CINCO DE MAYO CELEBRATION PRESENTS:
MACLOVIO PEREZ

Jorge P. Moreno.

Traditional customs are passed down from generation to generation. Through these customs the past is relived, dying flames are kindled, and the man is made conscious of why he's here.

On May 5, 1862 Mexican troops, under General Zaragoza, outnumbered three to one, defeated invading French forces of Napoleon III, in the Battle of Puebla. This being one of the first battles leading the nation towards Independence.

As part of our culture we have come to celebrate this special event in history that demonstrates that the desire for freedom and justice will forever dare man to stand up for what he believes.

In an effort to try to share with the community a little piece of Mexican culture, M.E.Ch.A. with the appreciated help of co-sponsoring clubs and organizations have put together a special package that we hope you will enjoy.

"Hispanics in the Media" will be at the heart of the Cinco de Mayo observance at CSUSB, Friday, May 2.

The public is invited to meet Maclovio Perez, KCBS-TV weatherman and host of Channel 2's "Kid Quiz" show, at noon on the university's Lower Commons Patio. He will speak briefly about career opportunities in the media for Hispanic professionals. In addition, Sr. Emerenciano Rodriguez, Consul de Mexico, will talk to the public about the significance of Cinco de Mayo.

Open to the public from 11:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m., the celebration will feature live music by Mariachi Tequila and the Jazz Band Latin Society. Dance entertainment will be provided by Ballet Folklorico Mixcoacalli of Colton. Food and refreshments will be available for purchase at several booths.

Art work created by Cal State Chicano Art Students will be on display and arts and crafts furnished by several community organizations will be on sale.

In addition to public festivities, more than 300 students from Colton Junior High, and San Bernardino, Eisenhower and San Gorgonio High Schools will be bused to campus for a day of activities. They will tour the campus, learn about the university and meet a panel of Hispanic members of the media, including Perez and Miriam Hernandez of KCBS-TV, Phil Torres of The Sun, Ron Gonzales of the Riverside Press Enterprise and Rosario Leal of Radio Kinse. The university now offers a Spanish broadcasting major in the Communication Department.

The participating clubs and organizations are: Association of Hispanic Faculty and Staff, Special Events, Student Services, 7-UP Company of San Bernardino, Chicano News Media Association, La Esperanza Market, CSUSB Chicano Art Students.

M.E.Ch.A. cordially extends their invitation to all the students, school staff, and the community in general to participate in this annual celebration, in hope that all will have an enjoyable experience.

Car Rallye

by Mario Unser III

It is nearly time for the Recreational Sports Department's annual thrill-seeking event, the infamous Coyote 500 Car Rallye. This year's contest will be on Thursday, May 8th, starting at 6:30 p.m. from the dorm lot. All that is necessary to enter is a driver, a vehicle and a navigator. There is no entry fee! For those who may be wondering, a car rallye is not a race, but instead a test of navigating skills and the driver's ability to maintain a safe (given) average speed. Experience is not necessary, but of course, your car should be insured and in good working condition. We will be there, will you?

Spring Enrollment Tops

6300 Students

The largest spring quarter student body, 6338 students, was recorded on census date, Friday, April 18, reports Registrar Jo Ann Vos Wald. The figure represents a 13.8 percent increase over spring 1985. The strong enrollment pattern continuing in all quarters gives the university an average annual FTE of 4783.17 for the year. The figure is important in the budgeting process. The university's budget goal for the current year was 4600 FTE.

Test Your Nutrition I.Q.

What you don’t know about good eating may be dangerous to your health. The following nutrition quiz will help you to separate nutrition facts from fantasy. By the way, don’t feel bad if you do poorly on this quiz. The correct answers surprise most people.

How Many Teaspoons Of Sugar Are In Each 12-Ounce Bottle Of Pop?

a. 2 teaspoons
b. 4 teaspoons
c. 8 teaspoons
d. 10 teaspoons

Answer: 10 teaspoons. Drinking a bottle of soda is like drinking artificially flavored sugar water with 10 teaspoons of sugar dissolved in it. In fact, soda pop is the largest single source of sugar in the American diet. We get 10 times more sugar from soda pop than from candy!

Which Of These Foods In The Typical Fast Food Meal Contains The Most Sodium?
a. cheeseburger
b. apple pie
c. milkshake
d. french fries

Answer: Believe it or not, the cheeseburger packs over seven times the sodium of the french fries. Even the vanilla shakes and the apple pie are shockers. They contain two and four times as much sodium as the fries, respectively. The fries just taste more salty, because the salt is on the surface. People who are trying to cut back the amount of salt— or sodium—in their diet should realize that high-sodium processed foods don’t always taste salty.

Which Of These Two Foods Contains More Fat And Calories?
a. Slice of Sara Lee Cheesecake
b. Wendy’s triple cheeseburger

Answer: Cheesecake is not a low-fat food, but, at 240 calories—of which 60% is fat—the cheesecake pales next to the triple cheeseburger, The Wendy’s creation weighs in at 1,040 calories with about the same percentage of fat as the dessert. The triple cheeseburger is truly a “coronary bypass special.”

Carob Candy Bars Held In Health Food Stores Are Much More Nutritious Than Regular Milk Chocolate Bars.
a. True
b. False

Answer: False. Both candies are loaded with saturated fat, the kind of fat that increases the risk of developing heart disease. In a chocolate bar, the fat comes from the ingredient cocoa butter. In the carob bar, the fat is hidden in the palm oil. Granted, the chocolate bar does contain caffeine, but the amount—6 milligrams—is only 1/20th the amount of caffeine in a cup of brewed coffee.
WALK AMERICA

by Jeff Crooke

The Cal State Lower Commons was the start/finish line Sunday morning when the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation staged its annual fundraiser, WalkAmerica. The walk, using the theme “That’s What Friends Are For,” took place in more than 1000 communities and was participated in by more than 1.5 million Americans. More than 1500 people took part in the San Bernardino area.

“It is great fun, taking a walk and knowing you are doing something so worthwhile for yourself and for others,” said John Sharp, activities advisor and Cal State’s TeamWalk coordinator. This is the second year that a Cal State team has participated in the walk. Last year the team, consisting of 14 people, raised $931 in pledges.

“In addition to the camaraderie and fun, it is a wonderful community service project for clubs and greeks. This even provides high community visibility demonstrating the organization’s concern and commitment to the community and the future,” Sharp adds. “We urge everyone, students, staff and faculty to join WalkAmerica.” Radio station KMEN held a live broadcast from the commons during the walk and other entertainment was furnished by Bull Moon, a jazz band, and by Fresh Start, which covered blues material.

The March of Dimes is a national voluntary health agency which is dedicated to the prevention of birth defects. It was originally founded in 1938 by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to combat the outbreak of polio. After polio was eliminated from the roster of health threats, the organization redirected itself in 1958 towards a broader and more complex threat to national health - the problem of birth defects.

In pursuing this goal, the March of Dimes has given support to many leading institutions across the country, and has spent much time publicizing new advances in health care. In addition, they have tried to make the public more aware of what they can do to prevent birth defects.

Since 1957, a vast amount of information about the types and causes of birth defects, and their treatment and prevention, has been brought to light. The March of Dimes has been in the forefront of these efforts, playing a major role in the areas of genetics, prenatal diagnosis and therapy, and modern health education.

The March of Dimes supports more than 500 medical research projects each year. Among the latest advances in birth defects prevention and treatment are a new use of ultrasound, developed under a grant to Yale University School of Medicine, and an innovative new treatment that is saving babies from respiratory distress syndrome, a complication usually associated with premature birth.

Hands Across America is coming on Memorial Day weekend, Sunday May 25. An event in which over ten million Americans will participate by placing their hands together from New York to Los Angeles. What is this all about you ask? Well, Hands Across America is an attempt to raise money to help support the history and homeless people here in the U.S.A.

The U.S. Conference of Mayors reports that (81 percent of the cities surveyed) the demand for emergency food assistance is expected to grow this year. It is estimated that up to 2.5 million persons are homeless and the number of homeless, particularly families with children, is growing. But you can do something to help. To make a pledge and join the line, call toll-free 1-800-USA-0000. A contribution of ten dollars will give a participant a place in line and a commemorative certificate, while a twenty-five dollar donation will also include an event t-shirt.

For thirty-five dollars or more, the participant will receive the certificate, t-shirt, place in line, visor and commemorative pin. Local cities, such as Redlands and Riverside, will be along the four-thousand mile route, so as to give all of us here in the Inland Empire a chance to show our spirit, and support the line. Celebrities such as Bill Cosby, Kenny Rogers, Pete Rose and Lily Tomlin have already pledged their support for Hands Across America, and this is your chance to become a part of history in an event that has never been tried. Let’s just hope it doesn’t rain!

High-density development worries S.B. school board

by Jim Long

SAN BERNARDINO -- Southern California contractors aren't just raising a lot of houses and apartments in San Bernardino these days. They're raising concerns among the San Bernardino City Unified School District Board of Education members over who will occupy those homes.

The board members have visions of an abundance of new apartments and other types of low-cost housing. But historical and bureaucratic concerns are complicating the situation of contractors who might try to push through these projects.

"As a rule, if you deal with high-density housing, you deal with transient and high dropout rates," said Christie, who is a professor of public administration at Cal State.

That's not what the board members want in San Bernardino.

They worry, though, that Southern California contractors are offering housing that will lead to cases of high transiency and dropouts. This could increase a negative image of San Bernardino schools that board members are already trying to fight.

"There's not what the board members want in San Bernardino," said Diaz.

One way to battle the negative image now, as well as in the future, is to work for "positive" kinds of housing, according to Neigel.

"If you create a mix of students who mix well and blend well, (we must) see if we can influence (the contractors) into positive development," Neigel said.

The board members think a positive move would be for contractors to add housing that lure settlers into establishing themselves more firmly in city schools than other kinds of housing. Single-family homes are often mentioned by the board members as such a lure.

"Clearly, you'll have more transiency in high-density areas," Christie said.

"Our (San Bernardino's) growth is coming from two families living in a home. It's coming from people moving from Rialto into low-cost housing. That's not the best quality of students to have." said Brown.

Surrounding the board members' district are several other school districts that boast the kind of housing board members want in San Bernardino. In Rialto, for example, 76.3 percent of the housing units are owner-occupied, according to Census tracts issued by the U.S. Department of Commerce in 1983. Many of those homes are single houses and more have been built since 1983.

"This causes people to say, 'What kind of group do I fit in?'" said Brown.

Board members say they've worked with San Bernardino's City Hall to gain support that might sway contractors to build housing with the future of city schools in mind.

"As a rule, if you deal with high-density housing, you deal with transients and high dropout rates."--Charles Christie

In Redlands, where Census Tract records list the average home's value at $72,000 (San Bernardino's is $51,600), 66 percent of the homes are owner-occupied. Again, most are single houses. Fontana has 70 percent of its housing units occupied by owners.

San Bernardino rates lower than all three of those cities in each category. It's median house price is the lowest. So is its rate of owner-occupied homes (59.4 percent), according to the 1983 Census Tract.

School Board members in San Bernardino realize where their city stands in comparison to its suburbs, like Fontana, Rialto and Rialto. Christie said that because of the way Redlands is structured, with its abundance of single houses and concentration of professionals, more value is placed on education than in San Bernardino. He was not the only board member to make that point.

Brown thinks Christie's beliefs are also seen by potential settlers of the San Bernardino area.

"This causes people to say, 'What kind of group do I fit in?'" said Brown.

"If we want to create a mix of kinds of parents they are, the planners can't regulate that," said Page.

"What kinds of students, what kinds of parents they are, the planners can't regulate that," said Gage.

That leaves San Bernardino's education members over who will occupy those homes. They worry, though, that Southern California contractors are offering housing that will lead to cases of high transiency and dropouts. This could increase a negative image of San Bernardino schools that board members are already trying to fight.

"There's not what the board members want in San Bernardino," said Diaz.

"Water," one of the current releases from George Harrison's Hand Made films, is simply too good to be ignored.

Some film critics I've read have been put off by the wide range of political, religious, and cultural values the film topples with such whimsical flair, because (I suppose) they were too busy looking for their message that they didn't want to see the film's message shine through. And that's too bad, because the film is good enough to evoke comparisons to Marx Brothers classic "Duck Soup" and "Dr. Strangelove." Director Dick Clement—brilliantly wove together slapstick and rabel with enough intellectual humor/political commentary in this comedy set on a small British controlled Caribbean island too poor for anyone to notice to place the film on the same level as the African yarn mentioned above. Rather than relying on documentary style, used well in "The Gods," Clement took a page from the notebook of Duck Soup director Sam Wood—who in his 1928 Marx Brothers classic, viciously and effectively lampooned war by simply refusing to take it seriously—Clement refused to take a serious embroidery. Clement refused to take the movie seriously and its rampant military imperialism and crass materialism of both the major capital and communist powers.

The film opens with Cascara's British governor Michael Caine popping his head up over a lush garden, offering a sample of his latest hybrid need to a pair of appreciative natives, who pay homage to the governor's botanical efforts with the style of wine connoisseurs. Two rebels alias electronic musicians take over the state—run radio station and sing the praises of revolution, urging the people to take to the streets. The people promptly ignore the rebel call, and after capture and conviction the Governor commutes their sentence because the jail hasn't been painted yet.

The plot thickens with the arrival of a commercial filming crew from a huge American conglomerate, there to talk to the American people about their efforts to draw visiting—needed now—OPEC energy from a single oil well on this God-forsaken island—a well which in fact had never even been drilled yet. While playing around with the equipment, the well spouts some of the tastiest natural water going. "We're struck—striking Perrier," Clement is quoted as saying. Simultaneously, a British minister decides to relocate the people of Cascara—almost all descendents of shipwreck victims, with the exception of the more than 14 children the island's priest has sired—to another nearby British possession and make a mint using the island as a nuclear/toxic waste dump.

Caine's discovery of the island's prized bubbly, a secret the American conglomerate kept very poorly, and the Crown's indifference to the island's threat is the stage for Caine to join the revolution (and then there were three, plus a nutty environmentalist tantalizingly played by Valerie Perrine), and compete with Britain, Cuba, and the U.S. for control of the island under the bright lights and stick oversensationalism of the slick western media, who by now were poking into every nook and cranny on the tiny island. The Cubans, like the Brits and Yanks, show no interest in the island until they hear that it's mineral water the Yanks are after.

The French, fearing a threat to their Perrier, send a commando squad to knock the well out of action. From here, where else can this comedy go but to the floor of the United Nations in New York for some rock/reggae concert diplomacy. The two rebel musicians and a backup band which includes rock luminaries George Harrison, Ringo Starr and Eric Clapton.

Interlaced with this hodgepodge of international intrigue/gunboat diplomacy is Brenda Vaccaro's wild performance as the Governor's bored Guatemalan wife, and a surprise showing by Jimmie Walker (JJ. of the old Norman Lear TV show "Good Times") and famous at one time for saying "Dy-nomite!"

Opposition to Fee Referendum

Editorial

It seems that the student government at Cal State San Bernardino would do well as politicians. They have become the most unresponsive group of slugsards to ever hold any office of responsibility.

At a time when most people have to work their way toward a degree, they proposed a fee increase in A.S. fees. An increase that would benefit the few that can afford to use the snack bar and be supported by those who work and live off-campus.

It is about time the student government started to work on lowering fees not raising them.

Terrence E. O'Malley

Why a Fee Increase ??????

RESPONSE

Dear Mr. O'Malley,

In regards to your letter dated April 23, 1986, it is the consensus of our government that you have sighted many inaccuracies in your response to our newspaper article in last week's Chronicle.

First of all, the goal of our fee referendum is not to benefit the "...the few who can afford to use the snack bar...", but to enhance campus life through the services we provide to ALL students. These services include such things as our Child Care Center, funding for the on campus dodgeballs, check cashing privileges at our book store, the Book Co-Op, funding for the on campus student clubs, and many other worthwhile services.

Our goal through the proposed fee referendum is to save our existing programs as well as instigating programs to further benefit and enrich our student population. In response to your statement that the Associated Students should start to work on lowering fees, the fee has never been raised in the history of the school's existence. In other words, our fees are the same as they were when Lyndon B. Johnson was the nation's president.

In addition, if you have ever cashed a check at the book store, bought or sold a book at the Co-Op, attended a Special Event, joined a club or organization, or even read the Associated Student newspaper, The Chronicle, you have taken advantage of the services we provide. Without our needed fee increase, programs such as these, like our national programs, will be cut from the budget. If you would like any further information, please come in and see us at our offices located in the Student Union.

Sincerely,
Herrick Johnson, Administrative Director, from the Office of the President

Working as One

Editorial

It should at this time be common knowledge that the elections for Presidency of the Associated Student Body went in favor of Penny Overstreet. I want to take this time and space to thank each and every one of you that supported me with your help, advice and votes. Although I did not win a seat in A.S. government, I have pledged my help and support to the incoming president.

It is my desire to see changes made in favor of the students of this University. This can only be accomplished if we all come together to support our A.S. government.

In the past I have heard numerous complaints that the A.S. isn't doing anything for the students; if this is true, then we as students are also at fault for not supporting them as we should.

Again, I want to thank those of you who had enough confidence in my abilities and sincerity to give me your votes. Remember, a goal can be accomplished only if we work together.
