COMPUTER COMMUTERS The unique carpool computer program of Elliott Barkan (History) and Nikolai Khokhlov (Psychology) vs. to organize commuters into groups to reduce air POLLUTERS pollution was covered in a recent article in the San Bernardino Sun and subject of a commendatory editorial in that newspaper the following day.

A proposal by the two professors presented at a meeting of the County Board of Supervisors that the computer program, successful on the CSCSB campus, be adopted to work out carpools for county employees, prompted the two articles.

"On our campus an impressive number of pre-registrants indicated an interest in participating in carpools for the Spring Quarter," stated Dr. Barkan, who reported the following results on the questionnaire contained in the pre-registration packets:

Out of 1,800 questionnaires returned:
46.1 % have family demands or work making participation impossible
25.28% are in carpools or have signed up
5.8 % walk, use bikes or motorcycles
16.66% have miscellaneous reasons

Sergio D. Elizondo (Spanish) has accepted a position as dean of the College of Ethnic Studies, a new cluster college of Western Washington State College in Bellingham. He also will be professor of Spanish and Chicano Studies. The new post begins July 1.
