1970 FALL APPLICATIONS
COMING IN STEADY STREAM

A steady stream of applications for fall are arriving by mail each day.

Nearly 400 applications for admission to CSCSB have already been received by the Admissions office, with the heaviest flow immediately following the opening of the application period on January 1.

Applications are processed first by the Bursar's office and then by the Admissions office. Prospective students are notified of their tentative acceptance as soon as their transcripts through first semester are received from high schools or junior colleges.

REASONS SOUGHT FOR LACK OF EXTENSION PARTICIPATION

Faculty participation is invited by Fred Roach, Dean of Continuing Education, to search for reasons for the failure of many of CSCSB's first extension courses to draw enrollments sufficient to justify their continuation.

While first meetings of nine of the 27 scheduled courses have not yet been held, seven which met this week have had to be canceled. Of the remaining eleven, three are definitely established and four others will probably continue; one five-unit course is to be re-offered for three units, reducing the fee by $25; and three others are being re-scheduled to begin at Palm Desert in February.

Among factors thought to be affecting the program are the generally-low visibility of both the College and the new Extension Program; the level of fees, particularly in the post-Christmas, pre-tax-return period; gaps in a publicity program which was intensive, but hurried; weather; alternative, cost-free study opportunities in the public school and community college programs, and via television; the selection of courses offered, etc. The invitation to explore these and to advance other hypotheses which can illuminate planning for Spring Quarter activity is both open and sincere, Dean Roach said. He can be reached at Extension 206, Room A-195.

COMING EVENTS  Next Thursday and Friday, Jan. 22, 23, Aaron J. Ihde, University of Wisconsin chemistry, history of science and integrated liberal studies professor, will be on campus to lecture (Thurs., PS-10, 1 p.m.; Fri., B-101, 10 a.m.)
