Judge Continues Sutton Case Against Riverside

By Cheryl Brown

Riverside County Superior Court Judge Richard T. Fields ruled in the case that the defendant has not satisfied the standard and that the judge will continue the case to a jury trial.

Roger Sutton, a 20-year veteran of the department, stems his lawsuit in 2000 by an Asian-American Riverside Police Department officer will continue on the job after a nine-day tour of 26 communities statewide on Wednesday, September 11, 2003.

Kentucky during the Civil War. After the war his parents moved across the Ohio River to Ripley, Ohio where he graduated from the old White high school, the Ripley High School. To do. Through a competitive exam he was an appointment to WestPoint of which he later said that the worst he could wish for an enemy would be to make him Black and send him to Westpoint. It was a very painful episode in his life.

Young and his Buffalo soldiers completed the road that leads to the big river. He also completed the road that went to Mt. McKinley, the highest mountain in North America. He deplored how to guard and protect the various interests in the park. Before Young's arrival stockholders were ravaging the national forests. Someone put up in the area of 200,000 sheep grazed there. He pointed out their duties and said that the lawn was well tended and they must be obeyed while I was guarding the park. The work of Young and his men is well documented. There are detailed maps of his work on file in the Park Service records.

Record reflects a Riverside Congressman Miller D. Frady and the Virgilia Scotia of工信 visited him on a working tour of the park.

Black America's Unfinished March on Washington

By Mr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Washington—joined in spirit, no matter what your color, through the county—citizens of all races gathered at the Capitol in Washington, D.C.

In fact, theomination had announced that the Civil Rights March on Washington would be held on August 28.

The March on Washington was to be a demonstration of unity among all races and beliefs. The event would bring together people from different backgrounds and perspectives, united in their desire for equal treatment and justice for all.

Black America's Unfinished March on Washington celebrates the spirit of unity and the progress that has been made in the decades since the March. It serves as a reminder of the ongoing struggle for equality and justice.

Rep. Baca Receives Notice of Federal Funds for Fontana and Omnitrans Fleet

Myth #1: If We Ban Soda, We Will Lose Money

Representative Joe Baca (D-Rialto) recently announced that two important transportation projects will receive critical federal funding.

Dear Dear Dr. Levister:
The Coke machines are great for my child's elementary school campus. However, our son's high school campus honors five soft drink machines. The principal said, "If we ban soda we will lose money." How can I counter his claims?

Dear Mad Mom:
Last summer, my son, a strong student, works in his local gas station, machine food service, and on his family's farms. He summered in your Black Voice News, P.O. Box 1581, Los Angeles, CA 90036. Your letter is due no later than the 15th of each month.

Myth #2: The soft drink companies help themselves by building brand loyalty among kids in their quest for lifetime custom- er base. Adequate funding of the schools is the responsibility of the government; it is one of the reasons we pay taxes. You schools need money, but turning to commercial sales for income is a distraction of the experience of your children's health is a cop-out.

Myth #3: Kids won't buy healthy foods, research shows that students will buy healthy foods and drinks at an increased price. In some schools, drinks are sold at a premium price. If we ban soda, we pay the price.

Fields did note that an accidental dog bite had occurred at the same time the canine officer had also involved in the retirement of another officer. However, no discipline was given to the canine officer in that case, according to court records.

Court records also stated that discipline in relation to a handful of other canine bites was either not given to the canine officers involved or consisted of a written reprimand.

Sutton's attorney, Samantha Goodwin, argued that the city was trying to make it look like the civilian win a bad officer and a danger to others. She added that the department involving Lindsay was the first accidental bite that had resulted in discipline for Sutton. She said that the department had not followed a recommendation by the agency which purchased the police dogs to evaluate the department's canine, which stated that the canine's dog would be involved with several hours of training. Instead, they permitted him from working with his canine during an investigation which lasted over a year.

According to Sutton's lawyer, the relevant comments began in the 1980s when officers stated that African-Americans could not pass police detective tests. In the 1990s, Sutton alleged that he was told by one of his field training officers that "any monkey can fill out a report" when he received a good evaluation from an officer for writing good reports. The remarks continued through the 1990s, with Tyisha Miller being called a "Tyb-a" by a former academy spot in roll call who also stated that an African-American woman who attended the local university had to turn herself in to be given an officer to get the job. Another sergeant told in roll call that Sutton's problems were because of Tyisha Miller in 1999 were "mental".

In 2000, another officer said in Sutton's presence, that the only way American Indians would seek law enforcement would be from behind bars and that officers should take "some boomer" to a career day at Sherman Indian High School to "boomer them up."

In 2001, another interview with the Black Voice, Sutton Attorney General Bill Lockyer had said that there were racially and violent comments and jokes being told during roll call sessions and that the sergeant participated in the hatred rather than stopping it. As a result, the roll call room at the Lincoln Field Operations Station was equipped with video cameras, as part of the state consent decree.

According to Sutton's lawsuit, the Black Voice was the first account for the city to report when he had received a written reprimand. He had heard about the case, he met with current Police Chief Russ Leach, who told him that even though there were problems with the department in the past, the atmosphere was changing and he would receive better treatment.

He was assigned to the Personnel and Training Division at the Orange Station, where he cleaned clothes and arranged meals. Then he said that a racist flyer was posted in the office, which stated, be the first one in the "hood" to own a "Hoven K8 Shooting System." He said that he deposited that he had not reported a to his supervisor because he feared that they would come down hard on him as they did in the past. Fields mentioned that although he was not overruled by what he had heard about the case, he believed it should go to trial.

Family members are a child's first teachers.

Showing you care how well your child does in school gives your child a head start on the road to success.

Encouraging kids to do their homework and study for tests helps them do well in school — and in life.

Teamwork and communication are key.

As this new school year begins, let's work as a team to give kids their best chance to succeed.

You can get to know your child's teacher at parent-teacher conferences and back-to-school nights. During the school year, if you have a question or concern about what's going on, call the school and ask your child's teacher to call you back.

Working together as a team, we can help kids succeed.

Their first teacher is you.

Giant Forest and to celebrate his accomplishments. He had become an important figure in the San Francisco and Central California areas because of his tenure at the Presidio and the Sequoia. Upon completion of the work his men gave him the honor to have a tree named in his honor but Young deferred saying there was another who should be honored, Booker T. Washington. He was against the practice of naming trees while he was Superintendent. He only allowed the naming of three trees, one for the Old Fellows, the Grand Army of the Republic and Booker T. The sign was nailed to the tree and decades passed. In 2001 while the Park Service was planning the celebration, they called Floyd Thomas, a historian dedicated to Young's life and staff member of the Afro American Museum, in Wilberforce, Ohio. He mentioned the tree and faxed a photo of it the same day. The Park Service had no information about it and they sent technician Ward Eldridge out to find it. The daunting task was made easier when Park Historian Bill Tweed, instructor staff to look near the must Young built. There it was in all of its majesty, a closer look revealed the nail still in the tree a lot higher from the growth but still there.

Why the Booker T. name? According to historian/author, Dr. Rudolph Lapp, his research revealed that Young and Washington had lunch together a day before he was to leave California to return to Tuskegee in January of 1903. Young had each a good visit with him and he was so impressed by him, it stayed with him and it is probably why he named the tree for him," said Lapp in a telephone interview with Black Voice News. Lapp has written a book on Washington's trip to California in 1903. The Department Defense was there, as were the descendants of Young and Washington. The Defense Department's historians were there to pay respect to the memory of Young who was the first African American to be named by the military as a tribal leader or tribal leader in Haiti, Liberia and Nigeria where he died. Young's great granddaughter, Cheryl Dawson of Los Angeles summed up what others said, "I was so moved," she said in a telephone interview. "The historical importance of what he (Young) stood for has been overlooked the last 70 years. I'm honored to bring forth his legacy in a way that does him honor," she said. Shirley Gordon, Young's famous grandfather and great grandfather but this one was somehow very different. Not much is known about Booker T's travels on the west coast but he has family here: one granddaughter lives in Los Angeles, one of his great grandsons is head of the southern region of the California State Parks while others live in northern California. The family spokesperson, Margaret Clifford from Atlanta, was still on fire two weeks after the event. "We think Booker T. was truly amazing in his expansive travels. The family enjoyed the fellowship, meeting the Young family and the experience," she said.

There were talks by Tim Sinclair, from the Booker T. Monterey Jazz Festival Spotlights Vocal Versatility

Vocalist virtuoso Jon Hendricks will top the list of vocally diverse artists performing at the 46th annual Monterey Jazz Festival at the Monterey County Fairgrounds Sept. 19, 20 and 21.

Jazz vocalists representing styles from straight-ahead to modern, blues to bebop and Afro-Cuban to zydeco will mix and mingle musical expressions to provide pleasing palates to suit everyone's tastes at the world's oldest continuous jazz festival.

Besides Hendricks, the man who best takes instrumental notes and translates them into vocal rhythm patterns equally challenging as the intricacies of forming on the Jimmy Lyons/Marvin Smith axis, one of the jazz world's great piano-drum duos, the singers at Monterey this year include Nnenna Freelon, one of the jazz world's big names.

In 1957, Hendricks teamed with Latin jazz vocalist Dave Lambert to convince Cred Taylor to record an album of vocal jazz, rhythm and blues. After the 16-voice, singing-good-but-can't-swing Lambert, Hendricks and Ross became a hit and evolved into Vocalese virtuoso Jon Hendricks.

The vocal dynamics of what is considered by critics and jazz aficionados alike the best jazz vocal trio of all time influenced several generations of jazz singers in the same tradition, particularly The Manhattan Transfer, Al Jarreau, Bobby McFerrin and Diane Reeves. Lambert, Hendricks and Ross' vocal version of Basie's 'Jumpin' at the Woodside' is still considered one of the best jazz covers.

In 1960, Monterey Jazz Festival board commissioned Hendricks to compose a historical overview of jazz. His 'Evolution of the Blues,' a musical epic tracing the roots of jazz from Africa into Black America and musically stepping across gospel, Dixieland, big band, bebop, modern, cool and, finally, jazz, debuted in Monterey that year to overwhelming acclaim. It returned for a late engagement in the '70s and finally sold out audiences throughout the United States for its theatrical run.

Hendricks earned a degree in health care administration from Simmons College, worked in the field for several years and devoted his time and attention to marriage and family before reverting to his first love singing. He had given his first solo performance at age 7, singing 'Amazing Grace' at church. The sounds she heard as a child as gospel singers in her church and jazz vocalist Nina Simone and Billy Eckstine played on records by her parents -- would distinguish her.

Following her grandmother's wise counsel -- 'Bloom where you're planted, sing where you are' -- Freelon finally submitted her application to the Inland Empire for any occasion.

The achievements of outstanding Inland Empire and other California women professionals will be recognized, while younger women will have the opportunity to meet those established in their careers and forge mentoring relationships at the fourth annual Women in Focus FORUM 2003 Conference and Gala Awards on Oct. 17 and 18 at Cal State San Bernardino Student Center.

More than 300 women and teens are expected to gather at the university to meet and exchange ideas for advancing the role of women in the workplace, and to recognize those who have been successful in their careers.

The event is being organized by Women in Focus FORUM, a networking forum for women in business, college students and teen girls 13-17, and chaired by Jonnette Chambers, of Chambers Conference and Gala Awards on Oct. 17 and 18 at Cal State San Bernardino Student Center.

Stewart Appointed to Increase African American Homeownership

Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., a national leader in residential finance, announced that Bridges Stewart has been appointed vice president in its national emerging markets division and will focus on the African American community. In this position, Stewart will be responsible for developing relationships with potential business partners who are trusted advisors to the African American community. In addition, Stewart will be in charge of increasing market share and developing tactics to assist local branches in pursuing new business to African Americans.

"Bridges is a seasoned professional who understands the emerging markets consumer, and his expertise will enable home buyers, low- to moderate- income borrowers and ethnic minorities to achieve the American dream of homeownership," said Mary Salinas Duren, senior vice president of Countrywide’s national emerging markets division. "As we work toward expanding homeownership opportunities to African American communities throughout the nation, Bridges will help bring heightened awareness of Countrywide’s African American outreach efforts.

Stewart, a 20-year mortgage industry veteran, most recently served as vice president of national urban sales at CitiMortgage, where he was responsible for establishing six regional mortgage sales offices that targeted on emerging markets and affordable lending. Previously, Stewart was CitiMortgage’s vice president of business development, where he managed affordable housing initiatives to establish relationships with Fannie Mae and key Realtor and builder companies. Prior to holding this position, Stewart was the community investment manager for California Federal Bank, where he implemented successful strategies to meet affordable housing loan production goals. Stewart has also held management positions with IIT Residential Capital, Wells Fargo Bank, Oakland Reinvestment Corporation and Bank of America.

Stewart received a bachelor’s degree in corporate finance from California State University at Hayward, and attended the University of California at Berkeley, where he studied accounting, finance and real estate.

Sparks Win West; East Got Next

Make it three for Lisa Leslie; Sparks win Third straight Western Conference Title and Finals appearance

By G. Montgomery

Staples Center – In what will be remembered as the most exciting WNBA playoff game played to date in the Staples Center’s short three-year history, Lisa Leslie led the Sparks to a three point victory over the Sacramento Monarchs and a third straight Western Division Crown.

Although the women’s version of LA vs Sacramento hoops may not have reached the status of “rivalry” as many have dubbed the Lakers and Kings, it does state very clearly that the two best teams in the WNBA’s western conference are in California and the best one is in L.A. Just like their big brothers, the Sparks without two elimination games and narrowly defeated their foes from the capitol city in a heart-throbbing night. “It was a fun game, it’s always exciting,” Leslie said after the Sparks had defeated their foes from the capital city in a heart-throbbing night.

Sacramento simply had no answer. With all-star center Yolanda Griffith hobbled by a bruised shoulder, she couldn’t avoid early foul trouble forcing Sacramento head coach John Whisenhunt to award the job of guarding Leslie to DeMya Walker.

“Lisa Leslie is the Shaquille O’Neal of the WNBA. She’s a handful, she is an offensive and defensive threat.” said Whisenhunt. “She’s the best player in the world, they’re the best teams in the world, and they’ve proven it two years in a row.”

Walker was the Sparks second, beating her male counterpart, but there was no whistle and Leslie easily scored the go ahead basket with 9.8 seconds left. “There is no way that you could not have seen that charge,” said Walker. But as Walker has learned the officials usually let the players decide the outcome in the closing seconds.

By winning the western conference title, the Sparks will play the Detroit Shock for the WNBA Championship. The series will begin on Friday Night at Staples.
