The Jayson Blair Scandal: A Tale of Two Compulsions

By Lee A. Daniels
Director of Publications
National Public Radio

For anyone who honestly believes that race is no longer a significant factor in American life, the Jayson Blair scandal provides a much-needed wake-up call.

In the past two weeks Blair, a young, African-American reporter for the New York Times who was once considered a rising star whose words had been a beacon of diversity in a field that was heavily dominated by old white males, has been exposed as a serial liar, a cheat, a liar. His book, about the Iraq war, has been taken off publication and returned to the presses.

As a central character in the unfolding saga, Blair now is struggling to keep the public focus away from his personal life and toward the larger issue of media ethics.

Ricardo Epstein, the Times' conservative columnist, wrote that Blair's lies are "a virtual mirror of logical sophistries" are charging at the "affirmative action angle" on the "defensive education of all-dude of American life, Jayson Blair's affair has been the latest topic to reveal the power of social media.

One can see that the sheer brilliance of Blair's deception is tied to the structure of official life. He deliberately ignores other instances of the employment process, and we know that all too well now about the personality of the con artist with respectable credentials.

But, of course, that compel- lation of declaring that the sins of one individual are really a part of her or his "kind"—especially when it's wrapped up in a Black—fundamentally rules out ad hominem and all-dude of American life. Jayson Blair's cheat is the latest tipoff to reveal the power of social media.

The Times is most likely to be found to have been a complete fabrication.

Loonin's colleagues, some number of whites were consumed with declaring that Con's sins were evidence of a racial flaw affecting all African-American jour- nalists and that her devout proved re- sistan to those who gave their all for us to enjoy this freedom. When you take time to go shopping, take time to visit a veteran's cemetery or ceremony. When you don't want to do any of the things mentioned, do research on why people go to war in the first place. Why do we stop talking and start fighting? Why did we go into the Civil War that we are still fighting? Why did we go into the War of 1812? Why did we go into World War II? Why did we go into the Gulf War? Why did we go into Vietnam? Why did we go into war with Iraq and could all of or any of them have been avoided? What substantiates what you believe? Does the president prove a point or change the way we go into war with Vietnam? Why are we proud to be part of that country?

Let us take time to show respect and take time to seek solu- tions that will prevent future conflicts. Let us take time to create a breakfast without the pigs having to make the total sacri- fice. It was then that the Times still needs to declare the more dangerous to stand alone as a full sentence, (referring to or qualify ing some- thing that has just gone before, as when, while, as, since, because, whereas) ; relatives (such as why, although, after); and sentence- starters (such as well, now; oh, why). A sentence consists of a main verb and all of the elements of English that combine with the main verb to form a complete sentence. A main verb sh owing the rela- tion of a word in the sentence -- e.g. of, by, for, with, over, under, in, on, at.

The New Republic, the influence of mainstream American jour- nalists, will be only much-needed education.

Indeed, ironically, this very issue that Jayson Blair's behavior is being cast as a story about race, is hardly a new one in the world of modern human societies, and it is rarely far below the surface of the most visible media.

Snow, who holds a BA from California State University points out, "there is a difference in running the paralegal business and being a paralegal. They are two different things." In his personal office, he says that he has to teach the people who come in the proper way to dress for success. He also teaches ethics. They have to come to school the way they are expected to be once they are finished. "I tell them what we expect from the beginning. I set the standards, I teach them how to interact with the client. I teach them good listening skills. And if they don't act professionally I send them home," said Snow very matter of fact.

The contract he has with the GAIN program is for a 3-month term. Students are then ready for an 40-hour internship that follows. He also places the graduates. Protect Yourself from an Unintended Pregnancy

Starting a family is a big decision, and an unintended pregnancy can change everything. That's because parenthood is a full-time job, and a lifelong commitment. It costs an average of $10,000 each year to raise a child. So, it helps to save money and be prepared for all of your child's needs, like food, diapers and clothing. The decision to start a family is one that needs to be made by both you and your partner.

When you do decide to start your family, you'll want to be healthy and physically and emotionally ready. Whatever your decision, you need to learn to protect yourself. Protection means two things. First, protecting your future by using birth control to prevent an unintended pregnancy. Second, protecting your health by receiving reproductive health exams like sexually transmitted infection (STI), HIV testing, and screenings for cancer.

Protecting yourself is easy. You can sign up for Family PACT (Planning, Access, Care and Treatment), a no-cost program provided by the California Department of Health Services. By signing up, you and your partner will have access to counseling, information about birth control such as condoms, birth control pills, the vaginal ring and emergency contraception. You'll be able to talk to a Family PACT provider one-on-one or along with your partner to determine what type of birth control is best for you. You can also ask questions, and get valuable information to help you determine if you are ready to become a parent, or if it's best to wait. Starting a family is a decision that you and your partner should make together, when you know you can afford it, and you're ready.

Together with Family PACT you have the power to control and improve your future, and make the right decision about when to become a parent. And remember, even though these services are available through the program at no cost and are confidential. Signing up for Family PACT is a simple process. There are Family PACT offices and community clinics throughout California, which means there is probably a Family PACT provider in your area.

For more information about Family PACT, or to find a Family PACT provider in your area, call 1-866-FAM-PACT. Low-income and uninsured California men, women and teens are eligible for Family PACT. If you qualify, all these services are available through the program at no cost and are confidential. Signing up for Family PACT is a simple process. There are Family PACT offices and community clinics throughout California, which means there is probably a Family PACT provider near you. Call the toll-free line to speak to someone in person to learn more about Family PACT and to find out if this program is right for you.

Pastor Willie Mat McClain, a professional gospel singer and performing artist, opened up a new church in the City of Rialto. It's his desire to reach the Island Empire with a fresh word from God. As McClain stated, "It was as if I was pregnant with the word of God that had to be birthed." Pastor McClain has brought forth this new Church and opened up on Mother's Day at 611 Foothill Dr, with an 11:30 Sunday service. The name of the Church is "The Loving Word Christian Church" and Pastor McClain states, "Women and Men of God's time to unite." It is his vision to reach the youth of the Island Empire to teach values and talents in order to be a laying dormant in the people of God. Pastor McClain is inviting all to come. She believes for this day and for this bees God has a fresh word for this church. Pastor McClain can also be heard on KPRO Radio station at 3:45 on Sundays and also on KTVM radio. Pastor McClain holds a Doctorate Degree, and has been preaching, singing, and teaching the word for over 20 years. She states, "Bishop Charles and Mac Blake played a vital role in my development."
A long six-game series came to an end for the three-time defending champs. It seemed like three rings was enough for the Lakers. However, the fourth was just out of reach and not meant to be.

It looked like the Lakers had a chance of winning the series against the San Antonio Spurs. After tying the series 2-2 in game four, game five was a struggle for the Lakers. As Robert Horry’s magic ran out in game five, he couldn’t knock down the game winning shot.

During the series, no Lakers could consistently guard “Twin Towers,” Tim Duncan (League Most Valuable Player) and David Robinson. As for the Spurs, game six was huge. Everything was going down hill for the defending champs. No one could stop Duncan—not even Shaquille O’Neal. Duncan’s confidence grew with each shot.

From the beginning, the Lakers Struggle as San Antonio Rolls a Six
League MVP Tim Duncan is too much for this year’s Lakers as they beat LA and keep them from a fourth title By Lyndon Shelby

The Los Angeles Lakers gave themselves a little hope as they fought back from being down by two games to the San Antonio Spurs. A little “home cooking” gave the Lakers new life and a chance to even up the series at 3-3 and force a game seven. The result wasn’t even close as the Lakers went out 110 to 82.

Tim Duncan (NBA MVP) led the San Antonio charge as the red hot Texas team dominated the Lakers from the outset of game six. The Lakers appeared exhausted during the series against the Spurs. Coach Phil Jackson had to have his heart repaired as the Laker team also needed some repair.

None of the Lakers had an answer for Tim Duncan. He backed in on Robert Horry and shot over Shaq at will. To reduce the stress on Phil Jackson, the Lakers need to answer many questions before the 2004 season.

Dear Neighbors and Corona Residents for Responsible Utility Service:

The Corona City Council formally abandoned its plans to take over the Edison system and enter the full-scale electric utility business. The action was taken in a Special Council meeting on May 14. We believe this is good news for everyone in Corona and the adjacent county areas. We appreciate the Council hearing our concerns and taking action.

All of us can take great satisfaction in knowing that the grassroots efforts of the residents brought public attention to this important matter. The basic issue was whether the citizens’ voices would be heard, if not by the Council, then through the ballot. You can be proud that we have demonstrated our community’s ability to speak out strongly on issues that affect us...and to be heard.

Your participation over the past several months has breathed new life into civic affairs. Thank you for the support cards you returned, for the many meetings you attended, for speaking out at council meetings, for the phone calls you made and the letters and e-mails you sent. Every individual effort contributed to revitalizing and emphasizing the vital role we area residents play in our government decision making process.

We want to express our special gratitude to those of you who tirelessly circulated petitions and to the more than 15,500 Corona voters who signed those petitions for a Right to Vote Initiative. Your enthusiastic involvement in the democratic process made a real and powerful difference in the successful resolution of this issue.

With the city’s abandonment of the electric utility takeover, nothing on this issue remains for the voters to decide. The petition has already done its job. We remain convinced, however, that major issues changing the scope and expense of city government should be submitted to the voters for decision.

We now look forward to working toward the accomplishment of other worthwhile goals and efforts to ensure that our government in Corona is open, progressive, and responsive to the people it represents.

Sincerely,

Kent A. Hansen

We all have heard the saying, "Birds of a Feather Flock Together." This is why, we sometimes assume that this saying when we are in relationships. We sometimes try to equate what the friendship of our partners do to what our partners are capable of doing. This is something we've all encountered. All of us have been in this situation on both sides for some of us. We think that our partners must act like their friends.

Regina Brown

My friend Lisa is going through this right now. When she took a trip to China, she met a guy named David. They ended up exchanging contact information and continued to court each other. It's been some months now and they are involved in a committed relationship. Lisa knows all his friends and their wives or girlfriends. The problem is that sometimes when they go out, his friends have different female (or their wives) with them. They act as if nothing is wrong.

So, Lisa is now thinking differently about David. She's starting to wonder what does she do when she isn't around. Her argument is "your friends do it, so you must do it too." When she was telling me about it, I had to admit that I had that conversation before. The only difference was that I was at the end of the relationship. There was a man in my life that would always question a certain friend of mine. He didn't like the fact that I would hang out with her. My justification was "just because I'm her friend doesn't mean that I'm her." His reply was always "you hang around her, you must be like her." I wouldn't always try to keep him to know that yes, we do have similarities - that's why we're friends; we have similarities but we are also different. Just that the case I would be wrong with you is what I would say. He would always say, "That's probably more than the similarities.,.

Yet, it poses a very important question: Can we really judge our companions based on what their friends do? Think about it for a second. Would you really want someone to judge you by all of the things your friends might do? I mean, we love our friends to death but we don't want them to judge us. You might have a lot of similarities but there are certain things that they wouldn't trade either. We have to realize that we each are our own person. If you're dealing with someone who knows who you are, and isn't equive to the actions of others - you should be okay. Now, if the person is easily influenced - that's another story in itself.

Is THIS how you want them to learn about sex?

If not, empower young people by giving them the information they need to make healthy and positive decisions.

Teens need parents, mentors, teachers and other caring adults to answer questions about love and sex, reproduction and contraception. And they need accurate, age-appropriate information about preventing pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections.

According to a recent survey, African American adults view teen pregnancy as a very serious problem. They also report feeling comfortable talking with teens about sex and birth control. So take the time now to talk with a teen. You can make a healthy difference in their life.

Teen pregnancy is also an adult problem. Let’s solve it together.

Number of public companies going private increases 26% since Sarbanes-Oxley

Going private provides additional advantages by eliminating some of the pressures associated with being a public entity, such as reducing the pressure to maintain growth. By going private, a company also regains confidentiality because the company no longer has to disclose compensation and financial details to the public, and control is put solely in the hands of the new owners. Additionally, companies that go from being public to private could possibly save the costs of defending themselves in shareholder litigation.

Grant Thornton is the leading global accounting, tax, and business advisory firm dedicated to serving the needs of middle-market companies. Bennett Blends Spirituality, Melody for Playboy Pasadena Fest

By Taylor Jordan

It was a most trying type of day for resident Cat Bennett. The filamentary, another in the amazing school of Texas noses, also plays the role of a senior, soprano saxophone, flute, clarinet, oboe and piano. But she's the musical mood of the moment, pick the saxophone and play for them.

She already started trend over a car-filling session at a Los Angeles restaurant and finished a media interview about her May 29 performance at Playboy Jazz Festival's free concert at Old Pasadena Sunken Park.

She was in town, Bennett essential, laughing as she remembered the enthusiasm of the day's opening audience. "The theater was like the thing that made you meet your soul on, make sure you get a child despite the physical warning in the room."

She then decided to check out the video and open within Pasadena's Central Park before her summer's foot appearance below thousands for the May 26 cocktails show of Playboy's free continuity concerts. Still feet on the tray, Bennett pulled the horn slowly, played instrumentally. He walked to a big oak tree while a bouquet of park patrons patiently watched him, waiting, anticipating. The stage of the mushrooms brightly and captured reflections of scattered form in Bennett strode past them.

She closed his eyes, blinked the horn and let the song choose him.

As the immobile recognizable instrument in the jazz classic: "Nature Boy" filled the park, people drifted closer to Bennett and the music. Smiles spread across their faces, eyes sparkling and then closed in some sense of memory. The couple embraced, the man's arm gently interlocking her hand. An elderly gentleman's foot pointed to the landscape rhythm. Some wept. Others laughed, unable to contain the good feelings stirring within them.

A young child ran up when Bennett played the final note. The excited boy told Bennett, he, too, wanted to be a jazz musician.

Literally, Bennett was about the same age in the boy in Central Park when he had decided his life path would involve jazz music. "I got my first vix in fifth or sixth grade after a year of hiding on pens and paper," recalled the 52-year-old musician who started playing professionally in Houston nightclubs when he was 16. "At a show, I knew I wanted to do that. We didn't have a music program in elementary school, but my teacher, Warren Turner, went to the principal and convinced her to start a program. That's when I started playing the alto sax. I called the other saxophone voices and instruments and it stuck tight to me."

"Tune" taught him to read for music, the fundamentals of playing music, the benefits of composition. The teacher explained what his young charge had grown to appreciate at home.

"Everything young Cat loved the radio had a horn in it, either a saxophone or trumpet. Brilliant's Bennett Patterson. A saxophone, wanted his younger son to play the alto sax, "Probably because of Miles Davis," he recalled. His older brother, Charles Bennett Jr., played percussion and drums. His father, Charles Bennett Sr., played acoustic bass and often too.

His stepfather, Alfred W. Patrick, loved all music and was owning the elders who catered Cat's world with the sounds of jazz. It was a life path Bennett would repair with his own name. Ashley and Bennett, who respectively produce music and play piano, music sheet composers and recently started studying classical piano.

"Music, whether you're listening to, enjoying or playing it, is named for human beings," Bennett challenged. "Without music, we are incomplete."

For me, music, was an ancestral memory, calling to me. I couldn't love or breathe without being a part of it. I had been bearing everything since I was a little boy. When I started playing music, I'd do it before."

His home, school, community and the city of Houston were thriving with music. "This was particularly appealing to the term that balances and excels in music, track and field is a sprinter and low hurdler, football as a multiple ranking champion and the audacity at Jack, Yale High School. He came to California in 1977, attended San Joaquin Delta College and earned a bachelor degree in music, specializing in wind instruments, at the University of the Pacific."

He has played clubs, festivals and college and community concerts since he was 16 and served as musical director for Toni Braxton's "Girl" show on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno." He has appeared on a popular and repeated return to the Blue Note and House of Blues in Los Angeles, Redlands Beach's "The Strand."

B.B. King's Sugar Club at University City, Long Beach Jazz Festival, Magic Johnson's Midsummer Night show and the Downtown Sugar Club in Riverside. He recorded two CDs, "On Sunday Morning/Lost Here" and "Memories Lane," on the Goose Tour Jazz label before signing with Big Eagle Records in 1998. His album debuts with Big Eagle include "Happiness Memories" and "Love at the Las Vegas Blue Note." He is currently working on a live volume.

The Right Relationship is Everything*
people on the Columbia were heroes. "The best anti-infectious medicine we had was our end-to-end voyage to the moon," said Dr. L. "With that, we knew that we had our own "Space Day" with a mission of saving lives.

These findings were evaluated after the accident, when medical teams visited "Space Day" at the instant of contact. As you leave the Columbia astronauts were presented with flowers and then they departed back to earth.

Fifteen minutes later, one of the doctors and an astronaut were found dead in their cabin. The doctors had died from a heart attack and the astronaut was killed from a brain hemorrhage.

The doctors were dehumanizing their patients and were not able to answer letters.

"We lost a direct result of poor public health care," said Dr. L. "The lesson is that we need to not only improve public health care, but also to improve the education system so that our students learn about space and the importance of the lessons of history."
