Miller Protesters Anger: City Settles With Preece

By Mary Shields

The Community Police Review Commission narrowly approved a report submitted by its investigator regarding the fatal shooting of Tyisha Miller by a Riverside Police Officer last year.

Miller was shot May 26, 2003, by Officer Wayne Stewart, city official apparently acting as a off-duty private detective. Miller's killing was the first to result in a shooting death of a black woman in Riverside City's history, prompting a review of the department's procedures and protocols and a call for reform and accountability.

The commission, which is comprised of four members and two community representatives, voted 3-1 to approve the investigator's report, with Commissioner James Ward voting against the decision.

Miller's family, friends and supporters had called for an independent review of the police department's actions in the case, but the commission ultimately decided to investigate the case internally.

The commission's vote came after several delays and delays in the investigation, which was completed in December 2003. The investigation was conducted by the commission's own investigator, Peter Luckett, who was appointed to the position by the city council last year.

Luckett's report was submitted to the commission in March 2004, but the commission delayed considering it until this month. The delay was due to the complexity of the case and the need for additional time to review the evidence.

In addition to the police officer's actions, the commission also considered the role of the city's police department in the case, as well as the role of the city's mayor and city council in the case.

Commissioner Ward said he was concerned about the city's response to the shooting, citing the lack of accountability and transparency.

"The commission's report is a step in the right direction," Ward said. "However, I believe more needs to be done to ensure that similar incidents do not happen in the future."

The other three commissioners voted to approve the report, with Commissioner John Wright casting the lone dissenting vote.

"I believe the commission's decision is a step in the right direction," Wright said. "However, I believe more needs to be done to ensure that similar incidents do not happen in the future."

The commission's decision is final and cannot be appealed by either the city or the police department.

"We are satisfied with the commission's decision," said City Attorney James McCreary. "We believe it is a fair and impartial investigation of the case, and we look forward to implementing the recommendations it makes."

Why is the Bush administration trying to destroy Head Start?

The new budget proposed by the Bush administration could result in the loss of funding for Head Start programs across the country. The budget includes cuts to education programs, including Head Start, which provides early childhood education and health services to low-income families. The cuts could result in reduced services or the closure of programs in some areas.

Head Start is a program that was created in 1965 as part of the War on Poverty. It was designed to provide a “Fair Start, a Safe Start, and a Good Start” for children from low-income families. Head Start provides comprehensive services to children and their families, including education, health, nutrition, and social services. The program has been shown to improve children’s academic and social outcomes, reduce poverty, and increase family stability.

President Bush has expressed concern about the costs of Head Start and has called for reforms to the program. However, advocates argue that Head Start is a proven program that works and should not be dismantled.

The Bush administration has proposed eliminating $45 million in funding for Head Start in the fiscal year 2004 budget. This would result in cuts to programs in some states and could mean the loss of services for thousands of children.

The proposed cuts would mean that children and families in low-income communities would lose access to important services. The cuts could also have long-term effects on children’s education and health outcomes.

Advocates for Head Start are calling for the Bush administration to reverse the proposed cuts and maintain funding for the program. They argue that Head Start is a proven program that works and should continue to receive adequate funding.

The Bush administration has argued that Head Start is not a “high priority” program and that the money could be better spent elsewhere. However, advocates argue that Head Start is a critical program that helps to break the cycle of poverty and improves children’s outcomes.

In conclusion, the proposed cuts to Head Start are a threat to the program and to the children and families it serves. Advocates are calling for the Bush administration to reverse the proposed cuts and maintain funding for Head Start. The program is proven to work and deserves to receive adequate funding.

Bill Howe, a member of the Riverside County Bar Association's Commission on Judicial Performance, said he was very disapprospective Whites who were not willing to cast their lot with a system that Framed an overwhelming 75% of all race-based "tastes" in the nation. Howe, however, rejected any notion of moral equivalency on the part of the commission, noting that all decisions are made on a case-by-case basis.

"The commission has to make its own determination, based on the facts and circumstances presented," Howe said. "We cannot make a blanket statement that all race-based "tastes" are inherently unfair." Howe added that the commission's decisions are based on a thorough examination of each case, and that it is not bound by any preconceived notions.

Using an example from his own experience, Howe said that in one case he reviewed, a white defendant was convicted of murder while a black defendant was acquitted of the same crime.

"We had to look at the evidence in the case and determine whether it supported the prosecution's case," Howe said. "We cannot make a blanket statement that all race-based "tastes" are inherently unfair." Howe added that the commission's decisions are based on a thorough examination of each case, and that it is not bound by any preconceived notions.

Urging California women with limited resources to take advantage of free breast cancer screenings, California Health and Human Services Secretary Grodowski Johnson and State Health Director Diana M. Bostic, R.N., Dr.P.H., this week unveiled new breast cancer awareness public service announcements (PSAs) created and directed by actress, dancer and choreographer Debbie Allen and starring actress and choreographer Phylicia Rashad.

The 30- and 15-second announcements encourage uninsured women age 40 and older to call 1-800-511-2300 to see if they qualify for free breast cancer screenings — still a lifeline throughout California.

"Every detection of breast cancer is the key to saving lives," Johnson said. "Statistics show that if breast cancer is detected and treated early, the survival rate is more than 96 percent. We are fortunate to have the support of the entertainment industry and three stars in their fields for help raise awareness of free breast cancer screening services.

The 30- and 15-second PSAs, part of the California Department of Health Services (CDHS) "Cancer Detection Programs: Every Woman Counts" campaign, deliver an emotional plea to women 40 and older to call California's toll-free telephone number (1-800-511-2300) to learn if they qualify for a free yearly clinical breast exam and mammogram. Incorporating dance, music and a diverse group of mothers, grandmothers and children, the announcements urge urgent women to get screened for breast cancer so they won't "disappear" from their families and friends.

In the spot, "Disappearing Act," Rashad, best known for her role as Claire Huxtable on The Cosby Show, warns women about breast cancer and encourages them to receive a free exam.

"Women are often so focused on their family's needs that they forget their own," said Bostic. "With this compelling message, we hope to encourage women to get an annual screening for breast cancer to ensure that they will continue to be there for their loved ones."

In 2003 alone, an estimated 22,000 women in California will be newly diagnosed with breast cancer and, 4,000 women will lose the disease diagnosis and timely treatment of breast cancer have proven to be the most effective means of surviving the disease.

Since 1991, more than 650,000 women in California have been screened through CDHS cancer detection programs, which improve access to health services for low-income and uninsured women age 40 and older throughout California.

The announcements are well scheduled to begin airing in June through member stations of the California Broadcasters Association. In addition to the toll-free number, information is available in English, Spanish, Cantonese, Mandarin, Korean and Vietnamese. Information is also available at the CDHS Web site http://www.dhs.ca.gov/cancer.

T he HIV/AIDS pandemic has had an enormous impact on the lives of thousands, if not millions, of people worldwide. The disease is now spreading at an alarming rate, and the global community is losing faith in its ability to control its growth.

In an attempt to help stem the tide of this epidemic, the United Nations has launched the HopeChild campaign. This initiative is designed to raise awareness about the devastating effects of HIV/AIDS and to encourage individuals and organizations to take action.

HopeChild is a comprehensive program that includes a wide range of activities, from raising funds to providing direct support to those affected by the disease. It is the largest and most comprehensive response to the global AIDS crisis to date.

The campaign has already made significant progress, with millions of dollars pledged and thousands of volunteers recruited. However, much more needs to be done if we are to achieve our goal of ending the epidemic.

We must all play our part in this battle against HIV/AIDS. Whether you can donate money, volunteer your time, or simply raise awareness, every little bit counts.

Let's join together to fight this disease and give hope to those in need.

Chief Tunson sets up new MSJC Police Department

When students return to Mt. San Jacinto College in August, they will notice a new presence on campus—police officers, including police officers in uniform and black and white squad cars, all created to make our campus environment a safer place.

"Although campus crime has not seen a notable decrease, the College has grown and developed over the years," said Richard J. Geske, MSJC president. "And it is our mission to ensure a safer environment for our students. We are one of the last community colleges in the state to implement a police department.

"In addition to law enforcement and creating a safe atmosphere, the new police department will address student concerns and faculty about crime prevention and student defense," said Tommy Tunson, chief of the newly formed Mt. San Jacinto College Police Department. The department will also integrate with the College's Administration of Justice program, using students as interns.

Until now, the college employed security personnel, who had no real authority, could not issue citations for parking or traffic violations and did not carry weapons. If there was a problem on campus, the security people called the local police department for assistance.

The new MSJC police will be in uniform, drive patrol cars, and have the same authority as city or state police. They will issue warnings or tickets for parking or traffic violations, which will carry standard fines and will be enforced by the state court system.

"This is a major cultural change for the college," said Tunson. (pronounced Too - Sawn). The MSJC police will enforce parking and traffic rules and criminal code violations, which is new and will require a transition period. A parking ticket violation will be permitted an appeal process to receive the adjudication.

We are committed to making this a secure environment for our students, and a great place to work," said Kevin Segawa, student assistant for the college's police department.

Michael Whelan, a sociology professor at the College, said, "I am very pleased to see that the College is safety conscious. There have been a number of problems with the current parking enforcement. I think this is a very positive step for the College."

Tunson was born on April 15, has been setting up the department and hiring staff, including Kevin Segawa of San Diego, who began his job as a police officer in June. A second police officer will be hired in July. The MSJC Police Department is paid for in part by a $150,000 federal grant, which will cover partial salaries of the two police officers for three years. To qualify for the grant, the MSJC police department had to meet the requirements of the California Community College Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST), which is the same agency that certifies municipal police officers and sheriff's deputies.

A native of Southern California, Tunson, grew up in the South Central area of Los Angeles and decided to become a police officer at age 15 after the devastating riots in 1965. "I know I wanted to be part of the solution" (to the problems), he said.

He studied administration of justice at Santa Ana Community College, and worked as a security officer on that campus. He transferred to National University in San Diego and earned his Bachelor's degree, followed by a doc­ toclor's degree in law from Pacific West Law School of Lake in 1995.

With his active professional life, Tunson says he is known by three different titles: Police Chief, President and Lt. Colonel. In addition to being the Police Chief at MSJC, he is a Lieutenant Colonel in the U.S. Army's Homeland Security section, and is responsible for the CSU, Long Beach, Naval Base in Los Angeles County, Police and Fire Department. He served in the U.S. Army for five years in the Persian Gulf (military police chief of Los Angeles) and in Bagram, Texas.

Emergency Preparedness Liaison Office for the 5th U.S. Army's Homeland Security section, and is responsible for 11 Southern California counties.

With more than 20 years of police work to his credit, Tunson has served as Interim Chief of Police for the South San Gabriel Police Department in Los Angeles County, Police Chief for the Colton Police Department, and Police Chief in Cudahy. He served in the U.S. Army for five years in the Persian Gulf (military police chief of Los Angeles) and in Bagram, Texas.
