Chronicle Editor Selected
by Meach Campbell

Tuesday, May 15, the Media Commission chose a new Editor-in-Chief for the Cal State Chronicle for the 1984-85 school year. Dianne Lang, who is presently the business manager for the paper, will accept her appointment as head of the chronicle staff next year. Ms. Lang who is a transfer business manager for the Cal State, San Bernardino campus as the Players of the 20th century, during the Edwardian period," Sloat says. "She takes aggressive action when she dresses as a man trying to earn his 'pound of flesh.' She's a modern lady." Additional cast members include: Mark Duncan, Scott Roberts, Michael Galyon, Keith Hearon, Lonnie Gasaway is the stage manager. Wheelchair access is also available.

Fall Class Schedule Changes

With the Fall 1984 class schedule, the campus is changing from its traditional four day pattern of scheduling courses.

The new format will schedule courses in three day and two day blocks, with Monday-Wednesday-Friday courses meeting two days for seventy minute periods and a sixty minute period on Friday, and Tuesday-Thursday classes meeting for two one hundred minute periods.

After 4 p.m. most classes will continue to meet in the previous pattern of Monday through Thursday, either two nights a week for one hundred minute blocks or a 200 minute block once a week.

Check the starting and ending times for each class carefully when selecting your schedule in order to avoid overlapping courses. Some laboratory, studio, and activity courses do not conform to the typical pattern for lecture/discussion classes. A chart will be available on page 39 of the Fall Class Schedule for your scheduling convenience.

"There are a lot of interesting things that happen outside of this campus that the students would like to know of. The events would of course, still be student related and would make some interesting feature articles."

Although she doesn't plan to pursue a career in the media, Dianne does feel that her experience with the Chronicle will be quite rewarding. Since she deals with people often she feels this will give her added insight in her new job. Right now Dianne is doing her internship as a volunteer for Victim Support Services in San Bernardino and sexual Assault Services also located in San Bernardino. She serves as a counselor for both these services. Present Editor-in-Chief, Kathy Yount, feels very good about her past experience with the paper. Ms. Yount has held her position for the past year during which she, along with her staff, have accomplished several things.

MANAGEMENT LECTURER DIES UNEXPECTEDLY

Dr. Peter Bouvier, 41, lecturer in management in the School of Business and Public Administration, died unexpectedly in his Redlands home late Wednesday or early Thursday.

Dr. Bouvier, who joined the Cal State faculty on a part-time basis last September, had taught Wednesday evening and returned home. He was found in the den of the family home Thursday morning by his wife, Danielle. The coroner's office said the death was non-traumatic and an autopsy was planned.

Merchant Of Venice Starts Thursday

by Richard McGee

The sounds of Shakespeare will once again be heard at Cal State as the Players of the Merchant of Venice, which opens next Thursday. Ticket prices are $2.50 for students and senior citizens. Dates for the play are May 24, 25, 26, 30, 31 and June 1 and 2, with all performances beginning at 8:15 p.m.

"We started rehearsals the first day of class, and have had rehearsals every weeknight from 7 to 10:30," said Dr. William Sloat, Theatre Arts Professor and the play's director. "All the students get out of this is two units, plus a little ego trip," Dr. Sloat said. "Calling The Merchant of Venice a "romantic melodrama," Sloat described the play as "sentiments of lovers, plus the thrill of certain revenge motives."

"The setting of the play has been updated to the early 20th century, during the Edwardian period," Sloat said, "and has been enhanced by period costumes made specifically for this play, plus music by Richard Strauss.

The Merchant of Venice tells the story of Shylock, the Jewish merchant demanding his 'pound of flesh' in repayment of a loan. Although the character of Shylock has often been portrayed comically, Sloat disagrees: "In the modernization of Shylock, one has to find certain sympathetic in the situation that he was placed in, he had a side that was very sympathetic."

The character of Shylock will be portrayed by Bill Greely, with Portia, the beautiful heiress, played by Nancy Lemmon. "Portia adapts very easily to modernization," Sloat says. "She takes aggressive action when she dresses as a man trying to earn her 'pound of flesh.' She's a modern lady."

Additional cast members include: Mark Duncan, Scott Roberts, Michael Galyon, Keith Hearon, Lonnie Lapount, Mary Manthis, Clayton Martinez, Bruch Mullinex, David Pavan, Mark Peters, Gary Roberson, Jaqueline Rosalas, Shannon Robin and Vicki Smith. Amber Talvi is the assistant director, and Penny Gasaway is the stage manager. Reservations can be made by calling 887-7452.

Nominations from Clubs for Club of the Year awards are now being accepted by Clare Sharafinski, Activities Advisor.

The Club of the Year Award represents Activities Office recognition of superior achievement by a student club or organization. Competition is open to all recognized clubs and organizations on campus. The winner of this award last year was Psi Chi.

The Club of the Year Award is decided by these criteria:

1) Number of meetings during the year.
2) Special events sponsored (fundraisers, lectures, luncheons, etc.)
3) Participation in college-wide events (e.g., Fall Festival, Open House, Springfest, etc.)
4) Community service projects.
5) Number of active club members.
6) Compliance with college regulations and procedures.

"If your club or organization wishes to compete for the Club of the Year Award, please complete the nomination form as soon as possible and return it to me in the Activities Office, SS 122, by Wednesday, May 23. The winner will be announced at the Club Merit Awards Reception May 31 at 2 p.m. in the Lower Commons. All club members and advisors will receive an invitation to attend. The Club of the Year is selected by committee from the Activities Office and Associated Students," said Sharafinski.

Each potential candidate is required to write a campaign statement (75 words in length) describing his/her desire and qualifications to assume the responsibilities of the A.S. Activities Officer.

The Committee for Clubs, established by the A.S. Executive Order as a viable mechanism to advise, coordinate, and provide financial assistance for the activities of campus clubs and organizations, is currently functioning as an Administrative Committee of Associated Students.

The Committee for Clubs' functions are:

1) Review and decide upon monetary requests from student organizations;
2) Advise and assist student groups;
3) Provide communication between the various clubs on campus;
4) Aid in the coordination of sponsored club activities.

Each organization recognized under the procedure for formally recognizing student organizations on campus is eligible for membership in Committee for Clubs. Each organization is entitled to one voting representative to elect Executive Board members.

Springfest

by Greg Timpany

It looked like a scene from Balboa beach, but in fact it was the Springfest. This year's Springfest carried a "Beach Party" theme, and a majority of those who attended appeared as if they were on their way to Hawaii. There was food, music, exotic dancers, food, games and more food. A majority of the clubs participating this year offered some sort of food.

The San Andreas Geographical Association (SAGA) was offering Teriyaki Beef Strips. According to SAGA president Blaine Osborn the money raised was going to be used to finance upcoming projects, including a trip to Solar One in Dagget. The Black Student Union (BSU) was offering chilli-dogs for sale. The Finance Association was present with their "get rich quick" coin toss game.

The Cal State Organization for College Women cornered the market with their Dunking Tank. Many students and administrators dared to take the plunge. Included in the group were Deans Wilson and Kajcinski, and students Dexter Wash and Chris Phelps. The Cal State Marketing Association's president, Mitch Slagerman, and a group of diehard followers, camped out overnight to ensure a good location for their "Tio Elmo's" booth. The CSMA also sold handicrafts for the Association for the Retarded Citizens. According to Mitch Slagerman "the troubles were well worth it." The CSMA booth was awarded "best booth in the Springfest.

Other clubs and organizations on hand included MECHA, the Business Management Club, Sigma Beta Upsilon, USOCA, the International Students Association, the German Club, and many more. In addition to the food and drink their was live music. Many students took their lunch to the grass knoll outside the Commons and listened to the sounds of AUGUST and COMMON BOND. The latter being a Christian Rock trio from the L.A. area. Their sound was that of a seasoned outfit, blending elements of blues and more mainstream rock into an interesting sound. Their next area performance is at Knotts Berry Farm on May 25. They are well worth the drive to see.

The addition of booths, as opposed to just tables, gave the fest a "Carnival" like atmosphere. According to Activities Coordinator Clare Sharafinski, the fest was the "best of the year."
Exotic dancers were a special attraction at this year's Springfest.

CSCOW's dunk tank was a huge success.

I am back in action this week with "Caught in the Act" by Styx. This is the latest release by our Stygian heroes. The album was recorded during last year's "Kilroy Was Here" Tour. Being a fanatic about "This Time" albums, I jumped at the chance to do a review on this album. I have not been following the band closely since they released their "Pieces of Eight" album. The fact, however, brings back a lot of the raw energy missing on their last three albums. In addition to being energetic, "Caught in the Act," presents a good cross section of the band's material.

Side One leads off with "Music Time." I don't think that this cut is live, but never-the-less it is an up-tempo rocker. The next track is an alive version of "Mr. Roboto." This song reminds me very much of past Queen material with its layers of vocals. Tommy Shaw steps up to the plate with his "Too Much Time On My Hands." I wish I had his problems! The side ends with a relaxed version of "Bebe." This track comes complete with the Dennis De Young trademark of flowing piano work and soaring vocals.

Side Two follows with a soliloquy by James Young on the subject of Backwards Masking. This makes for an effective intro for "Snow Blind." Mr. Young steps out with his six-string on this track. Next we take a trip back into time to visit the "Paradise Theater." Dennis De Young once again proves his vocal and piano capabilities on "Best of Times." The side takes a trip even farther back into the archives for a classic version of "Suite Madame Blue." This version mixes the classic power guitar with swirling synthesizer lines.

Side Three keeps up the pace with a white-hot version of "Rockin' The Paradise." This is followed by an organ solo from Dennis De Young, which leads into "Blue Collar Man." Tommy Shaw's vocals give the song a strong sense of urgency. James Young follows with a growing version of "Miss America." Young's anglered vocals blend well with his down-and-dirty guitar style. The side ends with another De Young ballad, entitled "Don't Let It End."

"Foolin' Yourself," opens side four. This is one of Tommy Shaw's better songs. It provides a much needed break, in the form of flowing acoustic guitar lines. The acoustic guitars are coupled with fast moving synthesizer lines, and passionate vocals on "Crystal Ball." Bringing the album to a close is an extended version of "Come Sail Away." The song sounds as good as it did when it first came out in 1977.

This album has retrieved my interest in Styx which has been lost somewhere in Hades for the last couple of years. An added bonus for the real Styx fan is the abundance of good concert pictures. This is a band that takes its strength in the form of three very competent songwriters. A weakness that could pull them apart is letting one person take control of the band. In the case of Styx a little competition amongst songwriters is healthy.

2) From what city do Styx hail from?
3) What song was the subject of Styx's first video?

The Executive Board consists of six members. Three members are elected from the membership of the Committee for Clubs:

The Chairperson calls meetings; presides over Executive Board and all general meetings; coordinates all business and is an ex-officio member of all committees.

The Secretary records minutes of Executive Board and general meetings; distributes minutes to all members of the Committee for Clubs and the A.S. Senate; handles all Committee for Clubs correspondence.

The Treasurer is responsible for budgetary matters including: a financial report due at each Executive Board and general meeting, and a financial statement due on the 15th of each month; presides over Committee for Clubs meeting in absence of the chairperson.

Three positions will be reserved for members of the A.S. Activities Committees; these persons will be appointed by the Chairperson of the A.S. Activities Committee.

HEALTH CORNER

High Fiber Diet Information

This is a weekly column. If you have any health-related questions that you would like answered, drop your questions in the box in the Health Center Lobby.

1. Do Oral Contraceptives Cause Cancer?

Since the introduction of oral contraceptives, many investigations have been conducted to see if there was any relationship. The studies have demonstrated that oral contraceptives appear to have a protective effect against ovarian and endometrial cancer (lining of the uterus). Actually the studies revealed the longer a woman used oral contraceptives, the lower the risk of ovarian cancer.

As for breast cancer, the Food and Drug Administration has concluded that there appears to be no increased risk of breast cancer with any particular type of oral contraceptive. Based on recent studies, the FDA concludes that there may be an increased risk of cervical (exposed part of the uterus) cancer among the oral contraceptive users.

We say again that women taking oral contraceptives should be followed closely and have a yearly gynecological smear done. This is the easiest way to detect cancer of the cervix.

2. It Has Been Stated That Eating High Fiber Foods Reduces Cancer Of The Colon. What Are Some Of The High Fiber Common Foods?

Yes, it is true that eating high fiber foods does reduce the chance of one developing cancer of the colon. The best example of this is demonstrated by the fact that cancer of the colon is seen much less frequently in natives of Africa that live out in the more or less uncivilized areas. They are known to eat roots, vegetables and berries that grow wild.

Bran in any form-powder, cereal or bread is one of our best fiber foods. Berries, leafy vegetables, nuts, raw fruits, and most cereals are other high fiber foods. Try to eat bran, vegetables and berries that grow wild.

4. What Is Jock Itch And What Do You Do For It?

Tinea Cruris, commonly known as jock itch, is a fungus infection involving the skin of the groin, perineum and perianal regions. flare-ups occur most frequently during the summer. Tight clothing and obesity contribute to the problem.

You can help prevent jock itch by avoiding clothing which prevents air flow, wearing all cotton underwear which breathes, and by using talcum powder or any of the antifungal powders which can be purchased over the counter. Examples of these are tinactin and lotrimin powders. The treatment for jock itch consists of topically applied antifungal creams, such as tinactin or desenex, which are over-the-counter products, or by prescription with Miconazol creme, 2%, or Lotrinan cream, 1%. In some cases, griseofulvin taken orally may be needed for 3 to 4 weeks.

Works in photography, graphic arts and painting by five art majors, will comprise the Senior Show opening Wednesday, May 23 in the Art Gallery at Cal State. Exhibitors are Grace Ferrmer of Redlands, with graphic arts; Wilhelmina Kersey-van Stigt Thans of Riverside, photography; Donna Morin of Loma Linda, painting; Karen Wilmot of Redlands, graphic arts; and Karen Wood of Big Bear Lake, painting.

A reception to honor the artists will open the exhibit at 7 p.m., Wednesday, May 23. Show hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The exhibit will close June 1.

Mrs. Ferrmer, a graphic artist for a Redlands firm, will exhibit a graphic design package for a fictional, nonprofit company.

Ms. Kersey-van Stigt Thans will show large photo murals featuring people or animals from her farm.

Ms. Morin draws upon symbols such as triangles, squares and lines for her inspiration.

Mrs. Wilmot, a free-lance graphic artist in Redlands, will show a design package for a real estate company which specializes in older homes. It includes logos, letterheads, advertising art and even the “for sale” signs the fictional company would use.

Ms. Wood, who plans a career in pop art, will show large watercolors. Her works, as large as three feet by four feet, feature detailed shapes and intense colors.

The Color Purple

by Alice Walker

She is poor; she is black; but mostly she is female. Alice Walker’s Celie needs to show her self and yet has just one friend willing to listen, God. In The Color Purple, we are invited with her made privy to letters addressed first to God and then to Nettie, her lost sister. As we accustom ourselves to her rural black dialect, we begin to experience life according to Celie. Then suddenly, we realize that unnumbered by lofty language, Celie, nevertheless, communicates lofty ideas. We nod and may even agree, I think she when learning “white talk” since it, “Look to me only a fool would want you to talk in a way that feels peculiar to your mind.”

In this novel, each of Walker’s female characters chooses to face life her own way: Sophia strikes out; Nettie sacrifices; Mary Agnes struggles with dreams; Shug lives her passions; and Celie survives—“I am poor, I’m black, I may be ugly and can’t cook, a voice say to everything listening. But I’m here.” Despite differences in style, however, they all share in a common problem. Celie, Shug, Nettie, Sophia and Mary Agnes are both black and female living in a society not all female. Bound by the roles they learned as children, men like Harpo and Mr.—(Her remains nameless)—create their own misery when they turn away from happiness to appease tradition.

In her simple way, Celie demands that we acknowledge evil and despair; however, she is not a character without hope. Indeed, hope for Celie, although elusive, offers seeds in ground we discount as sterile. She sees hope for Shug when others declare her lost and hope for Mr— despite “evil he done” because “he look like he trying to make something out of himself.”

Shug who notes God’s presence in everything says to Celie, “I think it passes God off if you walk by the color purple in a field somewhere and don’t notice it.” All Alice Walker’s women, despite their bruises, seem to notice.

Pet Sematary

by Stephen King

For those of you who see horror and/or supernatural fiction as a genre in English literature which deserves to be taken seriously, Stephen King is the most important figure to emerge since Henry James and Edith Wharton perfected the ghost story, during the first half of this century. King’s style speaks the native tongue of post-60’s America, which tempts us to see his work as being strictly intended for entertainment; but in Pet Sematary he probes psychological depths rarely touched on in speculative literature. In fact, if considered strictly as a supernatural piece, this novel has problems with its structure, the pacing of its intended impact on the reader, because its author has introduced material that doesn’t fit easily into a supernatural pattern.

As horror fiction progresses in a more or less conventional manner until King begins to deal with feelings of a parent after the death of a child. This section of the novel is believably poignant; the reader finds himself seriously depressed and upset, as if dealing with a real-life problem. It is a passage of uncompromising honesty and sensitivity, a tour de force on the theme of human grief. As literature of value, it is its own justification; as a part of the overall structure of the book, it causes problems. A character in a realistic novel would be able to go through a lot of changes for us, until we were satisfied that he had come through the tragedy and resolved it for himself. The transition from grief to normal life could be handled gently in the book, and would take plenty of space—easily as much as King had written already, making a novel of 500 pages or so.

In a supernatural milieu, lengthy novels are difficult to sustain because of the simultaneous strain of the reader’s credibility and the continuous expectation by the reader of thrilling events. A horror story that metamorphosed into a psychological study halfway through would be particularly unsatisfying, and besides, King intends for his central character not to work through his situation, but to succumb to it. Obviously a lengthy resolution is out. So...

Nuclear Exchange Between U.S. and Soviet Union
by Dr. Robert Cramer

Experts and nonexperts have frequently debated the ramifications of a nuclear exchange between the United States and the Soviet Union. The dominant attitude has been that the effects would probably be temporary and survivable. Few were prepared for the fact that with the proper preparation a substantial number of humanity would survive and continue to practice the governing principles of the nations involved. Many of us vividly remember the disaster drills we rehearsed in the late 50's. The most recent event included an interesting alternative. If the northern mid-latitudes were rendered uninhabitable it was proposed that people in the Southern Hemisphere would escape the holocaust and would continue to pursue the dreams of humankind. Only the most ardent doomsayers attempted to convince the populace that a global catastrophe of massive proportions was possible.

Several scholars however, most notably Paul Erlich and Carl Sagan have argued that following a large scale nuclear exchange a nuclear winter could push our species, as well as many others, permanently close to the brink of extinction. The nuclear winter scenario predicts several long term environmental effects such as subfreezing temperatures, low light levels, and high doses of ultraviolet radiation. The biological consequences include massive starvation, and the likely extinction of many of the Earth's plants and animals; the scientists could not rule out the possible extinction of humankind.

The nuclear winter scenario offers no comfort to the nation seeking an advantage by striking first. The scientists further claim that unilaterally, an attack would dictate a massive loss of life in the aggressor nation even if the target nation fails to launch a single missile. The biological consequences of an attack, of any kind, would be widespread. Although bomb shelters might save some human lives, the Earth's unprotected ecosystems would be free to deteriorate.

Quiet Hours are Hypocritical

Just recently for the past two weeks the SUMP dance has been conducted in the Lower Commons Quad. I myself like the outdoors dance. But I also feel that the quiet hours currently exist in the dorms, 10 p.m., and the dance continuing until 1 a.m. are in conflict. I also feel that it is hypocritical for the Housing Office of Serrano Village to expect us in the Village to live by rules that the school doesn't even obey. I have talked to three R.A.'s on this issue with no avail and it seems nobody can do anything. My point is why do these contradictions even exist. Do you and the Activities Office even communicate? If so, please keep the dances at night outside and change the quiet hours in the dorms so as won't feel as if the school is breaking the rules and violating my rights.

Noise Expected in Learning Center

Dear Editor:

There was an article in your editorial about speaking up for silence in the Library and the Learning Center. I feel there is a misunderstanding about the purpose of the Learning Center. First, it is not a Library and talking is permitted, because it is a place where tutoring is available. The Learning Center makes the noise expected. I may have been alarmed about the rising noise level. I know that I cannot read in a noisy environment and I don't think anyone else can either. Noise is not good for anyone, including the computer students who constantly have to work with computers.

Sincerely,

Penelope J. Kahn

Noise frustrates computer students

Dear Editor:

Thank you for the editorial two weeks ago about the noise in study classroom areas. It is amazing how inconsiderate some students can be. I would like to add another area to your list—the computer rooms. I can't believe how rude some students are. Even after asking them to lower their voices, they still continue to talk and laugh at conversation level. I know that working with computers can be very frustrating and a good laugh with friends helps, but that laughter can be distracting. If there is an audio-visual center, perhaps it can be placed in an area where students can still be quiet in the computer rooms.
