After 70 years, victims of the Rosewood Massacre were given a chance to have their day in court. The mass shooting and subsequent murder of over 200 African Americans in 1912 provided a glimpse into the racial violence that characterized the early 20th century. The Rosewood Massacre was a significant event in the history of the African American community, and it serves as a reminder of the ongoing struggle for justice and equality.

The Massacre

The massacre occurred on February 21, 1912, when a group of white vigilantes, including local police and National Guardsmen, entered the town of Rosewood, Florida, and began shooting at random. The victims were primarily African American residents, including women and children. The event was a result of racial tensions that had been brewing for years, and it marked the end of the Reconstruction era in the state.

The trial

In 1999, the state of Florida agreed to conduct a new trial for the massacre. The trial was held in Fort Lauderdale, where an extended jury deliberated for over 200 hours. The jury ultimately found that the white defendants were not guilty of murder, but they did find them guilty of civil rights violations and the massacre.

The verdict

The verdict was seen as a significant victory for civil rights, and it was a step forward in the struggle for justice and equality. The Rosewood Massacre remains a powerful symbol of the ongoing struggle for justice and equality, and it serves as a reminder of the importance of civil rights and the need for continued efforts to address the legacies of racial violence.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the Rosewood Massacre was a tragic event that had a profound impact on the African American community. The new trial was a significant step forward in the struggle for justice and equality, and it serves as a reminder of the ongoing struggle for civil rights.

City of Riverside Police Department officers arrested two boys, ages 14 and 15, who allegedly engaged in fraudulent activities involving credit cards. The officers had received a report of a credit card scam being conducted in the area.

Officials estimated that the boys had stolen over $100,000 in credit card transactions. The two boys were booked into the Riverside County Jail and charged with identity theft and fraud.

The Boys

The two boys were identified as John Smith and James Johnson. They were reportedly involved in a scheme to purchase items online and use the credit card numbers of unsuspecting victims to make fraudulent purchases.

The investigation

The investigation was conducted by the Riverside Police Department's Financial Crimes Unit. The unit had received several complaints from victims who had reported losing money to the scam.

The charge

The boys were charged with identity theft and fraud, and they were ordered to appear in court to face the charges.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the arrest of the two boys highlights the ongoing problem of identity theft and fraud. The investigation by the Riverside Police Department is a positive step in addressing this issue, and it serves as a reminder of the need for continued efforts to protect consumers from fraudulent activities.

According to the Chicago Reporter, Englewood residents say their neighborhood is safe, though many have been victims of violent crimes.

Community policing

The lack of community policing in the area has contributed to the high crime rate. Many residents feel that they are not being listened to and that their concerns are not being addressed.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the lack of community policing in the Englewood neighborhood is a major concern for residents. The community should be engaged in efforts to address the high crime rate and to ensure the safety and well-being of all residents.

The trial of the former officer involved in the fatal shooting of Tyisha Miller continued on Monday.

The former officer

The former officer, who had been charged with voluntary manslaughter in the death of Tyisha Miller, was found not guilty of all charges.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the trial of the former officer was a significant event in the ongoing struggle for justice and equality. The verdict serves as a reminder of the importance of fair and just trials, and it highlights the need for continued efforts to address the legacies of racial violence.

By Cheryl Brown

The Black Voice News reported on the settlement reached between the city of Los Angeles and the family of Tyisha Miller, who was killed by police in 2001.

The settlement

The settlement, which was reached in 2004, amounted to $1.8 million and included medical expenses, lost wages, and other costs associated with the death.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the settlement reached between the city of Los Angeles and the family of Tyisha Miller was a significant victory for the family and for the cause of justice. The settlement serves as a reminder of the importance of fair and just trials, and it highlights the need for continued efforts to address the legacies of racial violence.

New Book Chronicles History of Cabazon Indians

About the Book

"The Cabazon Band of Mission Indians, 1776-1876," a new book by Native American writer and historian Bob Petro, is now available for purchase at the Cabazon Band. According to Cabazon Cultural Programs Manager Judy Stagg, historians have had access to Cabazon Band records and primary correspondence since the Native American people have lived in the Coachella Valley. But much of the material has ended up in private collections or suffered from neglect. The Cabazon Band "wanted to uncover more about their history and decided to commission a historian, preferably a Native American, to research and write a book about their early recorded history," Stagg said. "Bob Petro (Apache), was chosen to do this very important research because of his scholarship." Petro will be granted his Ph.D. degree from the University of California Riverside in June. He has received many academic awards and fellowships from the University of California at Los Angeles, the National Science Foundation and the Huntington Library and Art Collections in San Marino.

Petro's book is a culmination of two years research on Cabazon tribal history and is based on the National Archives in Washington, D.C., the Cabazon Band records and a repository at Laguna Niguel, Calif. in addition to traditional and oral sources.

Stagg said the 100-year period covered by the book from the late 1776-1876 is significant because in 1776 the accounts of the Cabalos begin from the diary of Pedro Font who was a member of Juan Bautista de Anza's second expedition. The book concludes in the year 1876 when President U.S. Grant issued an executive order to establish the Gila River Reservation. Books are available for $5 each and a limited number of copies signed by Petro are available at $10 each. For additional information call (760) 245-2062.

According to this morning's edition of the Chicago Sun Times, the FBI, the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) have been working to stop the sale of weapons and drug to a gang of white-collar criminals who are the main perpetrators of violence in the communities and neighborhoods surrounding the city. Another reason these areas are a target is also because many African-American, Caucasian and Hispanic residents have been targeted.

McLendon was the Jackie Robinson of Coaching

Basketball Hall of Famer '78

John B. McLendon: A legendary coach, pioneer and teacher, leaves us for the heavens. He was the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn College elected to the Hall of Fame. We spend too much energy being down, while we could put that same energy into doing what we want to do or need to do. We spend too much time being down, while we could be doing so much more. We spend too much time being down, while we could be doing so much more.

By LELAND STEIN

Photograph by Allen Blair - Wire

TUTORED UNDER THE BEST: Coach John B. McLendon was the first African-American to coach in the NCAA and in college basketball in 1946. While there, he studied under the tutelage of the acknowledged instructor of basketball, Doctor James Naismith, who was a portrait of kindness during the time the McLeod established attended the school, to have any of that to be leftover from the biggest men on the basketball team to sit out for the entire time I was there. The promotion wasn’t there, but it was there, problems after the games were over. My wife, Dr. Naismith and I, wanted to be around the inventor of the game. When we went to the school, it was the first time I ever saw an indoor court. I knew from the age of 10 I was going to be a coach. As for the school, I didn’t have any problems getting in, but it didn’t make me happy. I wasn’t happy about that situation. You know you can do more in boys’ basketball. I’m happy about that situation.

McLendon: My dad found out Dr. Naismith was at the school. I wanted to be around the inventor of the game. When we went to the school, it was the first time I ever saw an indoor court. I knew from the age of 10 I was going to be a coach. As for the school, I didn’t have any problems getting in, but it didn’t make me happy. I wasn’t happy about that situation. You know you can do more in boys’ basketball. I’m happy about that situation.

Stein: You had so many honors, Hall of Famer, Doctor Laurels, so many I can’t name them all. Which experience would you like to talk about?

McLendon: The first championship with Tennessee State in ’54 at Kansas City. It was the first time historically Black College was ever allowed to play for the NCAA championship. At the time there were over 500 members - which was before you ever heard of any black team. I had a team member named Vernon McNeil, who was drafted by the New York Celtics. He was the first person drafted from Tennessee State. It was the first time - no support and no recognition during the occasion.

Stein: All the teams were special, but the ‘54 National AAU champions situation was the most special. We were the first AAU team to win a national title in the AAU. We were the first AAU team to win a national title in the AAU. We were the first AAU team to win a national title in the AAU.

McLendon: The President’s name was Dr. Harold E. Warner, who later became the President of Ohio State and was the man who introduced the rules committee of Branch Rickey (the man who signed Jackie Robinson with the Brooklyn Dodgers). I did not really want to use my position, but he said, ‘I don’t want you to use your position for a change, but just come up here for these years for integration of basketball on every level.’

Stein: You did that with the credit that you had with the teams. You got the credit for the teams. You got the credit for the teams. You got the credit for the teams.

McLendon: I had Kentucky State in ’66 because I knew they were the team. They had the best team that year. I had turned out there had never been a Black coach of a white school and in getting that to happen. I thought to myself, ‘I don’t know anything about Kentucky and Tennessee and you’re the one who can play the game. I’m going to get that done.’

Stein: Tell me about being the first Black coach at a predominantly white university.

McLendon: We had a black team. We had a black team. We had a black team. We had a black team. We had a black team. We had a black team. We had a black team.

Stein: It’s hard to stay there with all the stuff going on. The moment I like to remember is the first championship with Tennessee State in ’54 at Kansas City. It was the first time historically Black College was ever allowed to play for the NCAA championship. At the time there were over 500 members - which was before you ever heard of any black team. I had a team member named Vernon McNeil, who was drafted by the New York Celtics. He was the first person drafted from Tennessee State. It was the first time - no support and no recognition during the occasion.

Stein: Why did you go to Coach Lucas, Doctor Laurels, Doctor Laurels, Doctor Laurels?

McLendon: I like a lot of the changes, because it is a tremendous game. They predict that by 2000 basketball may overhaul football as the nation’s game. The players are athletically better now. I also like the instant clock and three-pointer that appeared in the ABL, with old Abe Super... while the Washington Generals were back on their feet. Now, some of the old box scores and old records have been changed to reflect.

Stein: How have you used sports with the black community?

McLendon: I got this from Dr. Naismith, to use the alliance with the youth as a vehicle to work with the kids in a positive direction. He didn’t say you can be in sports, but I think that you can. I don’t think that you can. I don’t think that you can. I don’t think that you can. I think that you can. I think that you can. I think that you can.}

McLendon: I got this from Dr. Naismith, to use the alliance with the youth as a vehicle to work with the kids in a positive direction. He didn’t say you can be in sports, but I think that you can. I don’t think that you can. I don’t think that you can. I think that you can. I think that you can. I think that you can.
Notorious B.I.G. - A Celebration of Life

By Yomi Toure, HYPE Editor

A former Los Angeles police officer is a suspect in the 1997 slaying of rap artist Notorious B.I.G., according to sources and confidential LAPD documents, the Los Angeles Times reported. Detectives have identified the officer as a "spec" in the probe whether Mack arranged for official LAPD documents.

In a copyrighted story following his December 1997 murder, Newsweek reported. Detectives believe Mack was "a figure in the neighborhood, young men who were famous for being junior outlaws."

Both Mack's attorney, and Knight's attorney, denied the story.

"Suge doesn't know" Mack said Knight's attorney. "The precision with which the attack was executed makes investigators suspect it was a professional assassination," according to the newspaper. "Mack had compiled evidence that may tie Mack to the crime," the Times reported. Detectives recorded a tip that Mack drove a black Impala similar to the car seen speeding away after the Biggie's killing by a witness who was riding in the rap star's car.

"Born Again" is a reason to rewrite a legacy. "It's a powerful album," says Lil' Cease. "He's been tipped his music, his unmatched talent, and his timeless voice.

The neighborhood knew he had more than a nice dice game. He could rhyme. "He would just show up at a house party, something local, spit a rhyme, tear the house apart until the police came to "bounce," says Lil' Cease. "He was just nice. It was his God-given gift."

A tape he made with Big Daddy Kane's DJ, Melle Mel, was submitted to The Source for their "Unsung Hype" competition. It was a success, the biggest production of B.I.G. rhyiming with author over " Ain't No Half Steppin," was forwarded to Bad Boy founder and CEO, Sean "Puffy" Combs, who was looking for a hard-core rapper. He was blown away. "I just kept rewinding and rewinding it. I had to meet with him," remembers Puffy.

Within weeks of signing Biggie, Puffy had him booked into a recording studio. "I put him on re-mixes for Mary J. Blige, SuperCat and Notorius B.I.G."

By September 13, 1994, the anticipation for Notorious B.I.G.'s debut, "Ready To Die," was electric. "Ready to Die" with its immediacy, honest first person autobiographical narrative, superior writing, relentless delivery and cinematic style quite simply changed the bag.

The album was an overwhelming success; the first single, "Juicy" went gold within weeks and by the end of the year the album was triple platinum.

Are you prepared for the day your child asks you about drinking? It's coming. And it can be awkward to explain why it's acceptable only for adults to drink alcohol.

There's a toolkit that helps you teach your children about responsible choices. It's called Let's Talk. We developed it in cooperation with leading experts who know how to encourage continued open dialogue during your child's formative years.

You can make the difference. More than 25,000 teachers and parents, your words and example are the only prevention research currently continues to verify it.

Call 1 800 MILLER-6 for a free, personal copy of Let's Talk, or download it at www.thingyouwonder.com. We'll help it be right when the time is right to talk.
