Playboy polls attitude changes

The 1978 "Playboy Student Survey" reveals that although college women are becoming more sexually active, the percentage of male virgins on campus is rising. In the 1970 "Playboy" survey, 48 percent of female students graduated with more than their brains intact, but by 1978, this figure had dropped to 26 percent. Yet, in the same period, the percentage of male virgins rose from 18 to 26 percent (or at least those willing to admit it - Ed.) This party indicates the end of the double standard, observes "Playboy."

Although the poll reveals 29 percent of the women consider simple friendship sufficient grounds for sexual intercourse, most student sexual activity today takes place within fairly monogamous relationships. Fifty-five percent of women and 47 percent of the men questioned had a lifetime total of three or fewer partners.

In spite of the fact that many students look upon college as a kind of sexual testing ground, conservatives need not fear that the increase in campus sexual activity is another sign that our moral fabric is unwinding. A full 60 percent of students disagree strongly with the statement "I hope to have an open marriage which would include extramarital sex." Another 87 percent disagree strongly with the statement "I'm not interested in marrying. I hope to have a varied sex life, including a number of affairs."

Students offered some surprise on other issues, too. Although both politicians and the general public are busy denouncing Big Government, students say they want more Government intervention in almost every area of life, particularly in the enforcement of pollution and pollution prevention.

Seventy percent favor hand-gun control, and almost half want to restore the death penalty. Students generally favor stricter laws, heavier penalties and mandatory therapy for hard-drug users. (Only marijuana and alcohol escape this prohibition.)

Almost all students (94 percent) support equal economic and political rights for women, while 79 percent oppose any move to restrict women's right to abortion.

In fact, 67 percent of Catholic students questioned oppose the so-called right-to-life amendment. Only 26 percent of those polled were optimistic about the future. Seventy-five percent agree that there has been a shift toward conservatism among students, yet judging from the statistics, most students have no different definition of conservative.

Child care will be available

To all returning and new students I extend greetings as we begin our 12th academic year. In so doing allow me to make some suggestions.

Take full advantage of the many opportunities available to you. Learn to appreciate and understand your cultural heritage, the society in which you live, and the natural environment with which we must all come to terms.

Prepare yourself for an interesting and worthwhile career. Participate in student government, recreational, and social activities.

Pick the brains of an excellent faculty and staff who are ready to help you as you learn and develop during your stay at California State College, San Bernardino. Excellent facilities, a fine library, and many other resources are available for your use.

Don't miss the boat!!

Welcome
John M. Pfau
Pawprint wants your body!

We need all the bodies we can get our hands on — for journalistic purposes. We need people who can write newsreleases, opinion articles, satires, reviews, and who can sell advertising. This paper, therefore, is the result of a one-man operation. It should be a sufficient indication of the kip that is needed. People joining the staff can get two units academic credit in Journalism Practicum. There is also some monetary rewards. Those writing assigned newswriters can get up to 25 cents a column inch. A rather chancy amount at the moment, but efforts are underway to fatten that amount and widen its application, i.e. unsanctioned newswriters, columns, etc. There is also a 20 percent commission on advertising sold.

Those not on the staff are encouraged to submit any opinion articles that they come up with. Also, the position of managing editor is still open. It pays $35 an issue. Those interested should contact the editor at PS-22.

The first meeting of the Pawprint staff will be 12 noon, Thursday, Sept. 23, at the Pawprint office, PS-22.

ASB welcomes

Welcome to Cal State, San Bernardino. This year promises to be interesting, and exciting. There are many things happening on campus; the construction of the new Fine Arts Building, Student Health Center, and most important of all the Student Union Building are all under various stages of construction.

This year's activities we hope will be an improvement over previous years. In addition to our regular Student Services, A.S.B. is planning on initiating an Evening Services for our night population.

As elected officers have a responsibility to you, to give you the kind of government you want and pay for. This we will attempt to do. As you as a student have a responsibility to keep us, your elected officers aware of your likes and dislikes. I look forward to an exciting year, a year hopefully fulfilling with your comments, suggestions, and criticisms.

Sincerely,

Fred Dehane

MONEY

MIREILLE RYDELL, French professor at San Bernardino State will be a little different this year. To many it may mark your last year or your first, or maybe it is just another year, but at any rate go luck.

The 1976-1977 year brings a lot of changes at San Bernardino State:
1) the completion of the Fine Arts Building, 2) the beginning of construction of the Student Union Building, 3) the beginning of construction of the new College Bookstore, and 5) a new grading system that uses plus-minus designations. Yes, San Bernardino State will be a little different this year.

Again I wish the best of luck to you the student body and I am sure the 76-77 year will be a good and productive year.

Sincerely,

AS Vice President

New B.A. offered

The B.A. in Human Services, being introduced at Cal State, San Bernardino this fall, is an interdisciplinary degree program for the career-oriented para-professional person.

It is designed to suit the generalist, who must deal with a variety of human needs.

The program is designed for both students who plan careers in one of the human services professions such as social welfare, corrections, probation, parole or gerontology and for individuals currently employed as para-professionals in one of these fields.

This program will be offered in the evening, as well as in the regular day-time program.

Full approval was received this summer by Cal State, San Bernardi­no for the offering of a designated subjects credential for vocational teachers. The college is the third body in California to be fully authorized by the California Commission for Teacher Preparation and Licensing to prepare teachers for the designated subjects credential under the Ryan Act. (The other two are UCLA and Mendocino County School District.)

The college also offers a Bachelor of Vocational Education degree, which was introduced last year. "The mushrooming program already has at least 100 students working on a degree or a credential," said Dr. Joseph Yabu, program coordinator.

The Cal State credential program prepares vocational teachers for grades kindergarten through 12 in eight subject areas: adult education, agricultural education, business and office education, distributive education, health education, home economics education, technical education, and trade and industrial education.

Further information on the program is available from the Office of Academic Planning of Cal State, San Bernardino.

GO AHEAD

Your Cal State, San Bernardino student has been selected for study abroad this academic year under the International Programs of the California State University and Colleges.

Raul Ceja of Coachella and John Tarpai of Riverside will study sociology at the University of Uppsala in Sweden. Helen LaPointe, Rialto, and Thomas Randolph of Chicago will spend the school year studying French at the University of Aix-en-Provence near Marseilles.

Ceja and Randolph this year resided in Serrano Village, Cal State's on-campus residence halls. The strong desire and the ability to be introduced to a different culture were major factors in selecting them. On Thursday, said Dr. Mireille Rydell, French professor, and International Programs representative for the college.

When the students arrive at the European universities, they will be given six weeks of intensive language study. Their studies abroad will apply toward their Cal State degree, a political science major. Miss LaPointe's field is French. Randolph has declared English as his major and Tarpai is a graduate student.

Sincerely,

Fred Dehane
AS President

The college also offers a Bachelor of Vocational Education degree, which was introduced last year. "The mushrooming program already has at least 100 students working on a degree or a credential," said Dr. Joseph Yabu, program coordinator.

The Cal State credential program prepares vocational teachers for grades kindergarten through 12 in eight subject areas: adult education, agricultural education, business and office education, distributive education, health education, home economics education, technical education, and trade and industrial education.

Through the college's extension office, Dr. Yabu is taking the education program in the Coachella Valley.

All course work for credential is offered in the late-day or evening to enable individuals to earn their credential without missing work.

The requirements for the credential are a minimum of 15 quarter units of credit plus possible prescribed courses to reach the desired level of competency according to Dr. Yabu. The applicant also must have five years of work experience.

The candidate for the credential would have no problem in doing the course work in one academic year, Dr. Yabu said.

This fall quarter, for example, he is teaching two courses. "Principles and Methods for Teaching Designated Subjects" will be given from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., Tuesday through Thursday, during the same time span, he will teach the advanced methods course.

A student could possibly enroll in both courses for fall quarter, if he consults first with Dr. Yabu. An appointment may be made through the School of Education office, phone 887-7571.

Early childhood teaching program offered

Cal State, San Bernardino is offering two programs in early childhood education this fall. The first business meeting of the newly formed Special Projects Committee will be held on campus on Oct. 23.

The first program is a specialist credential in early childhood education. This is a graduate program for persons who already hold a valid basic teaching credential. The program prepares teachers interested in becoming directors of early childhood programs or who wish to heighten their skills in working with young people.

Candidates for either credential who are not currently enrolled in any teacher education program should contact the School of Education office and file their application for admission to the college as quickly as possible, said Dr. Mote. Registration for the fall quarter is Sept. 20-21.

The second program is a specialist credential in early childhood education. This is a graduate program for persons who already hold a valid basic teaching credential. The program prepares teachers interested in becoming directors of early childhood programs or who wish to heighten their skills in working with young people.

The extension course offered this fall, on Wednesday evenings starting Oct. 6, is "Assertive Behavior". It is designed to help individuals learn how to say "no" and feel comfortable doing so. It is scheduled from 7 to 9 p.m. on campus.

One of the objectives of the certification program is to bring to the campus new students who may not wish to pursue a degree program but do wish to increase their knowledge, understanding and skills through a series of related courses.

Information on the program may be obtained from Dr. Gloria Cowan, associate professor of psychology at Cal State, who is advisor for the certificate program. Registration for the extension course may be completed through the Office of Continuing Education.

Woman studies now offered

The emerging field of women's studies is the subject of a new credential program offered by California State College, San Bernardino beginning this fall. The courses are from a range of subjects, including assertive training and women in administration, language, administration and foreign languages.

The certificate consists of 30 units (six courses) of core work. Half may be taken at the 100 level through extension. The courses are expected to work toward the reading credential in order to help their students with reading problems. "The new M.A. option is child-oriented," said Joe Gray, assistant professor of education and co-director of reading programs. "It looks at children as one of the most important areas of education. It is designed to help them with reading problems. There's a greater emphasis on effective communication with the student than on testing techniques only.

Candidates for the M.A. must have 45 units, 40 from the School of Education and five from an elective course in education, drama, English, art or foreign languages. Students interested in the reading program may register for the courses in this program for credit. The courses in the program are to be offered in the late day or evening.

ICO meets

The Inter-Organizational Council (IOC) will have its first meeting Wednesday, Sept. 27, at 12 noon in SS-117 to inform club advisers about presentation ideas for IOC. All new and old clubs and organizations are invited.

A first business meeting of the IOC will be Wednesday, Oct. 6, at noon in SS-171 for the purpose of elections, working on the constitution and monitory requests.
