Evans’ letter stirs controversy

The following is a letter from Dr. Anthony Evans, President of CSUSB, addressed to the Chancellor of the CSU system. This letter has created some disturbances among minority students, who feel that Evans has, at least, written them off, if not having come to the situation with good intentions in the first place.

The Coyote Chronicle learned of the letter through a copy of it which has been distributed here on campus, and which had been published in The Black Voice News, a newsletter circulated locally. That publication interviewed Dr. Evans and he insists the letter shows only his concern, not biases. Evans denies any to speak to the Chronicle. We print the letter as directly transmitted from a copy obtained through the President’s office, and ask our readers to make their own judgements concerning its content. We welcome any responses.

June 30, 1986

Dear Chancellor Reynolds:

As requested, I have transmitted under separate cover the proposed new Educational Equity Plan for our campus. I will not discuss the details of that plan in this communication other than to say that it continues the ongoing process on our campus to improve significantly our service to underrepresented students. To be sure, it reflects a university-wide priority about which we feel very deeply.

I wish to share with you, as a matter of record, my concerns about the difficulty of the task before us. While the opportunities for service to underrepresented minorities are enormous, we must not minimize the practical difficulties in this area. My own appreciation of these difficulties grows almost daily. Despite growing legislative pressures for quick improvements, I fear that short-term gains will be minimal, at best. Just to prevent further erosion may be as much as we can expect initially. The prospects for long-term improvements are somewhat better, in my judgement, only because of the new standards for The California.

Permit me to explain briefly why I feel such increasing impotence in this area. Worsening social problems affecting Blacks and Hispanics, of which you are as well informed as I, are the primary basis for my concern. I am confident about improving instruction and educational support services at CSU institutions, but I am not about changing present social conditions in any significant way. Our own campus’ early intervention efforts with underrepresented minorities, which I find impressive and encouraging, are dwarfed by the increasing social and economic problems of our region. I see no quick changes in these conditions -- in fact, they will probably grow more serious with effective antidote.

I make this point, not because it is unknown to you, but only to urge caution against our promises too much too quickly. In the past, American higher education has sometimes promised too much in social areas and also has acquiesced to ever-increasing societal expectations. While I am a reformer at heart, I keep reminding myself that the business of education is education. We educators alone just cannot reform American society, or even California.

The second reason why I doubt that we will see in the near future a major turnaround around in our educational equity efforts is that we educators can only facilitate learning and student educational advancement. I have concluded that one of the important reasons why our current educational equity programs have not achieved our expectations is that we have not succeeded in making underrepresented students more independent learners. To the contrary, I believe that we have actually nurtured student dependence. Our own experience at CSUSB is replete with examples of this particular problem. We have so much to do in retraining our staffs in this area, and even if we are successful, I am not sure just how many underrepresented students are ready, emotionally and intellectually, for a university experience. In short, there are natural impediments over which we educators have limited control.

I have commented in writing to Dr. Carter that one of the more significant omissions of the EEAC Report was our failure to address this issue. We educators must become more adept in providing motivation, instruction, and educational support services, but the primary responsibility for student persistence must reside with the student. We can influence student behavior, but we cannot control it. Our legislators must understand this.

A final reason why I am less optimistic about making any immediate gains among underrepresented minorities is the enormous proscription associated with our current educational equity programs. I cannot overemphasize the number of constraints under which we operate: separate target populations, separate program requests, separate budget allocations, separate staffing, separate reporting systems, separate tracking systems, separate student recruitment, and separate computing systems.

This long history of separateness works against efforts to achieve meaningful integration of funded programs.

You have heard all of this before, but I want to impress upon you how much worse it is in practice than what you might have been told. Only a modern day Gulliver could appreciate the number of strings that bind us in these program areas.

Moreover, far too many existing educational equity staff members are wedded to separateness and oppose, sometimes quite vehemently, programmatic integration. This is lamentable, especially when changes which the EEAC
Public Misinformation goads students

There are many contemporary intentional propagations of exaggerated facts and misinformation deceptively disguised as truth with the intended purpose of manipulating public opinion toward a desired direction. One example surfaced recently in a memo released by one of Reagan's under-education staff members in which it was ordered that the press be supplied with false information about Meanmean Klaudly with the intent of further inciting an already aroused negative public opinion (probably for the purpose of further justifying this country's bombing of Tripoli); rather than pouring gasoline on a raging fire to create a smokescreen for other activities.

Another recent instance of public misinformation was put forth in a letter published in this paper (October 1). While the intent of preserving mental health may be as honourable as Reagan's intent to protect us from terrorism, the perpetual labeling of illegal substances as necessarily harmful is a popularly endorsed untruth fabricated to support a particular perception of morality. In particular, the misleading reference to marijuana as "harmful" and "causing the birth of deformed babies" is a form of pure conjecture (as defined: the expression of an opinion without sufficient evidence for proof) in vogue among many publicity-seeking figures whose opinions vastly outnumber their facts and who would also warn us of the dangers to society in certain forms of music, books, movies, and ideas. Such a diet of facts should not be unquestioningly swallowed whole.

In March 1975, Consumer Reports magazine published a survey of marijuana studies that had been done up to that time. The most negative, fear-inducing and often ill-founded studies were sponsored and published by (and used to justify the policies of) the federal government. The Consumer Reports survey also noted a study carried out by the Research Institute for the Study of Man, commissioned by the National Institute of Mental Health. This study centered in Jamaica where the daily use of ganja (marijuana) has been encouraged for generations. This study of the effects of long term marijuana consumption found no substantial differences, in health of body or mind, between users and non-users. Three years after its completion this study was still unpublished in this country (and may still be withheld from publication, I haven't had time to check).

There is a definite distinction between useful and abusive consumption of any consciousness altering substance. The epidemic abuse of drugs is a symptom of deeper underlying disease in the American body politic. The attempt to eradicate drug abuse alone without dealing with the causes inherent in our culture is like burning out a chasuble as a means of curing typhoid. There is no way to remove the thorn from society's drive for success. Fierce competition in certain groups induces the use of substances that would enhance one's efficiency as a competitor. This is not only demonstrated by steroid use among athletes, but also amphetamine and cocaine use among college students (especially medical students) where long hours of alert attentiveness may be chemically induced in order to put one at the head of a specially sharp and ambitious little group of competitors. Continued use of such substances cannot persist for very long before physical debilitation renders the opposites of the desired effect, but habits used to attain success may be even harder to break than patterns of failure.

The use of consciousness-altering drugs is like that of fire: it can enhance creativity and awareness if used productively, or it is a means of self-destruction when abused. This metaphor occurred to me nearly twenty years ago when I first began using marijuana and LSD. Though I still enjoy and respect the expanded perceptions attained through some experiences, I would so encourage a person to use drugs with the knowledge that abuse is a matter of personal decision. I have known thousands of marijuana smokers (staff included) who have become parents of perfectly healthy children. The spreading of misinformation about drugs with the intent of reducing their access only has the opposite effect. When I first realized I'd been lied to about marijuana I felt compelled to experience and uncover further dogmatic distortions and to seek the truth behind the rest of the fog of society's indoctrination; it an ongoing, never-ending process.

Lies are what is killing this country from the inside. It's better to remain silent than to fabricate fallacies from facts.

In light of the recently collapsed summit meeting, at which neither Reagan nor Gorbachev was able to give a little in the name of world peace or humanity, we here at The Chronicle have put together a 'top ten' list of things to do in case of nuclear attack. We note cheerfully that this list was constructed during a grotesquely interrogating a group of local ground squirrels.

TOP TEN
1. Pay off all those overdue debts.
2. Wear clean underwear (and try to keep it that way).
3. Have sex (sorry ladies, no time for foreplay).
4. Stick your head in a toilet so that your face doesn't melt off.
6. Learn to belch.
7. Try LSD.
8. Burrow two feet into the dirt and pretend you're a potato.
9. Request a blindfold, hang yourself with it.
10. Be glad you're not suffering a more gruesome or ridiculous death. (Say, being ground up in the jaws of a wheat harvester).

Reagan, Gorbachev stalemate at summit

President Reagan arrived late Sunday night from a summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Reykjavik, Iceland. He arrived home with a grim face and nothing to show. The meetings concluded in a stalemate. Although at one point it seemed as though there might be some agreement on the issue of nuclear arms, it never quite came together.

The argument of whether or not to continue Star Wars was the main problem. While Reagan said that we needed Star Wars to protect the U.S., his opponents said that they would not continue Star Wars and that the money should be spent elsewhere.

operation Gold-coast headlines merger try

"Operation Gold-coast is underway. That is what First Interstate, the ninth-largest banking company in the U.S., is calling their strategy, for merging with Bank of America. A four-page letter sent by Pacific First Interstate to Gorbachev and America's board was a merger offer worth about 2.8 billion dollars. The letter stated that if the merger took place, the current board of Bank of America would be dissolved and a new board would be formed.

Presidents to meet with students

University President Anthony Evans and Associated Students President, Penni Overstreet, will meet on Thursday, October 16 with as many students as possible to discuss current campus issues.

Drop deadline set: Critical date is October 15th

by Vida Mahmood
Chronicle Staff Writer

Who ever thought that changing a course was an easy job? I mean if you are new at Cal State and are a transfer student, you would probably not have a clue of how to go about adding or dropping a course, and those who have had the experience of adding or dropping would say that it is a long and tiresome task. In order for those who wish to have a schedule change, to go through the same task, here are some helpful tips on adding or dropping classes.

Of course, there are exceptions in any case.

Students who have a doctor's excuse or any other official reason for not being able to drop by the 15th, are allowed to drop after the deadline. The program change forms are available at Admissions and Records, and for students who selected either classes are available at the Office of the Dean of Students. Students should keep in mind the deadline for dropping because it is essential to have any changes made as soon as possible.

Unfortunately, the time for adding courses has already passed, but there is an alternative. Students who have the consent of the instructor and the approval of the dean can add new courses to their schedules.

If you are considering any kind of schedule change, do so immediately. Time is running out!

Earthquake leaves 970 dead in El Salvador

El Salvador\39; earthquake on Friday the 10th has left 970 people dead as of Monday night. The death toll is still expected to climb. Over 10,000 people have been injured and two hundred thousand are homeless.

Relief efforts started almost immediately with medical supplies being shipped along with doctors and nurses. Collection plates are being passed around in many churches here to help. Monday morning a big aftershock occurred.

Young Democrats to meet

The "CSUSB Young Democrats Club" will hold its first meeting October 17, from 1pm in the Senate Chambers, in the Student Union. It\39;s advisor is Professor of Political Science, Carol F. Goss. The T.D.D. function is to increase student awareness and participation in the political process, thus, all students, regardless of political affiliation, are encouraged to join.

Preparations are now being made, with cooperation from the San Bernardino Democratic Party Headquarters, at allowing club members to help man the H.Q. on Election Day, November 4. Car pooling for those needing transportation will be discussed at the October 17 meeting.

Officers for the 1986-87 school year will be chosen at the next meeting, time and place to be announced later. For more information, contact Patrick Lewis, at (714) 888-5846.

Gay and Lesbian Union to meet

The next meeting of the Gay and Lesbian Union will be held on Wednesday, October 22, from noon - 1:00 p.m. in Student Services 171. We will discuss program plans for the fall quarter. Students, faculty and staff are encouraged to attend. For more information, contact Faculty Advisor Dr. Craig Henderson, Dean of Student Affairs Office, 887-7624.

MECHA plans for new year

The M.E.C.H.A. organization has set each meeting, Tuesday and Thursday, 3 pm until 4 pm in the Student Union. The club is meeting to plan up-coming events for the 86-87 school term. We invite all interested students to join the organization that was voted "CLUB OF THE YEAR last year and to contribute your input and talents in making it another outstanding school year.

Debate: See-saw strikes elusive balance

by T.C. Hannan
Chronicle Staff Writer

G. Gordon Liddy debated Dr. Hatem Hussaini on Monday Oct. 6th before a standing room only crowd of over 600 students and community members. The debate, which was mediated by Dr. Bulgarinelli in the Commons, was centered on the topic of terrorism—how to define it and how to end it. The event was sponsored by the A.S. Special Events Committee and co-sponsored by the CSU Intellectual Life Committee.

Dr. Hussaini opened the debate by providing an historical perspective on the nature of terrorism, citing incidents from as far back as Roman persecution of the Jews to as recent as the massacre at My Lai. He defined terrorism as being, essentially, the killing of innocent civilians, adding that there is also psychological terrorism, as in cases where governments stifle opposition with the threat of torture and jail.

"I'm sorry to say that throughout history every nation…has committed acts of terrorism," he said. Hussaini's position is that there is no justification for killing innocent civilians, that it is an act which originates in desperation and culminates in the loss of respect for human life. The solution, he contends, is to go out and bomb known terrorist bases—this, in itself, is an act of terrorism, he said, and it can only lead to a cycle of vengeance and bloodshed where innocent people pay the price.

Dr. Hussaini outlined what he suggests is the best way to deal with terrorists: An increase of security at airports world-wide, a consistent policy which each nation of adhere to—a policy which deals with the roots of terrorism (which Hussaini insists is a psychological problem); a strengthening of international law; a universally accepted educational program which would foster the respect for human life, a process by which known terrorists can be brought to trial and, through due process, punished in accordance with the crime they have committed.

"Search them out… and kill them." Dr. Hussaini's primary assertion was that any act which results in the death of innocent civilians is an act of terrorism—be it an act of war, political insurrection, or even personal vengeance as when the man opened fire in the McDonald's in San Diego county a few years ago.

G. Gordon Liddy disputed that assertion. He said that an act of terrorism occurs when (and only when) there is a "deliberate targeting of civilians in order to advance a political cause, without terror. Yes, indeed, innocent persons die in war," but they are not the targets, Liddy said. He went on to suggest that the causes of terror are irrelevant and should not be taken into consideration when we are deciding how to combat terrorist activities.

"America is founded on respect for life." "Terrorism is engaged in because it has proven to be effective," the minute we take into account what they want, the minute we sit down and start wringing our hands and worrying about what causes—and so on and so forth—they are being effective," Liddy declared.

Much less sophisticated than the Liddy/Hussaini on terrorism was the source of much discussion on our campus. But, perhaps the most controversial issue concerning that debate had little to do with that topic of terrorism. It concerned the question whether or not a man of Liddy's character should have been sponsored by university funds to speak on our campus.

Dr. Michael Clark, from the school of Public Administration, circulated a petition which stated: "Liddy is a self-confessed murderer. He is also a convicted felon. Certainly he exhibits values and behavior that undermine the spirit of the university's mission. Liddy's fame is based only on his conviction in the Watergate affair and on his involvement in plots to subvert liberty and freedom of expression. (We) should cherish freedom of expression…Let Liddy come, let him speak. But need we contribute our precious resources.

The petition goes on to say that paying Liddy to speak "…we have witnessed a cherished right—freedom of expression—be wielded against itself," and that we have financed that assault. It concludes, "we demand that the Special Events Committee seriously re-evaluate the philosophy that could lead to such an inidious choice of speakers as Liddy.

Dayle Stangel, Associate Dean who heads Student Life, the main financial backer of the debate, says that our university is a stator's supporter of the Freedom of Speech clause in the U.S. Constitution. Most important to him, he says, is that the debate was co-sponsored by the A.S. Special Events Committee—a committee formed of students, staff and faculty.

"We trust the Special Events Committee to weigh the factors addressed in this petition. The judgment is upheld by the administration," he said.

Dr. Stangel also stated that "all speakers are not universally popular," George Plimpton, Wally George and Angela Davis—former speakers on campus—had each stirred negative reactions on campus, he noted.

What we strive for is a balance—to provide a full spectrum of speakers for the university community," he explained.

Another professor on campus supported Clark's view. Dr. Hellenbrand, from the English Department, put it this way: "The issue of what constitutes terrorism is enormously complicated politically and morally. And I have a difficult time imagining how Liddy's experiences or reflections can have any value, or can contribute to our collective understanding of this terrorism.

The issue appears to center upon whether Liddy's presence on our campus was designed to educate us, or to entertain us, or to entertain us, Hellenbrand said.

He added, "We must ask ourselves whether in this instance we are paying to learn something, or paying to help a 'pop-iron' remain a pop-iron sensationalistic value," Clark offered.

Soccer squad pushing to consistent goal

From a bye Monday to a "Super" Saturday, the Cal State Coyotes saw it all the week of the 4th. CSUSB saw a 4-0 loss to a dominant CSI, Dominguez Hills team, a tough 2-0 win over a stubborn Azusa Pacific squad, and a 7-0 blowout of the Poets from Whittier College.

The Coyotes Coach, Carlos Juarez, did not take the week's sole matchup lightly. "Point Loma is tough, they were a very difficult team for us last year. We will have to earn a victory over them," said Juarez.

In anticipation of next week's acid test, the Coyotes will have most of this week to work on the team's offense.

Juarez did not take the week's loss to Pomona-Pitzer lightly. Toint Loma is tough, they were a very strong team, said Juarez. Even though the CSUSB squad scored a season-high 7 goals in the shut out victory at Whittier College.

Scoring goals for Cal State were: Jerry O'Hara (junior, Fontana, Lake Shore HS, NV) and Trevor Coleman (freshman, San Bernardino, San Gorgonio HS) also with two goals, freshmen Sean Karns (San Bernardino/SBHSS), Hector Venegas (Coachella/Coachella HS), and sophomore Mark Yarayewsky (Taumina WA/Spanaway Lake), and Kiko Montes (Coachella/Coachella HS) each scored one goal for the Coyote squad. The win included the second straight shutout for CSUSB goalie Randy Green (Chico/Chico St).

Coach Juarez said, "Jerry O'Hara had been in a dry spell and it's good to see him playing strongly again." In looking ahead, "The team will have to push itself now to remain consistent," said the Coyote Coach.

Great attitude paces Coyote cross-country teams

The CSUSB Women's Cross Country team is undefeated and the Men's team took great strides towards finding a solid spot.

The CSUSB Women were led by sophomore Rebecca Hodde (Riverside/Notre Dame HS) over the three mile course in a time of 18:45. Hodde captures a second place finish against Azusa Pacific University and lost but also picked up some outstanding experience," said CSUSB's Coach, Tom Burleson, in describing the remaining half of Saturday's meet. The CSUSB Men scored 40 points to Azusa Pacific University's 17, and CSUSB scored 18 versus Mount St. Mary's 8. The lower score in Cross Country wins giving the CSUSB Men a current record of 1-1 in head-to-head competition.

Brad Phillips paced the Coyote runners with a lifetime best time of 28:36 over a five mile course. Just seven seconds after Phillips was Carlos Gallegos, and only 21 seconds behind was CSUSB's strongest runner (slowed by a leg injury), freshman Robert Horvath.

Coach Burleson says his teams have the right attitude and the Men's team is working hard to overcome their lack of experience. This weekend will test both for the Coyotes as they face NCAA Division II schools, Southern Utah State and Chapman College.

Lady Spikers jump to Top 5 in region

CSUSB's Volleyball team is currently 11-3 and despite Saturday, the 4th's, loss to Biola University, the Lady Coyotes should be ranked among the top five teams regionally in the week's ratings.

Ruderman felt the week's loss was a positive experience for CSUSB and that playing a tall, powerful team like Biola University enables the smaller Lady Coyotes to develop and progress within their style of play. CSUSB played the Biola to four games with the final scores: 10-15, 15-10, 9-15, 8-15.

"The team didn't play consistently against a much taller Biola team that hit the ball much better than we did," said CSUSB coach Naomi Ruderman. Earlier in the week the Cal State team was a model of consistency. The Lady Coyotes faced Pomona-Pitzer and the University of Redlands for the third time this season and defeating both teams for the third time. CSUSB vs. Pomona-Pitzer: 16-14, 15-11, 15-6 and CSUSB vs. The University of Redlands: 15-2, 15-4, 15-5.
Volleyballers, ranked fourth, defeat Masters

By Matt Pollack, Chronicle Staff Writer

Although it took them a full game to get warmed up, the lady Coyote volleyball team came back to defeat Master's College in four games last Tuesday night, 8-15, 15-9, 15-3, 15-4.

Head coach Naomi Ruderman stated that her team began the match really slow and tentative. "We were not playing our game. In the second game, we started to put things together—playing more aggressive; playing our rhythm—and it showed," she added. Ruderman also stated that once the Coyotes built up speed, the Master's team was unable to keep up. It forced them to make errors.

Slow is exactly how the volleyball match started for the Lady Coyotes. The Mustangs from Master's blew out to a 3-0 lead before CSUSB even got on the board. The Mustangs built that lead to 11-3 when Bridgett Austin put some life into her team with a spike, making the score 11-5. Master's team went on to win the game, though, 15-8.

The pendulum quickly swung in the Coyotes direction as the second game began. CSUSB rushed out to an 8-1 lead before the visitors responded. After Austin's spike into the Mustang defense. The Coyotes, who are now 12-3, had 12 kills and seventeen McDonald had four good digs for the Coyotes, who are now 12-3.

Jerry O'Hara does not like to take all the credit for his success on the soccer field. Even though he leads the team in goals with 7, he credits his team members for each goal.

For every goal that I score, there is a good assist," said O'Hara recently. O'Hara, a 6-foot forward, is in his second year on the CSUSB soccer team. The team, only in its third year at CSUSB, has improved over last year's team.

"We are playing better this year," O'Hara said. "We know each other better, and we are in a good position to make the playoffs."

The team, at mid-season, has already completed its toughest part of the season. According to O'Hara, the future looks positive. O'Hara gives much of the credit for the team's success to the team's goalkeeper, Randy Green, in his first year at CSUSB. Green has shared the starting position in four out of the five win teams.

Another factor in the team's success is right halfback Trevor Coleman. O'Hara calls Coleman a hunter, especially since he plays both offense and defense. "He's tough for the halfbacks. They are the unsung heroes of the game," O'Hara said. Coleman's hunting has paid off, he leads the team in assists.

The team's inspiration comes from team captain, Mark Texter. Texter is playing his third season on the team. According to O'Hara he is the seasoned veteran. "He is the real hunter, especially for a forward," added O'Hara. O'Hara considers himself a team player, though he still feels bad when he does not do his job.

O'Hara's success as a soccer player goes back to when he was a little kid. "When I was just a little kid, about 6-years-old, I thought I would like to try soccer. I have loved the game ever since," he said with a sly smile.

O'Hara has played soccer every year since those eye-opening days. He began his career playing organized ball with the AYSO federation in Orange County. He then moved with his family to New York and continued to play soccer. O'Hara played his freshman year at the University of Fredonia, Fredonia NY.

After that first year, O'Hara returned to California with his family. He notes one difference between the two states and their relationship to the game of soccer. "In New York soccer is a big sport on campus and there is a lot of patriotism of the games. But in California soccer is taking a back seat to some other popular campus sports."

During this time he practices drills in game-situations and conditioning. All the practice has paid off for O'Hara. In the words of his coach Carlos Juarez, "We wouldn't be the same team without him."

O'Hara had good things to say about his coach, too. "He has done some incredible things considering how young the team is. In three years he has built the team and has made it into a playoff contender."

Despite the fact that soccer has a wide following in other parts of the world, it seems to be catching on slowly in the United States. O'Hara attributes this fact to too many people who do not find it as exciting to watch as football. O'Hara explained this to be reflective of a certain amount of ignorance of the sport.

Intramural offerings

By Sharna Wilson

The intramural program at Cal State continues to provide fun and recreation for students, faculty, and staff. The main objectives of the program are to promote social and physical recreation while providing relaxation from studies and other commitments. Intramurals cover a wide range of recreation from traditional team sports such as football, volleyball, and basketball, to unique one day events such as 5K runs and canoe races.

Under the supervision of Joe Long, the Recreational Sports Director, many events have been planned that are sensitive to the wants of students. Long explains that intramurals are "participation oriented" and encourages students to actively support the program. Although the more significant rewards are not material, intramural T-shirts may be awarded by winning or simply participating in an event. For example, Coyote T-shirts are awarded to those who participate at least thirty times in ten different events during the year, as well as to all champions. This year's canoe race was held Oct. 3 at Glen Helen. First place was awarded to Michelle M. Williams and Rick Broido. Free hats and mineral water were provided for all participants and mugs were awarded to the top four teams.

Upcoming events are the Pentathlon on Oct. 25, a 5K Turkey Trot on Nov. 19, and Super Sports Saturday starting Nov. 8.

Billy Joel's new album, The Bridge, is a return to the piano-man sound that made him famous.

The Bridge is the long-awaited follow-up to Joel's An Innocent Man album. Fans were left wondering about the direction Joel's music would take with the release of the 1984 style music of An Innocent Man. While the record was a tremendous success, it left fans wondering if the new sound was a permanent change. The release of Joel's greatest hits album earlier this year made for An Innocent Man.

But the mania for Joel's new album has been as if the feelings Joel expressed in songs like 'Pressure,' 'Copacabana' (mainly) are bursting away, the best song on the album, Jod's showing traces of his old brilliance. The nine-song album contains tunes that are bursting with the same energy that inspired hits like 'Piano Man,' 'The Ballad of Billy the Kid,' Miami Vice,' and 'Honesty.' The album also attains to the maturity shown in Joel's The Nylon Curtain album of 1982. It is as if the feelings Joel expressed in songs like 'Pressure,' 'Copacabana,' 'For the Future' have been reaffirmed with the passage of four years.

'A Matter of Trust,' 'A New Victory,' 'A Matter of Trust,' 'For the Future' are solid angles for a new Joel era. 'Still', with the same raergy that inspired the drug-abuse commentary of 'An Innocent Man,' 'An Innocent Man,' 'Crazy,' and 'Dreams,' is a definite swing back toward the piano man sound that made him famous.

Eventually though, Nola's ways catch up to her and she finds that very few men want to be treated like sex objects. (Hey grow up, okay?) Indeed when the situation inevitably blows up in her face, mostly through her own doing, there may be more than a few "bachelors afraid of commitment" out there who see themselves magnified for what they really are (incredibly lucky to get away with it, for awhile).

She's gotta have it is surprisingly funny

Will she settle down and raise a herd of nymphomaniacs? Will she move in with Warren Beatty and Don Johnson? Some people never change and some don't change 'til they're ready. The answers to these questions are well worth the price of admission. The film is almost exclusively in black and white and is rated R.

Student Counseling available

Feeling depressed? Having difficulty in a relationship? Worried about work?
Free help is available through the Community Counseling Center at California State University, San Bernardino. Staffed by quality counselors with diverse backgrounds, the center provides counseling services for emotional problems caused by divorce, death in the family, loss of a job, change of careers, lack of motivation, relationship problems. Counseling also is available for sexual problems, child rearing, premartial information and the elderly. The center is operated during the university's academic year, October through June.

"This is an ideal public service because few people can afford private counseling," remarked Dr. Edward Teyber, associate professor of psychology and director of the center. "In an era when the Reagan administration is reducing funding for social services, there are few government-supported mental health resources left."

Free counseling is offered primarily for individuals and couples, rather than children and families, Teyber stated. "Anything that is troublesome, conflicting, or problematic is appropriate for someone to seek counseling. Many clients who use the services are normally able to cope with life's ups and downs but may suddenly face a crisis which has disrupted their lives."

The counseling is conducted by graduate-level psychology students ranging in age from 22 to 45, who work under the supervision of clinical psychologists on the Cal State, San Bernardino faculty. Each counselor undergoes a rigorous acceptance procedure and is evaluated on the basis of grades, background and experience, letters of recommendation and interview performances as well as several other factors.

Potential clients may call a 24-hour message phone, (714) 887-7272, to request a call back. Dr. Teyber will return all calls and schedule an initial interview to answer further questions and introduce clients to the clinic. He then will appoint a counselor whom he feels will best meet the needs of the client.

Although the Community Counseling Center does not provide services for persons who are suicidal, psychotic, alcoholic, addicted to drugs, or who may need medical help, the director will refer the client to someone who may be of assistance.

Clients meet with counselors for 50-minute sessions once a week. The length of the counseling is not limited; clients may continue through June when the center closes for the summer. Many return in September to continue with the same counselor or be reappointed to a new one, Teyber said. All counseling sessions are kept strictly confidential.

New chair promotes "philosophy of growth"

by T.C. Haan
Chronicle Staff Writer

More students. More faculty. More buildings. These are but the obvious signs of expansion on our campus— the physical result of what can aptly be termed a Philosophy of Growth. This philosophy is at the heart of a well coordinated effort to maintain a high quality of education here at CSUSB, while at the same time increasing campus visibility throughout the community, the state, and eventually, the nation. With this in mind, we are pleased to welcome to our campus a man who takes these goals seriously—the new Department Chair of the schools of Accounting and Finance, Dr. Mohamed Vaziri.

Dr. Vaziri comes to Cal State with an array of impressive credentials and experiences.

He received his M.S. in Engineering from the University of Oklahoma, where he also earned his Doctorate in International Finance. He went on to do Post Graduate work in Investment Analysis at George Washington University. His experience in financial management ranges from his work as an accountant for such firms as Lylands Motors, England, and Town and Country, Inc., in Oklahoma, to his work as a financial analyst for Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. Dr. Vaziri has also done pioneer work on quality control for the Washington Metro Transit Authority, the results of which were published nationwide. In addition, Dr. Vaziri has worked for the Department of Energy as well as the Small Business Administration.

Presently, Dr. Vaziri is merging these experiences with his University's expansionist philosophy. He has outlined a three-part plan which he hopes will insure a profitable future, not only for the school of financing and accounting, but, ideally, for the whole University. While he emphasizes that his primary goal is "to provide the highest quality of education through a flexible curriculum and a dedicated faculty," Dr. Vaziri also says that he intends to work consistently at making his department highly visible in the local business community. This visibility will be established through the involvement of local businesses in the curriculum of the Finance and Accounting Department. Dr. Vaziri refers to this as the "external" phase of his plan. It involves creating an Industry Review Board comprised of local CPA firms and financial institutions which would review curriculum, provide internships and job opportunities, as well as providing funding for the establishment of new institutions here on campus. Another item on this "external" agenda will be to visit with the local high schools and junior colleges in order to create an enrollment base, as well as to insure that incoming students are prepared for the University experience.

On his "internal" agenda, Dr. Vaziri hopes to establish a "master departmental syllabus" which will offer more core classes per quarter in order to insure a more consistent quality of education. He notes that "based upon the percentage of people passing the CPA exam, CSUSB currently ranks number one in the state and number eleven in the nation." In order to maintain those high ratings, Dr. Vaziri wishes to add more flexibility to the curriculum, and an Accounting Lab has already been established where students can work for fifty hours per quarter (in addition to class instruction) on a computer, to enhance their general problem solving skills. Another item on the "internal" agenda is to change the composition of the faculty by hiring new PhD's and by converting lecture positions to tenure track positions. This is to help integrate the professors into the new curricular changes. Dr. Vaziri also hopes to establish, this academic year, a center to promote international business—an idea, he says, which was suggested by Dean Porter. The idea is to get local businesspersons to train international business skills in matching products with an international market through appropriate lines of information and consulting.

Students wishing to receive a Certificate in Financial Planning may not have very long to wait. Dr. Vaziri is currently writing a proposal to solicit funds for the establishment of an insurance and banking center. This will provide students with a better working knowledge of financial services, and pending a certificate license which Gov. Deukmejian may sign any day now, will provide a Certificate in Financial Planning. Most important is that the changes in curriculum will attempt to improve the quality of education on a national level. Students in Finance and Accounting will be prepared to participate in national proficiency examinations such as the Certified Financial Planner exam and the Chartered Financial Consultant exam.

Dr. Vaziri is also planning to institute interdisciplinary programs which will help students in all schools market their skills effectively upon graduation. "Students who have even the smallest interest in any of the changes which Dr. Vaziri outlined here should go see him in A.D. 160. He is especially interested in fostering student involvement in the department, and would also like to help undecided majors find a field where they can develop to their full potential.
The Bureau of the Census has predicted that Hispanics will constitute the largest minority group in the United States by the end of the 1980s. The enormous increase in the Hispanic sector of North American society will bring about a proportionate increase in consumers of all kinds of goods and services. However, only those trained in the Hispanic language and culture will be able to successfully communicate within the vast economic marketplace of the Hispanic North American.

According to Dr. Rafael E. Correa, professor in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, Cal State University is offering a certificate in Spanish for Public Services. "In this program we will offer practical application of the language. We seem to be having people training more and more as interpreters and translators, especially for the court system."

The program includes upper division Spanish courses, as well as courses being offered through extended education. Advertisement of this certificate program has been sent to high schools and junior colleges in this area, as well as to the Chamber of Commerce for distribution.

Next quarter, Dr. Tatiana Galvan, a Fulbright scholar, will be teaching one of the required courses, Spanish 316: Spanish in Communication Media. Galvan is from the Universidad National Autonoma De Mexico (UNAM). Correa said, "this is a unique opportunity for students to be exposed to someone who is a bilingual expert in communications."

In order to qualify for the certificate, a student must be enrolled at CSUSB, as well as taking the required courses in sequence. After the requirements have been met, the student is then eligible to apply for the certificate.

For the student wishing to practice the Spanish language, Correa suggests that, "students go to the Commons between 12 p.m. and 1 p.m. on Wednesdays and make use of the Spanish table." The Spanish table is for students, staff, and faculty who wish to practice their Spanish language, make friends, talk to professors, and practice, practice, practice.

Area Satanism on the Rise? Rehabilitation at School of Hope

by Jim Long

The Devil has gained more adherents in the Inland Empire. At least that's what police officials and religious leaders in the Fontana area would have us believe. But according to a recent news story, there is not only evidence of Devil worship in the area -- Satanism -- but more of it has appeared in the Spring of 1986. And that has them worried.

One of the most recent people who say that Fontana area residents are over-reacting to various incidents of alleged Satanistic practices. They say the worry is misdirected and are being led astray by bias.

Within the last few years, there has been a heavy media attention to Satanism in the Inland Empire. The Satanists are often called the Satanic Temple, or the Satanic Church. The focus of the media attention was due to the belief that there was a rise in Satanism in the area.

But being led astray by bias.

In the spring of 1986, the Inland Empire law enforcement officials began to receive reports of alleged Satanic practices. Some of these reports included incidents of sexual practices such as oral sex, drugs, and rock and roll. Others included incidents of alleged increases in heavy metal music, and incidents of alleged Satanic rituals such as sexual perversion, drug abuse, and violence.

But being led astray by bias.

According to the Inland Empire law enforcement officials, there is not only evidence of Satanism in the Inland Empire, but there is also evidence of alleged increases in heavy metal music and alleged increases in sexual perversion.

And that has them worried.

The philosophy of Satanism is secrecy, said Jim Pemsey, an Inland Empire law enforcement official who is a student of widely labeled Satanist Albert Crowley. Pemsey does not claim he is a Satanist. He does say, though, that a true Satanist does not reveal himself or herself.

According to Frank Plummer, School of Hope Program Director, and retired citizens who attend the San Bernardino Beacon, a work activity program (WAP) and a Day Training Activity Program (DTAC). It is run by the Inland Empire, leaves few clues.

But being led astray by bias.

Despite what some may regard as a lack of evidence, these officials argue, or simply by an emotional reaction to things that seem Satanic.

Inland Empire law enforcement officials still think the public should know Satanism may exist in the area.

This only complicates what becomes a legal, moral and emotional issue in the Inland Empire.

The philosophy of Satanism is secrecy, said Jim Pemsey, an Inland Empire law enforcement official who is a student of widely labeled Satanist Albert Crowley. Pemsey does not claim he is a Satanist. He does say, though, that a true Satanist does not reveal himself or herself.

WAP clients are those deemed most functional. Under this program, retired citizens are trained in areas such as lawn maintenance, janitorial training, work training centers (includes recycling program), and woodshop. Also included are basic studies in language stimulation, independent living skills and assertiveness training.

A behavior modification program plays an important role in reducing inappropriate behavior.

The Day Training Activity Center is designed for severely retarded citizens who require close supervision and additional training.

While vocational training is taught, emphasis is placed on communication, cognitive development, self-help skills and physical adaptation. These basic skills are vital to helping retarded citizens become functional and independent in society, said Plummer.

For more information on individual Critical Skills Models (ICSMs), a relatively new program, is being implemented at the School of Hope. The emphasis is greater vocational training for placement in the business world.

While many school attempts to place severely retarded citizens, the School of Hope places more functional clients first to insure a good success rate. In three months, 10 clients have been placed in the business community.

Clients must be referred to the School of Hope through the Inland County Regional Center. The retarded clients come from board and care facilities, private homes, and convalescent hospitals. The clients at the School of Hope range in age from 18-72 years. Prior to entrance into the School of Hope, clients may have attended special schools, mainstream schools or other institutions of learning. While academic skills are encouraged, it is not a requirement for admittance.

The School of Hope's School of Hope are obtained through a number of channels.

While the Department of Rehabilitation provides the bulk of the money, the Inland County Regional Center also provides funds. At the School of Hope, clients may have attended special schools, mainstream schools or other institutions of learning. While academic skills are encouraged, it is not a requirement for admittance.

Sexual Assault: Exploring the Myths

by Sunnie Bell
Health Center Intern

The timing of Sexual Assault Awareness Week, October 13-17, fits well with the start of college. As never before, young women and men will face threats of force - with which everyone's personal world, explored both formally and in those "classrooms" of previous learning will be rife with values. The confusion may have consequences that can be lasting. Your life be your own. Be temporary, but its consequences can be lasting.

There is nothing unfeminine about controlling one's own sex, it may lead to behaviors that call for demonstrations of sexual power. It's generally easier to avoid sexually aggressive situations than it is to get out of them once they've begun. But at any point, remember that control is your own. Men and women of any age must make their own decisions on a day-to-day basis. If you choose to become sexually active, do consult professionals in the Student Health Center. No stigma is attached to seeking advice about birth control and physical and emotional needs. But the loss of self-esteem due to submitting unwillingly to others' direction is a certain problem.

If you've already made mistakes, don't blame yourself. You can only deal with what you have to work with at the time; today is different from yesterday. You now know more. And don't forget that help is available for you through the Student Health Center and the Student Counseling Center.

The complex of physical, sociological, and psychological influences that creates your sexuality is good, but in all aspects of your sex life, keep the choices your own!

Next week, we'll discuss Alcoholism. Alcohol abuse along with sexual harassment and unwanted submission have some things in common - one of which is that they affect self-esteem. Ponder this: Do behaviors that result from diminished inhibitions (e.g., alcohol ingestion) represent the "real" you? Or is the "real" you a composite of many things including those inhibitions? Think about it.

There's a small correction to make from last week's Health Corner. The Student Health Center hours are Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Fridays and Quarter Breaks from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Do come in and use this service. It's here for you! Call 887-7641 or stop in.

If you have article suggestions, questions, or any communication at all in regard to the Health Corner, please address mail to: Sunnie Bell, Student Health Center. Thanks.

I heard a Preacher Say
by J Russell Horton

I heard a preacher of the gospel say "Noah's days weren't like ours." He's right, of course, for no discerning a clergyman. A-bomb shells Noah never knew, neither saw a volume of Allen Ginsberg, both enough to wrench your guts with flesh-searing stench. Noah never heard the whimper of 1.4 million-age babies jerked like so many slimy stocked fish from a pay-per-pound derby pond, two pounds on the hook. Old Noah never inhaled the deep brown cancer mist of faggot nicotine; the corrupted gasoline vapors that erupt the eyes on a hot city day; never toke on the mind numbing agent orange, mustard gas, or napalm, the gold, frankincense, and myrrh offered by the wise doctors who disciple the religion of Universal Hate: omnipotence-haters. And what of Noah and atheists? Was he neighbor to a drown? Did the better of his sister's brothers, sons and daughters of men, uninstall God in unhallowed halls, where dark robes are donned to celebrate the cloning of lectura thumping mythology exorcists. I guess Noah never watched satellite pornography, except in his 25 inch diagonal black and white window frame. No, Noah's days weren't like our own. I guess I should have, but I never thought of it quite that way. Yes. That preacher must be right. Noah's days weren't quite like ours. Jesus Christ come quickly, I don't have the minister's discernment.

Tour of art studios
planned for public

The public is invited to join the Friends of the Gallery at Cal State for a tour of art studios in Venice and Los Angeles Oct. 18. Membership in the community, according to Dr. Julius Kaplan, Cal State professor of art, is open to all. Art aficionados will depart Cal State at 8:45 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 18 to tour two studios in Venice and one in Los Angeles with lunch in between.

Persons are requested to express their interest in attending by Thursday, Oct. 16, by calling the Cal State, San Bernardino Art Department at (714) 887-7459.

The first stop will be the ceramics and painting studio of Curtis and Cynthia Ripley. Under the pseudonym of Lena Garcia, Cynthia Ripley’s ceramics have appeared in Gourmet and Los Angeles Times Magazine, as well as such noteworthy art galleries as Henry Bendel in New York, Nancy Epstein Gallery in Beverly Hills and The Mezz in Santa Monica.

Curtis Ripley recently displayed his ceramics and the Garth Clark and Saxon-Lee galleries, respectively, in Los Angeles.

Following lunch on the boardwalk in Venice, the tour group will visit the studio of realist painter Sandra Mendelsohn Rubin. Having exhibited in London and Paris, she is preparing for a one-woman show in New York. She has been the recipient of the New Talent Award from the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

The final destination of the tour will be the Los Angeles studio of Barrie and John Mortishaw, a watercolorist and sculptor, respectively. Their work is displayed in the Koplin Gallery in Los Angeles.

More than 300 high school students from five states are expected to bone their public speaking skills Oct. 18-19 during the Third Annual Coyote Invitational Speech and Debate Tournament at Cal State, San Bernardino.

Applications, which will be accepted until 5 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 15, reflect increased interest in such high schools as well as notable Southern California schools, including Claremont, San Bernardino, Alta Loma and as far south as San Diego.

This exhibition will be open from Oct. 2 to Oct. 30. Hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Nava is going to arrange even evening hours; if there are any students interested in helping out, contact the art department. Nava was so encouraged by the reception that Clark received that he will try to have more guest speakers to cover other areas in art.

Art Gallery Exhibit

The Graphic Design Alumni Art Exhibition is now on display in Gallery II in the Art Department, located in the Visual Arts building. The show will run until Oct. 31. The hours are Monday through Friday, 8 a.m.-10 p.m.

The artists represented in the show were CSUSB art majors who graduated with their art concentration in graphic design.

The artists are Jeff Adair, Terri Adams, David Everett, Grace Fermier, Paul Gonzales, Lisa Lopez, Jeff Rey, Thomas Rusvolo and Rick Schneblin.

Jeff Adair (1983), is now a graphic designer for the CSUSB Office of Extended Education and a free-lance artist. He produces brochures, posters, logo designs and other promotional materials.

Thomas Rusvolo (1981), is a graphic designer for his own graphic design firm, Romas Design, located here in San Bernardino. Tom produces illustrations, publications, advertising designs, brochures, direct mail pieces, logo designs and promotional concepts.

Grace Fermier (1984), is Arc Director at Color Image Systems, Inc. in Riverside. She is responsible for every aspect of this company's graphic designing, including advertising design and concept, and art direction in photography and design. She directs a staff of graphic designers, illustrators, art brush artists, copywriters, photographers, and sales representatives.

The tournament, expected to occupy most of the Cal State, San Bernardino classrooms over the two-day contest, offers competition in dramatic and humorous interpretation, original oratory, extemporaneous impromptu and expository speaking.

Team debate contestants will tackle the proposition: "Resolved: That the federal government should implement a comprehensive, long-term agricultural policy in the U.S." Competitors will debate the Lincoln-Douglas style debate will speak to: "Resolved: The juvenile justice system does not meet the needs of contemporary American society."

QUESTION #2.

HOW CAN THE BUDGET-CONSCIOUS COLLEGE STUDENT SAVE MONEY?

a) Save over 50% off AT&T's weekday rates on out-of-state calls during nights and weekends.

b) Don't buy textbooks when "Monarch Notes" will do just fine.

c) Save 40% off AT&T's weekday rate on out-of-state calls during evenings.

d) Count on AT&T for exceptional value and high quality service.

e) Hang around with the richest kids in school; let them pick up the tab whenever possible.

If you're like most college students in the western hemisphere, you try to make your money go a long way. That's why you should know that AT&T Long Distance Service is the right choice for you. AT&T offers so many terrific values. For example, you can save over 50% off AT&T's day rate on calls during weekends until 5 pm Sunday, and from 11 pm to 8 am, Sunday through Friday. Call between 5 pm and 11 pm, Sunday through Friday, and you'll save 40% off our day rate.

Ever dial a wrong number? AT&T gives you immediate credit if you do. And of course, you can count on AT&T for clear long distance connections any place you call.

To find out more about how AT&T can help save you money, give us a call. With a little luck, you won't have to hang around with the rich kids.
