mission and purpose to...support community based organizations that serve the educational, health and social needs of those residing in inner-city communities.

"I'm very proud of the effort our Foundation has put out," Johnson plainly noted. "We were able to make a significant contribution is The Tom Joyner Foundation, which helps the Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCU). Plus, my Foundation awarded 20 scholarships to deserving Los Angeles students.

"The "Midsummer Night's Magic" weekend has grown to almost a week. It started this year with a Cousins Jazz Reception, which had a silent auction of a new line of goggles that started at $10,000, with the winner to be announced at Menlo's golf tournament. Next, Whitney Houston took over the next two days at the Universal Amphitheatre.

"Having a multi-talented star like Whitney Houston supporting the Foundation means so much," Johnson said. "...in all the deserving high school and college students who will benefit from her generosity." On top of all this was Sunday's March Glitz Carnival. First, the evening started with a VIP reception and corporate party, which honored the long standing philanthropic efforts of supersnaxx industry executive Ron Burke. The food of the evening had a distinctly New Orleans flair.

After the reception, the party flowed to the Sony Backlot where food and music awaited at every turn. There were at least four separate bands playing throughout the Backlot. Over there was ragtime...over there was pop...over there was calypso. And to top it off, up on the main stage wrecking shop was Deborah Cox, Eric Benet and K-C and JoJo.

The atmosphere created at the Magic Johnson party was the perfect environment to raise awareness about Sony's Backlot, its looks and commercials.

"This is a perfect party," said photographer Hassan Ali Bala. "People are moving about and there's no trouble, and, did you notice, no alcohol to check for the game. I like that. Beautiful people having a beautiful time, and it's for a worthy cause.

The Sunday All-Star Basketball game is always a highlight of summer's social consciousness in Los Angeles.

This year's game prided the best young talent in the NBA. Give Magic credit, or the NBA if whatever game it was. But this game should be a模板m dairy to the showcase of the coming -- and that's how the past Michael Jordan NBA is going to look.

On display was the NBA's leading scorer Allen Iverson, who scored 41 points, and the Rookie of the Year, Vince Carter, who slammed home 32 points. Other young stars competing were Tracy McGrady, Gary Payton, Anfernee Walker, Robert Traylor, Maurice Taylor, Tracy Murray and Paul Pierce.

Also entertaining the Forum crowd of over 15,000 were the NBA's top draft picks, The No. 1 pick Elton Brand, and first round picks Corey Maggette, Steve Francis, and Brian Davis all lent its considerable skills to the charity game.

"This generation of players have arrived," said Johnson after running up and down the court with the youngsters for 60 minutes.

"If you put the pizzazz, or the situation like this, it's easy to want to work to get back there. These are great dudes.

This was the weekend all about the fans and the kids. Events like this show people what kind of young men are in the NBA and it keeps them longer after and connected with the people.

It's  exhilarating for me to see a very successful college classic -- the more at Michigan State University do more than just make it.

This summer, Magic has grown considerably and he understands that his existence is more than his individual talents. His philanthropy and charitable gifts to others to the Foundation, as you're enough that his vision of the world he moves in is not a singular one. You're on the right track Magic, don't deviate...please!
