CSUSB
Judi Jones becomes instant leader

Judi Jones has assumed the office of Associated Student Body President which was vacated by Juan Torres, who was elected A.S.B. vice president last spring, only to resign last month due to the leadership role on September 30th.

Kevin Gallagher was appointed to the office of vice president by the student senate on October 4th. Mr. Gallagher has served on the Student Senate as a senator at large for the past year.

Juan Torres, who was elected to the position of student body president last May, was relieved of his office by administrative officials because he failed to meet the necessary requirements of the office.

The State College election code stipulates that certain requirements must be met in order for students to continue in office. In other student government developments, Raleigh Strader has resigned his position as president of the state senate, citing personal reasons.

Mr. Strader, as pro tem of the senate, would have assumed the office of vice president had he not resigned. Mr. Strader was acting vice president for four days before his resignation became final and the student senate appointed Kevin Gallagher to the office.

Judi Jones, who is a senior political science major, is the first woman student body president of Cal State San Bernardino. The only other woman student body president in the California State College and University system is Bonnie Sharpe at Fullerton State University.

Judi Jones has some definite plans to help the students of Cal State get more value out of the money they contribute to the Associated Student Body. Judi will also attempt to promote legislation that will give students a greater voice in campus affairs.

The incorporation of the Associated Student Body and of the Student Union will give the students more power to decide how their funds will be spent, according to Ms. Jones.

Judi feels that graduate students should be able to hold class offices and have a greater say in how their A.S.B. fees are used. The present student body constitution has to be amended in order for this to happen, Ms. Jones emphasized. Ms. Jones hopes to take an active interest in all student publications to ensure that any publication that is funded with A.S.B. fees be relevant to the entire campus community and not just one small segment.

Judi has extended an open invitation to all students to come by the A.S.B. office and personally talk over any suggestions they may have to improve C.S.C.S.B.

Judi Jones - A.S.B. President

VA rep on campus

Many benefits and services are available to the veteran at California State College, San Bernardino. In fact, veterans are not always aware of how extensive these are, says Cal State's Brian Flescher. In his new position as outreach coordinator of the veterans program at the college, he's out to remedy the situation.

In order to contact as many present and former servicemen and women as possible, he will visit military bases, veterans hospitals, junior colleges and industrial plants as well as conducting personal interviews on campus.

Services available through Cal State include academic and career counseling, job referral, information and assistance related to vocational training, medical services, loans and insurance.

For the first time, students also will have the on-campus services of a representative of the Veterans Administration to help with problems related to VA benefits. Wayne Painter, a veteran of 7½ years of military service, is assigned to Cal State, San Bernardino full-time to assist the 600-700 veterans enrolled there.

The veteran with no dependents who is a full-time student receives VA benefits of $220 a month. Additional allowances are made for dependents. Part-time students receive proportionately less. An additional allowance of $50 a month also is available when special tutoring is needed by the veteran.

Flescher stresses the importance of good academic counseling. "The initial advisement interview is of crucial importance in successful completion of any degree or any professional training," the veterans officer added.

Through good counseling, he believes, veterans can learn how to use their benefits to best advantage. Flescher himself was able to complete his master's degree within the VA benefit period, with three months left.

Students now have ten years, instead of the former eight, in which to complete the 36 months of study financed by the VA. The period starts from the date of entrance into an educational institution following discharge.

Flescher joined the Cal State staff Sept. 1. He was in the Air Force for five years, joining after graduation from Fontana High School. He served in Japan, Vietnam and Germany as a medical service specialist. Following his discharge he attended San Bernardino Valley College and then the University of California at Riverside where he received his bachelor's degree in social sciences.

He was awarded his M.A. in psychology from Cal State this summer.

The veterans affairs office presently is located in Mojave House in Serrano Village, the on-campus housing complex at Cal State.

Leonard M. Moite - Economics Professor.

Faculty Profile:

Leonard M. Moite, Assistant Professor of Economics, has returned to CSCSB after a four-year absence to complete requirements for his Ph.D. at UCLA. He is currently writing his dissertation and expects to complete it next year.

The subject of his dissertation is "Land Tenure, Population and Social Expenditures." He is currently working on several programs sponsored by the National Science Foundation and other organizations.

In discussing economics Moite said "My own country, any country, cannot exist if it is not founded on the basic principle of self-sufficiency. Self-sufficiency is necessary for basic survival." He remarked, should be given where a country is currently pursuing its education and its effects on population and labor allocation.

Moite received his B.A. and M.A. at the University of California, City University of New York. A native of Kenya, Moite came to the United States in 1970 to study at a one-year scholarship. He then completed the rest of his education by working his way through school. Moite stated that in Kenya to work your way through college is unheard of. College is considered a full-time occupation and one cannot both work and attend school. He stated that this country is one of the very few, maybe the only one, where you can work your way through school. One of the jobs he held to pay for his education was shovelling snow from the streets in New York City.

EOP students wanted

"We're looking for students who want to attend a four-year college and are willing to make the commitment to their school and their family explained Riveria. "Sometimes, these students will want a chance to get into a high school environment. Maybe they are in a rural area. They have never thought they had a chance to make it to college - but want to try." Riveria, in the past two years, has received about 45 percent Black students, 45 percent Chicano and 10 percent Anglo. However, there are no racial or ethnic quotas and each student is evaluated on their own situation, the dean assured.

Dr. Rivera urges prospective EOP students to contact him or Rudy Johnson, assistant director of EOP services for EOP, immediately if they are interested in enrolling this fall. Realistically, there is a limit to the funds and the number of openings available. Also, however, there is a certain amount of paperwork which must be completed.

The interested student must submit an application for admission to the college (accompanied by the $20 fee), one letter of recommendation from a teacher or counselor, an essay (maximum one-page) and the parents confidential financial statement and transcripts of work from high school or community college.

Dr. Rivera and Johnson are available to help prospective students complete the required paperwork. The deadline for applications to be available from the EOP Office in Trailer 1-B behind the Student Services Building on campus.
SPORT SHORTS

The intramural sports season is upon us and Joe Long, the intramural sports coordinator at Cal State, San Bernardino says there are still openings and plenty of time to sign up.

"We especially want women to try out. They haven't too much in the past so we're trying to get more to come out this season."

"What can be expected from some of the teams this season?" Long was asked.

"In men's flag football, last year's champions are back, the Los Carnales and also, the Mickey Mouse Club, which finished second last year, is back. The Jockettes in women's flag football finished first last year but I don't know if they are around this year. I haven't seen too many of them."

The aim of the CSCSB Intramural Program is to provide an opportunity for each member of the college to participate in his or her favorite recreation-oriented activity. A comprehensive schedule of events is planned each year, ranging from team sport competition to informal participation by both groups and individuals. New activities are added each year by the staff, often the result of requests by interested students.

Participation in the intramural program is voluntary and the college assumes no responsibility for injuries received during intramural activities. Everything possible is done to avoid accidents and injuries, but students are urged to provide their own insurance. Information regarding student accident insurance is available at the Student Health Center.

If an individual is interested in joining a team, working as an official, or wants to learn more about the program, that person should talk to Mr. Long in room P.E. 124. Detailed information regarding each event and the respective sign-up sheets are posted on the bulletin board opposite the equipment room, also in the P.E. building.

October 24, a one-day conference focusing on reform in the campaign-election process, ranging from the impact of Watergate through Proposition 9 will be discussed by politicians and political scientists, announced Dale E. Wagner, assistant professor and conference coordinator.

Congressmen George E. Brown, Jr., of California and John R. Schmitz of New York have accepted invitations to participate. Two candidates for President of the United States in 1972, Dr. John Hospers of USC, a candidate of the Libertarian Party who received some electoral votes in the 1972 election and John Schmitz, candidate of the American Independent Party will be present.

Representatives of Common Cause, the League of Woman Voters, major and minor political parties, labor and business and a political campaign consultant will also participate.

Invitations have been extended to candidates for major state-wide offices and replies are being awaited, Wagner said.

Discussion groups are being planned and although the program details are not yet finalized, the following panel sessions are contemplated:

(1) An Overview of National Electoral Reform Priorities.
(3) Proposition 9 - Landmark Reform or Unconstitutional Loophole Initiative?
(4) Role Of Political Parties, Interest Groups, and Political Consultants in future campaign reforms.
(5) State and Local Electoral Reforms - New Approaches.

Only a nominal registration fee of $1.00 will be assessed in order to encourage the widest possible representation of faculty and students from Southern California. Refreshments will be provided during the morning and afternoon sessions.

The conference is being sponsored by the Political Science Department and will begin at 8:00 a.m. in LC 500.

Dorm residents getting excited over Frank Zappa.

We need mattresses

He has to be policeman, mother, father, counselor, confessor, and recreational director. Ron Zimmerman, senior psychology major, is a house resource person, a gracious term for dorm mother, at the Waterman house in Serrano Village. Zimmerman describes his function as "communicative, whereby the residents can feel free to discuss their problems, whatever they may be, with Frank."

I found the atmosphere at Waterman inactive and very quiet. Ron Zimmerman explained the inactivity to me. "Mine is the more academic oriented house." I asked Ron how he could make such a general statement and he replied simply "by the residents." According to him, Waterman people "are undoubtedly the best residents in Serrano" although in the interview he said there was no rivalry between houses. Zimmerman defines a "good" resident as energetic, obeys the rules, gives love, and has a sense of cooperation and mutual consideration for the other's rights.

For people who love sports on their brains, Serrano Village seems to be the place. Ron told me that after dinner volleyball is a nightly occurrence and the dorm students are planning to participate in intramural sports also. The recreation room is equipped with pool and ping pong tables.

Zimmerman enjoys the free activity in the dorms and he says there are no barriers between males and females living in the four co-ed dorms. He said that even living "facilitates a group atmosphere where knowledge is shared in an informal manner."

I talked to a few residents about dorm life and although they cannot be considered a good sampling of opinions, I thought their comments were all on the good side of dorm living, but then why else would they be living there?

"It seems like the place to get involved with people and things going on," Christopher Phelps, Badger.

"I like it for many reasons. It's convenient any day of the week if you want to go to the library or anywhere on campus. The price is pretty reasonable," James Luncefored, Shandri.

"It's nice. It's fun. The only thing bad is we need more mattresses." Dave Faller, Tokay.

Creative Arts facility

There's a group of faculty and administrators at Cal State, San Bernardino, who feel something like midwives.

After much labor and travail, they have brought to fruition a Creative Arts Building for the theater-starved campus. The state's 1974-75 budget contains a $2.7 million item for the long-awaited building.

There were times, however, when the campus officials felt their labors would be fruitless.

Questions which arose in Legislative committees were overcome, with credit to the diligent efforts of Senators Ruben Ayala of San Bernardino, Walter Stern of Bakersfield, and W. Craig Biddle of Riverside and Representative Jerry Lewis of Highland, explained President John M. Pfau. The appropriation then went into the final budget.

The latest step toward realization of the building was the approval of preliminary plans last week by the Public Works Board. Now, architect Carl Masten of Los Angeles is proceeding with working drawings so that bids for construction can be taken shortly after the first of January. Occupancy is scheduled for the fall of 1976.

The multi-level building will house the Music and Drama Departments, providing each with an adequate theater or recital hall for their presentations.

The Music Department will have its own 250-seat recital hall. There will be a raised stage, sounding equipment and proper directed plays, for example, can be presented here.

The exterior design of the building, predicted to be the "most acoustical drapes show the choral and instrumental organizations to their best advantage."

The Drama Department will have an experimental theater seating 150, more than double the capacity of the present house. New lighting and sound equipment, removable traps in the stage floor and increased floor space will increase the potential for future drama productions.

Within the 42,000 square foot building, there also will be faculty offices, choral and instrumental rehearsal rooms and practice rooms for individuals and groups.

The Drama Department will have a scene shop, a costume shop, a design workshop and men's and women's dressing rooms.

The second floor, along the northeast wing, contains classroom for both music and drama, a cello shop (for working with messy, toxic materials), faculty offices, staff offices and practice rooms. The group rehearsal rooms, the theater and the recital hall all are two stories tall, while adjoining corridors and the faculty office wing is a single floor.

Nestled within the building, yet visible throughout is a hallway, are two patio areas which will have multis uses since they are protected from the elements. Noon-time informal concerts and student-attractive on campus, will blend with the existing master plan for the campus. Adding color to the external walls of precast concrete will be several sections of natural stone veneer and the redwood siding under the eaves of the recital hall. Redwood is also found in Serrano Village, the housing complex on campus. In general, the Creative Arts Building will blend with the coloring of the Library-Classroom Building.

The Creative Arts Building will be situated in the central mall area facing east toward the Commons, between the main parking lot and the Library Building.

Landscaping around the new building and a $200,000 project to build the permanent main entrance will give the "front yard" of the campus a new look. The new entrance from Santa Fe College Parkway will be constructed during the 1974-75 fiscal year. The project, which extends about 700 feet from North Park Drive to the ring road on campus, includes construction of a four-lane entrance road with a center median, new entrance to the parking lot, lighting, sprinkler system and landscaping.

"We are pleased to be able to add these facilities to accommodate our growing academic programs," President Pfau noted. "An additional benefit will be our ability to share the talents of our fine arts program and drama departments with even more townspeople through the larger performance halls."

The newly-formed Kundalini Yoga Club for Science and Consciousness is sponsoring a week-end workshop here on campus for students. On Saturday, Oct. 26 and Sunday, Oct. 27, week-end will be called "The Experiential Factor in the Psychology of Consciousness," and will integrate techniques of Kundalini Yoga and meditation with such psychology-oriented techniques as Guided Imagery and transpersonal counseling, to give the participant an experience of these altered states of consciousness, and to explore the significance of these techniques in the world today.

The workshop will be held from 9:00 on both Sat. and Sun. in LC 27 in the basement of the library. All are invited to attend.

The workshop will be run by Rama Kirn Singh Comeau and Shama Kirn Singh Harvey, who have a great deal of experience in Kundalini Yoga, meditation, as well as in psychology and counseling.

The Kundalini Yoga Club is proud to announce its existence here at Cal State, and welcomes new members and all those in any way interested. For further information, on the club or the week-end, contact Jaga Nath Singh Glassman, 792-6072.
Registered nurses may now earn a bachelor of science degree in nursing at California State College, San Bernardino, under a new program approved this summer. First-year classes were offered last year, but the program swings into full swing this fall with full approval of appropriate agencies and an enlarged faculty.

The new program is an upper-division program for registered nurses, who hold an A.A. (associate of arts) degree in nursing or its equivalent, stressed Dr. Delores A. Wozniak, chairman of the department.

The college is working on proposals for diploma nursing programs to obtain lower-division credit in nursing by taking examinations covering appropriate material. They also work with community education courses on campus. The student without the A.A. degree is admitted to Cal State as a natural sciences undeclared major.

Prior to admission to the nursing program, a candidate must be a licensed registered nurse in California, hold an A.A. degree or equivalent work and qualify for juniors and seniors.

Nurses with the A.A. are granted approximately 90 quarter units of credit toward the B.S. degree.

The curriculum at Cal State focuses on community nursing, in the senior year, the nurses have an opportunity to select in their area of concentration either distributive or episodic care.

The Cal State program is accredited by the state Board of Nursing Education and Nurse Registration.

The growth and potential of the new program is a direct result of the Public Health Service of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare with a grant of $1001 to select as their area of concentration. The evaluation was made by the state Board of Regents of the State University of New York in developing an external degree in nursing. Prior to that, the state University of New York in Farmingdale, Nassau County, and Columbia University, New York, were involved in similar programs.

Dr. Wozniak, who earned her doctorate in administration from Columbia University, was a consultant to the Board of Regents of the State University of New York in New York with a grant of $1001 to serve as the full-time program director.

Dr. Wozniak, who came to Cal State last September as professor of nursing, has been a former resident of Pomona and a nurse in morning and late afternoon.

The new program has been recognized by the state Board of Directors of Area IV of Pomona High School and Mt. San Antonio College and an M.A. and Ed.M. from Columbia University. Dr. Wozniak, a Palm Springs resident, has been recently elected to the Board of Directors of Area IV of the California Nurses Assn.

Mrs. Vogel, who has taught at UTA in nursing from the University of Washington, has been a former hospital nurse. Mrs. Vogel has taught at UTA and has been a registered nurse in different states. She has obtained his family nurse practitioner qualifications.

Miss Kayer, a graduate of Pomona High School and Mt. San Antonio College, earned her B.S. in nursing from Columbia and an M.A. and Ed.M. from Columbia University. Dr. Wozniak, a Palm Springs resident, has been recently elected to the Board of Directors of Area IV of the California Nurses Assn.

While teaching at the Oregon State University, Dr. Petrie was coordinator of the elementary training program for teachers of the disadvantaged. He was a doctoral candidate and then teaching at the University of Utah. While teaching at the Oregon State University, he directed the Upward Bound program and the Teacher Education Program.

Dr. Petrie has spent the last three years at the University of Colorado. He has obtained his M.Ed. and Ed.D. from Oregon State University.

The program will be a boon for at least four professional roles. Those with scheduling problems, through conflicts either with other work, or who prefer other teaching or work.

With self-paced courses, new students can take classes or work; with other classes or work; with other classes or work; with other classes or work.

A minimum number of lab hours weekly is also required.

A new dean announced

A former speech therapist in Banning and Fontana will be the new dean of continuing education at California State College, San Bernardino beginning this fall will be Dr. Ronald G. Petrie, an educator from Oregon State University.

Dr. Petrie, head of the department of elementary education at Utah State University, succeeds Dr. Robert L. Wall, who has elected to return to classroom teaching. Dr. Wall, native to Oregon, was one of the founding chairman and dean of the school of education at Cal State.

Petrie is interested in education of the disadvantaged, and has a professional background including positions in elementary education, Oregon State Department of Education, federal office for Economic Opportunity and college-level college here.

He has served as a consultant for numerous colleges and universities in the state. He is also a consultant to the Title III, Tri-County, with the education development system to make recommendations for improvement to the German educational system.

Born and reared in the midwest, Dr. Petrie comes to Oregon. He earned a B.S. in education from the Oregon State University.

Opportunity in Washington, D.C., was spent in evaluating proposals and designing training and development curriculum materials and teaching.

The course will be studied in an individual student.

Those who have a fear of tackling a foreign language may find it difficult to do. The emphasis is on making a foreign language easy.

Dr. Switzer said, "There will no longer be fear of failure in such language courses," said Dr. Switzer, "since the present program is a self-paced one." The student will have an individual student.

Dr. Switzer will be available eight hours a week and the student will be on his feet all eight hours if he wishes, or just often enough to meet the minimum requirements.

In the first quarter, students are required to meet with the instructor twice a week. By the second quarter, the minimum is four times a week.

A minimum number of lab hours weekly is also required.

A new program has been approved at the University of California, Santa Barbara, in the development of special methods for teaching French. It will be available at any time. Students may take as many as 12 credits in the French language. The student will then be able to take as many as 12 credits in the French language.

A major advantage of the French program is scheduling. If a student reaches the grade of 5:0, he may take the student's class at that time, he may never get back to it later.

Some of the lore is spent in the French language lab. There, in a particular section, the student listens to cassettes and also records his own voice repeating the course work. The student is then able to take back the two voices to compare pronunciation.
