The 1976 "Playboy Student Survey" reveals that although college women are becoming more sexually active, the percentage of male virgins on campus is rising. In the 1970 "Playboy" survey, 49 percent of female students graduated with more than their brains intact, but by 1976, this figure had dropped to 26 percent. Yet, in the same period, the percentage of male virgins rose from 18 to 26 percent (or at least those willing to admit it - Ed.) This parity indicates the end of the double standard, observes "Playboy." Although the poll reveals 29 percent of the women consider simple friendship sufficient grounds for sexual intercourse, most student sexual activity today takes place within fairly monogamous relationships. Fifty-five percent of women and 47 percent of the men questioned had a lifetime total of three or fewer partners.

In spite of the fact that many students look upon college as a kind of sexual testing ground, conservatives need not fear that the increase in campus sexual activity is another sign that our moral fabric is unwinding. A full 60 percent of students disagree strongly with the statement "I hope to have an open marriage which would include extramarital sex." Another 87 percent disagree strongly with the statement "I'm not interested in marrying. I hope to have a varied sex life, including a number of affairs." Students offered some surprise on other issues, too. Although both politicians and the general public are busy denouncing Big Government, students say they want more Government intervention in almost every area of life, particularly in enforcement of pollution laws. Seventy percent favor hand-gun control, and almost half want to restore the death penalty. Students generally favor stricter laws, heavier penalties and mandatory therapy for hard-drug users. (Only marijuana and alcohol escape this prohibition.)

Almost all students (94 percent) support equal economic and political rights for women, while 79 percent oppose any move to restrict women's right to abortion. In fact, 67 percent of Catholic students questioned oppose the so-called right-to-life amendment. Only 36 percent of those polled were optimistic about the future. Seventy-five percent agree that there has been a shift toward conservatism among students, yet judging from the statistics, most students have a different definition of conservative.

President welcomes students

To all returning and new students I extend greetings as we begin our 12th academic year. In so doing allow me to make some suggestions.

Take full advantage of the many opportunities available to you. Learn to appreciate and understand your cultural heritage, the society in which you live, and the natural environment with which we must all come to terms.

Pick the brains of an excellent faculty and staff who are ready to help you as you learn and develop during your stay at California State College, San Bernardino. Excellent facilities, a fine library, and many other resources are available for your use.

Don't miss the boat!!

Welcome

Info for Vets

Coming Oct. 5

All veterans and their dependents are invited to attend the "California CARES for Veterans" Opportunity Fair to be held at the San Bernardino Convention Center, 303 North E Street, San Bernardino, Tues., October 5, 3 to 9 p.m.; and Wednesday, Oct. 6, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The two-day fair has been designed to answer questions of veterans and dependents and to inform them about the many departments and agencies that offer assistance to veterans. Virginia Mae Duys, director of the State Department of Veterans Affairs says that "few veterans realize the opportunities open to them through such agencies as the Small Business Administration for obtaining business loans. A representative of SBA will be at the fair."

"Besides the traditional agencies and departments associated with veterans affairs, other departments not normally connected with veterans benefits will be in attendance. Among these will be Social Security to explain a cost-of-living increase as it relates to pensions, and voter registration personnel will provide voter registration assistance.

Representatives of the State and Federal legislative offices have been invited to attend to hear what veterans have to say about their needs. Assistance will be available for the ex-offender veteran or the veteran who needs a "bad conduct" discharge upgraded," Days said.

She emphasized that the fair is designed for the veterans of every era. "Every veteran from the Spanish-American War through the Vietnam War has rights and benefits guaranteed by the State and Federal government," she said. "Veterans recently discharged have difficulty readjusting to civilian life. As veterans become older, needs change in regard to medical attention, compensation and pension, employment, education and many others. If the veteran becomes disabled or dies the veteran's dependent may become eligible for a number of benefits. These dependents problem is, their question will be fully reviewed at the fair by competent representatives," she concluded.

Child care will be available

Child care will be available, at a low cost, again this year to students at Cal State, San Bernardino.

The college's Child Care Center opened yesterday at the Kendall Elementary School, a short distance from the college. The center, serving children from 2 through 12, is open to youngsters of students, staff and faculty at the college. The hours will be 7:45 a.m. to 6:15 p.m., Monday through Thursday and 7:45 a.m. to 5:15 p.m., Friday.

The curriculum, educational in nature, stresses learning experiences for the children. The cost for the coming year will be 70 cents an hour. A special rate of $95 a month is available for children enrolled full-time.

A few sliding-scale places are available for children of students who qualify for this state funding. Information on the Child Care Center is available from the Dean of Students Office at Cal State, phone 887-7524.

Parents also may visit the facilities, register their children and talk with the director, Judy Calkins, at the Center (Room K-1 at Kendall School) during the week of Sept. 13. Since she will be in and out, interested parents should call the Dean of Students office to make an appointment to see her there.
Pawprint wants your body!

We need all the bodies we can get our hands on — for journalistic purposes. We need people who can write newsreels, opinion articles, satires, reviews, and who can sell advertising. This paper strives to be the result of a one-man operation. It should be a sufficient indication of the helps that is needed. People joining the staff can get two units academic credit in Journalism Practicum.

There is also some monetary rewards. Those writing assigned newswires can get up to 25 cents a column. A rather chancy amount at the moment, but efforts are underway to fatten that amount and widen its applicable base, i.e. unassigned newswires, columns, etc. There is also a 20 percent commission on advertising sold.

Those not on the staff are encouraged to submit any opinion articles that they come up with.

Also, the position of managing editor is still open. It pays $5 per issue.

Those interested should contact the editor at PS-22.

The first meeting of the Pawprint staff will be 12 noon, Thursday, Sept. 23, at the Pawprint office, PS-22.

ASB welcomes

Welcome to Cal State, San Bernardino. This year promises to be interesting, and exciting. There are many things happening on campus; the construction of the new Fine Arts Building, Student Health Center, most important of all the Student Union Building are all under various stages of construction.

This year’s activities we/you will be an improvement over previous years. In addition to our regular Student Services, A.S.B. is planning on initiating an Evening Services for our night population.

We as elected officers have a responsibility to you, to give you the kind of government you want and pay for. This we will attempt to do. You as a student have a responsibility to keep us, your elected officers aware of your likes and dislikes. I look forward to an exciting year, a year hopefully filled with your comments, suggestions, and criticisms.

Kevin Gallagher
AS President

Greetings and a warm hello.

Well, fellow coyote teachers, the first, or maybe it is just another year has just begun. To many it will be a little different this year, but at any rate good luck.

New campus program

The B.A. in Human Services, being introduced at Cal State, San Bernardino this fall, is an interdisciplinary degree program for the career-oriented para-professional person.

It is designed to suit the generalist, who must deal with a variety of human needs.

The program is designed for each students who plan careers in one of the human services professions such as social welfare, corrections, probation, parole or psychology, and for individuals currently employed as paraprofessionals in one of these fields.

Core work will be offered in the evening, as well as in the regular day-time program.

Courses are drawn primarily from sociology, psychology, ethnic studies and health science. An internship or field experience is required before graduation.

Further information on the program is available from the Office of Academic Planning of Cal State, San Bernardino.

Students go abroad

Your Cal State, San Bernardino students have been selected for study abroad this academic year under the International Programs of the California State University and Colleges.

Raul Ortega of Coachella and John Tarpai of Riverside will study sociology at the University of Uppsala in Sweden.

Helan LaPonte, Rialto, and Thomas Randolph of Chicago will spend the school year studying French at the University of Aix-en-Provence near Marseilles.

Ortega and Randolph this year resided in Serrano Village, Cal State’s on-campus residence halls.

The strong desire and the ability to be introduced to a different culture were major factors in selection, said Dr. Mireille Rydell, French professor, and International Programs representative for the college.

When the students arrive at the European universities, they will be given six weeks of intensive language study. Their studies abroad will apply toward their Cal State degree. Randolph is a political science major. Miss LaPonte’s field is French. Randolph has declared English as his major and Tarpai is a graduate student.

Full approval was received this summer by Cal State, San Bernardo for the offering of a designated subjects credential for vocational teachers.

The college is the third body in California to be fully authorized by the California Commission for Teacher Preparation and Licensing to prepare teachers for the designated subjects credential under the Ryan Act. (The other two are UCLA and Mendocino County Community College District.)

The college also offers a Bachelor of Vocational Education degree, which was introduced last year. “The mushrooming program already has at least 100 students working on a degree or a credential,” said Dr. Joseph Yabu, program coordinator.

The Cal State credential program prepares vocational teachers for grades kindergarten through 12 in eight subject areas: adult education, agricultural education, business and office education, distributive education, health education, home economics education, technical education, and trade and industrial education.

Through the college’s extension office, Dr. Yabu is taking the new education program to the Coachella Valley.

All course work for credential is offered in the late-day or evening to enable individuals to earn their credential without missing work. The requirements for the credential are a minimum of 15 quarter units of credit plus possible prescribed courses to reach the desired level of competency according to Dr. Yabu. The applicant must have five years of work experience.

The candidate for the credential would have no problem in doing the course work in one academic year, Dr. Yabu said.

This fall quarter, for example, he is teaching two courses. “Principles and Methods for Teaching Designated Subjects” will be given from 6 to 9:00 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday, during the same time span, he will teach the advanced methods course.

A student could possibly enroll in both courses for fall quarter; if he consults first with Dr. Yabu, an appointment may be made through the School of Education office, phone 887-7571.

Early childhood teaching program offered

Cal State, San Bernardino is offering two programs in early childhood education this fall. The first is an early childhood option to the multiple subjects credential it will qualify the individual to teach pre-school through sixth grade, explained Dr. Florence Mote, program coordinator.

Teachers already holding a multiple subjects credential would wish to pursue their additional course work plus five weeks of full-time student teaching be able to earn the early childhood option.

Cal State is one of the few colleges or universities in southern California which offers the option in early childhood education, Dr. Mote said.

Woman studies now offered

The emerging field of women's studies is the subject of a new credential program offered by California State College, San Bernardino beginning this fall. Courses may be taken by regular students or by those registered through the Office of Continuing Education.

The extension course offered this fall, on Wednesday evenings starting Oct. 6, is "Assertive Behavior." It is designed to help individuals learn how to say "no" and feel comfortable about it. It will be taught from 7 to 9 p.m. on campus.

One of the objectives of the certificate program is to bring to the campus new students who may not wish to pursue a degree program. It does not increase the number of graduates but helps individuals learn how to say "no."" said information to be marked about the school.

Information on the program may be obtained from Dr. Gloria Carp, associate professor of psychology at Cal State, who is advisor for the certificate program. Registration for the extension course may be completed through the Office of Continuing Education.

Students needed to transport disabled students 110 teachers are enrolled in the new program, which will be companion for the reading credential. Currently about 110 teachers are enrolled in the credential program, and many are working toward master's also.

The purpose of the option under the M.A. in education is to provide a graduate-level program for teachers of all levels, although the main focus is on the elementary level. Secondary teachers are invited to pursue the reading credential in order to help their students with reading problems.

"The new M.A. option is child-oriented," said Joe Gray, assistant professor of education and coordinator of reading programs. "I look at children as one of the major problems, addressing the issue about reading problems. There is a greater emphasis on effective communication with the school on testing techniques only.

Candidates for the M.A. must have 65 units, 40 from the School of Education and five from an elective course in education, drama, English, art or foreign language. All of the required courses in this program are available in the late day or evening.

IOC meets

The Inter-Organizational Council (IOC) meet its first meeting Wednesday, Sept. 29, at 12 noon in SS-171 to inform club advisors of activities of the group. All new and old clubs and organizations are invited.

The first business meeting of the IOC will be Wednesday, Oct. 6, noon in SS-171 for the purpose of elections, working on the constitution and monitory request.
