Baldino and Duncan face run-off

By Jim Austin

All the unopposed candidates were in a race to fill the remaining seats on the Associated Student Body (ASB) at Chico State while the election process continued.

Elected to other Freshman Class offices were Julie Roas for secretary, Claire Covington as vice president and April Uleri and Manusa as Freshman Class Senators.

In the General Assembly election, Jeff Baker won as judicial representative and Doug Cole, J. Galien, Jane Heister and Mike Messer won as senators at large.

New Vet law signed

The Veterans Education and Employment Assistance Act of 1976 (PL-94-502), signed into law by President Ford on Oct. 15, sets a termination date for the nation's third GI Bill and opens a new era for veterans education benefits.

As explained by John G. Miller, Director of the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Los Angeles, the current GI Bill will not be available to persons who enter the armed services on or after Dec. 31, 1976. Under that bill, 6.8 million veterans and active-duty members with military service since February 1, 1955, have received educational assistance from the VA. Veterans who are now eligible have until December 31, 1989 to complete training.

Offsetting the end of the present GI Bill eligibility, Miller said the new law creates a voluntary contributory educational assistance program for persons initially entering military service after Dec. 31, 1976. Jointly operated by the Veterans Administration and the Department of Defense, the program will offer 36 months educational assistance entitlement with a 10-year delimiting date.

Participants in the new program may contribute $50 to $75 monthly. The GI Bill will contribute as much as $2,700. The contributions will be matched by the VA at the rate of $2 for every $1 contributed by the participant. Miller said the new law also provided for an 8 percent increase in the maximum current training offered by the GI Bill, except flight training, retroactive to Oct. 1. The basic entitlement for trainees was extended from 36 to 45 months.

Prepayment of the monthly allowance was eliminated, effective June 1, 1977. After, also, June 1, advancement payment at the start of a period will be permitted only at the request of the trainee and provided the school agrees to comply with the requirements of the law.

Miller said other features of the new law included:

- Increased maximum amount for education loans from $600 to $1,000.
- Terminated enrollments and reenrollments by current active-duty members in predischARGE education program (PREP) after Oct. 1, 1975. PREP will be available during last six months of first enlistment for service members who participate in new voluntary contributory education program.
- Removed delimiting date for seriously disabled and disabled veterans enrolled in vocational rehabilitation programs.
- Prohibits an attorney-in-fact from negotiating benefit check as such action is considered as assignment.

The current GI Bill was effective June 25, 1944, and provided educational assistance for eligible veterans who served on active duty after Jan. 27, 1955. When all training under the bill has been terminated, its 25-year lifespan will have concluded.

Cal State professors write book

A historian and a sociologist at Cal State, San Bernardino have joined forces to write a book on opposing forces: "Modern Revolutions and the Revolutionary Ideal." In their book, Robert Blackney, professor of history and Clifford T. Payton, professor of sociology, discuss how the concept of revolution has been altered from the Revolutionary Ideal. The two men wrote the book on the currently popular subject at the request of the publisher, Schenkman Publishers Co., Cambridge, Mass. It is available in hardback and paperback.

Blackney and Payton are editors of a book of readings on causes of revolution, "Why Revolution?" Blackney also published a bibliography on revolutions, "Modern Revolutions and Revolutionists," earlier this year.
Helping troubled people, from teenagers through senior citizens, with personal problems is a goal for the Community Counseling Center at California State College, San Bernardino.

The services of the center, a function of the psychology department, are open to all without charge, according to Dr. Christopher O'Hare, director.

"If the kind of service we can provide is not appropriate to the individual's problem, we will find the right service or agency to help him," he added.

The counselors are graduate students in the Master of Science in psychology program at the college. They are supervised by faculty members who hold Ph.D. degrees in psychology or are licensed clinical and counseling psychologists.

"All of the counseling is strictly confidential," warned Dr. O'Hare. "Anyone 18 years or older may come for help. Appointments should be made at the Community Counseling Center, the only free service of its kind in the area, was launched last year. We have seen many people sought help, he said.

The center was particularly attractive to families in groups of couples, including pre-marital counseling, child-rearing questions, problems arising from the "classic triangle," and stresses due to personal relationships.

"The counselors work with individuals. Some are women in their middle years who feel lost or unloved, and so on, in school and they have no career of their own. A number of lonely and isolated individuals, who just don't know what to do with their lives," have sought out the Community Counseling Center, said O'Hare.

Counselling available

In the instances of the senior citizens, referrals often are made to other agencies which are expert in meeting their needs.

The personal problems which bring the counseling center range from death and illness in the family, to educational, vocational problems or to extreme fears and anxieties.

With the consent of parents, the counselor can work with teachers about learning or behavioral problems in the children.

Continuing professional training programs adequately in the center consult with other members of the psychology faculty, drawing upon their various areas of specialization. Some faculty members, for example, have done research in the field of gerontology; others are interested in the problems of women or of adolescents.

O'Hare, a clinical psychologist who has worked in clinics or in private practice for about five years, conducts the initial interview of all individuals coming to the center. He selects the counselor to work with the person or makes the referral to other agencies.

O'Hare is director of graduate programs in the psychology department. The college currently offers an M.A. in psychology with a concentration in general-experimental psychology and an M.S. in psychology with a concentration in counseling. It is exploring the possibility of offering an interdisciplinary M.A. in human development, which would include psychology, education, anthropology, biology and sociology.

Anyone wishing further information on the Community Counseling Center may consult with Dr. O'Hare about services available there. When the center is not staffed, the caller may leave his name and number on the telephone message system.

Assembly Ed Committee

The Assembly Education Committee will hold two days of interim hearings in San Bernardino Nov. 15 and 16 on the subjects of school enrollment and staff development for certificated personnel.

The purpose of the Nov. 15 hearing is to examine the training, responsibilities, evaluation and continuing professional development of principals. The Committee wishes to determine whether existing administrator training programs adequately prepare principals for their responsibilities, what the school districts evaluate the performance of school site administrators, and whether increased attention and resources be devoted to the job training for principals.

At the Nov. 16 hearing, the committee will review current in-service programs and funding and discuss proposed legislation designed to increase teacher-administrator participation in inservice education.

The hearings will be held at the San Bernardino State Building, 1250 Front Street, room B119 and will commence at 9:30 a.m. Testimony will be by invitation only. Those wishing to testify should notify the Committee office at (916) 445-7097.

He noted that Chico hopes to get around policy by giving the "Wildcat" an independent status. A committee has been set up to investigate the feasibility of divorcing the "Wildcat" from the Associated Students. He feels that if sufficient progress is shown towards these ends, CSUC President Stanford Cazier will hold off enforcing the Trustees' opinion.

It was noted that at the Trustees' meeting last month, Trustee Frank Adams stated that all campus newspapers should be under the respective journalism department, where they could be controlled by the university presidents.

Myers warned the student presidents to be wary of such "off the wall" attitudes.

He warned the rest of the student presidents to be careful, arguing that if even one campus paper is out of line the Trustees could very possibly veto a blanket policy affecting all papers in the system.

The meeting then discussed how the various campuses were implementing a recent Trustees' directive calling for student participation in the faculty retention, tenure and promotion (RTP) process.

It was revealed that students were participating on only about half of the campuses. On some campuses, it was pointed out, the directive was not being implemented in good faith, and students were being excluded from further involvement in RTP.

It was noted that students are often afraid to sign evaluation forms because possible retaliation by teachers at grading time.

Also, teachers may charge student retaliation for bad grades.

Scott Plotkin noted that CSUSPA's original intentions of getting students involved in the evaluation process seems to have been undermined.

"There is something different going on at each campus," he said, recommending that the presidents adopt an explanatory memo in hopes of helping teachers.

"After working so hard to get students involved in RTP," said Kevin O'Grady of San Bernardino, "we're getting tokened out."

Scott Plotkin reported on his progress legislative program for the SPA.

Among the bills introduced or to be introduced is an amendment to the Education Code which authorize the use of parking revenue funds for the acquisition, construction, operation and maintenance of alternative methods of transportation on the system's campuses.

Plotkin also announced that he intended to continue pushing legislation that would take ultimate control over student activity fees hands of the campus presidents and give it to the student governments.

He then announced his intention to introduce legislation to allow students to increase student activity fees by specific amounts for specific purposes (e.g., $1 per year for a day care center) provided 30 percent of the student vote.

Two previous bills which were passed only after considerable difficulty only to be vetoed by Governor Brown, who among other things claimed that low voter turnout diminished the value of student election results. The present maximum of $2 per year has been in effect for more than two decades.

The association member asked, "Why can't the 30 percent qualification be added to the vetoed bills and then reintroduced?"

"That's a possibility," Plotkin responded.

Plotkin is also recommending that the association support bills which would forbid discrimination in housing because of being a student.

He also noted that he will do his best to insure that intercollegiate athletics is viewed as an intramurally related activity (IRA) and thus funded out of state IRA monies rather than student fees. He encouraged the presidents to have their athletics directors support this position and to relay written comments to him.

Finally, Plotkin encouraged each student president to cultivate good relationships with local legislators and to try to develop same with local Trustees.

Editor's Note: Diane Cassano is a reporter for "The Woldcat," of Cal. State Chico. The student papers at each of the colleges where CSUSCPA is meeting win hopefully cover the event for the other State Universities and Colleges. CSUSCPA will be meeting at this campus this month.

One Sunday morning, I sat in the bar trying to get started on my weekly column. I thought and I scrawled, but I got nowhere. Nothing would come. No bad jokes popped into my mind for elaboration, so humorous iridescent laughter from the news came up.

I was stuck. My drinking buddies, Biggy and Potted Palm, sat a little ways down the bar from me, by the taps, with their backs to the bar, and watched Roger, the bar owner, sweep up the floor. Every time he passed back or forth, they would bend their elbows and swallow the rest of their glasses. They were on their tenth or twelfth toast.

Suddenly, from out in front of the building, we heard a high-pitched whirring sound, like a helicopter morning. It was quiet; it was promised to be a great day, as soon as I finished my writing.

Suddenly, from out in front of the building, we heard a high-pitched whirring sound, like a helicopter morning. It was quiet; it was promised to be a great day, as soon as I finished my writing.

We knew that the craft was a spaceship. It was a brightly shining silver disc, symmetrically thicker at the poles than at the edges. It was about ten feet wide, and five feet thick in the middle. Three spindly antennas poked out from its topside. It rested on three foot long legs.

"More beer!" shouted Potted Palm, a certain amount of hysteria in his voice.

A panel opened out from the underside of the spaceship, and the unhinged edge lowered to the ground. From this open hatch rolled a four-foot long, mousy brown thing. It looked like a hollow tree trunk. There was no head or body, just a tube.

As soon as the thing hit the ground, six filament sized arms stuck out from the underside of the trunk and pushed up so fast that it seemed like one instant the thing was horizontal and in the next, it was vertical.

"Do you serve alcohol here?" asked the thing. Its voice was that of an IBM 4600 with vocal capabilities, that grow, swell, melt, and collapse. I will never care of all your problems voice.

"You're a Martian?"
"Yes, of course."

Biggy and I had recovered some wit and had tucked our eyeballs back, and had made our way to the bar. Potted Palm had collapsed upon the pool table. He was rolling and moaning: the incredulous event had mapped his voice.

Roger served up a glass of Coors and set it before the Martian. With its thin, thin arms, the Martian lifted the glass to the top of his head and poured the beer into its hollow inside. No beer leaked out, no bottom onto the stool, so something happened to it, God knows what.

"Um," said Biggy, trying to speak, "um, do all Martians look like you?"

"Yes, they do. Haven't you ever seen a Martian before? More beer, please."

Being a writer, I had quickly noticed that the alien spoke impeccable American English. "Mr. Martian, you speak remarkably good English. How is that?"

Before replying, the Martian drank its second glass of beer, drinking it as before. Since there was no consumption and the Martian's speaking, I assume that a process of sort took place. "I didn't think that I'd find anyone here who speaks High Martian, so I learned California." "But how did you learn it?"

"We Martians have demonstrated Earth for centuries. We have a superior civilization to yours."

"But there's no life on Mars," exclaimed Biggy. "It's just a desert planet, full of sand and rocks. I saw the photos that the Viking landers sent back. There's no civilization on Mars."

"Yes, it does look that way, doesn't it? Indeed, we do have a superior civilization."

That stopped Biggy for a moment, but he bounced back with a new topic. "What are you doing here on Earth?"

"The Martian didn't answer quickly. It passed, then said a low, guilty, monotone, "I'm drinking beer. I have done a bad thing, and now I must drink to forget." "To forget!" mumbled Potted Palm from the pool table. "What did you do?"

"You will tell no other Earthlings!"

"Of course not," I said, slyly pushing paid and pen out of the Martian's view, assuming it had eyes that I couldn't see. "I have prevented you Earthlings from landing on a colonizing Mars in the forseeable future."

"What?" roared Biggy. "You miserable jerk! What right have you got to interfere with our future?"

"I live on Mars. Where Mars is concerned, I am concerned."

"Oh, well..." apologized Biggy. "What did you do?"

"I went to your local college, Cal State, to the records office and falsified some records. A certain student who was enrolled in Psychology is now enrolled in Music 180."

"You're a Martian?"
"Yes, of course."

"Why are you here?"
"To get better acquainted with the human race."

"But you can't stay on Earth!"

"I have prevented you Earthlings from landing on a colonizing Mars in the forseeable future."

"What?" roared Biggy. "You miserable jerk! What right have you got to interfere with our future?"

"I live on Mars. Where Mars is concerned, I am concerned."

"Oh, well...

"What did you do?"

"I went to your local college, Cal State, to the records office and falsified some records. A certain student who was enrolled in Psychology is now enrolled in Music 180."

"And that's going to keep us off Mars? How?"

"The student will not learn of this until it is too late to change back to the psychology class, and will consequently begin attending music classes. The student will study music classes, and will never learn a certain bit of information that is taught in the psychology class, and will consequently begin attending music classes. The student will study music classes, and will never learn a certain bit of information that is taught in the psychology class."

"How can you know the future, know what's going to happen?"

"What do you know of the mathematics of the predicable science of psychohistory?"

"Uh, nothing."

"Then there's no point in my trying to explain it to you. You wouldn't understand. But be assured, we have pinpointed the solution to our problem. There is no point in which we can do a wrong thing."

"What did you say that information was, asked Biggy, lightly, vaguely."

"What don't you expect me to tell you, I hope. He would write it down and it would be printed for all Earthlings to see -- Yes, I see you making those notations and I know what they are," I grinned sheepishly, and copied down the statement very carefully.

"Well, who is this person whose record has been changed?"

"The Martian floated to the floor. "Yes, the beer has been fine. I shall forget all of this on the way home."

"Who is it?" insisted Biggy. "A potentially great and valued member of your society, but a real estate claim jumper of the worst sort, nonetheless."

"Is it a man or a woman?"

"You must think we Martians are fools if you expect me to fall into that trap. Oh no, I cannot tell you if he is a man or woman."

"Who is it?" screamed Biggy. "Gooey day, good-bye," said the Martian.

"The rulebook on humans does not say that I have to resolve your problems."

"But you can't run away without giving me a climax to my story, a clincher, a blow-off to provide purification and relief!"

"Ta-ta," said the Martian. And it floated out of the front door.

"And that's going to keep us off Mars? How?"

"The student will not learn of this until it is too late to change back to the psychology class, and will consequently begin attending music classes. The student will study music classes, and will never learn a certain bit of information that is taught in the psychology class."

"But the door to the spaceship had closed. The craft made its whirring sound and lifted straight up into the sky, and soon vanished from sight.

We spent that great afternoon getting the details that we had seen. For whom do you believe us?
Can State Afford Proposition 14?

By Ray Byers

Election day in California, if the media is correct, will find a few apple-picking, the presidential race, but the majority will be watching the fate of Proposition 14, the Agricultural Labor Relations Initiative. This controversial initiative has created more angry discussion in the state than any other subject for some time. The United Farm Workers, which is backing the proposition, and the organization growers have been sniping at each other for months.

Dennis Chavez, head of the United Farm Workers, filed a permit complaint with the Federal Communications Commission, on Oct. 14, against the airing of commercial seeking to defeat passage of Proposition 14 on the November ballot.

Chavez called the ads “false and deceptive” when they said Proposition 14 would destroy the ability of agricultural workers to create a lunch period of one hour so the growers could enter their property and talk to the employees. If there was no established lunch hour and one additional hour during the day, they could disrupt the employer’s property or operation; but, it goes on to say, “speech will not disrupt.”

The section goes into further detail by stating that disruptive conduct on the part of the organizers will not be grounds for expelling them from the grower’s property, or preventing their future access unto the property again.

The agricultural workers already have the right to strike, that if they so desire. There appears to be no logical reason the union organizers have and the growers, the right under the law. Proposition 14 doesn’t say the organizers will talk to the employees while they eat lunch, unless there is an established lunch period. This could be rather disruptive to the grower.

Any disruption, however, has been taken into consideration by the drafters of the proposition. Section 1152.2c states that the organizers can conduct a secondary boycott to disrupt the employer’s property or operation; but, it goes on to say, “speech will not disrupt.”

As a political science student, I have enjoyed following the events in California. It seems to be an interesting debate on the right to unionize in the state of California. Certainly, the task is not an easy one.

I think it is a fair certainty that if you gather together all the agricultural workers in the state of California that were unaware of recent unionizing attempts by the United Farm Workers and the Teamsters and what they were promising to do for the workers, you would probably have difficulty in finding enough people to hold a game of Gin Rummy.

One of the procedures the United Farm Workers have used is especially useful in their fight to be recognized as the bargaining agent for all the farm workers in the state. There has been a lot of discussion, pro and con, as to whether or not Hispanic unions are forbidden to use the secondary boycott under the National Labor Relations Act. Since agricultural workers do not come under the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Act, they have felt justified in using it. They do this by picketing grocery stores and putting up a “Buy UPW in an attempt to prevent the public from patronizing the store and persuade the merchant to buy only produce picked by the union. The United Farm Workers have been able to get enough public pressure on a large enough number of merchants to come to the union and submit to their demands.

If Proposition 14 passes, there will be no more debate over whether the secondary boycott is right or wrong. Statesmen...

Letters To The Editor

Korn for President

PawPrint Editor: I do not know if anyone has read a book in the last few years, but life we are privileged to glimpse greatness and rarely, still, we might even devote to a “just plain decency,” they will flock to the polls in November in support of Korn for President.

Speaking of my association with one of the finest, most noble, patriotic, self-sacrificing young generals to emerge from Kommander Korn. This same fine fellow is the most dedicated to duty, is campaigning for President.

He has this year he will hear little of Kommander Korn’s campaign activities in the daily newspapers, but it will grow and will ignore him altogether. This is because the media is fearful of their reputation. They are well aware that once the public is the least bit informed and knowledgeable of Kommander Korn’s very active campaign, they will flock to the polls in November in support of Kommander Korn and his lofty program and the news media will look like horse droppings.

As a mother I can only admire and envy the fine woman whose dedication and honor it was to give to the world this most incredible young man.

It is with the utmost pleasure I jump on Kommander Korn’s bandwagon. I urge everyone on the campus to move to the community and spread the message. Our only hope is the PawPrt to assist in enlightening the public. Let the nation know that Kommander Korn is here and stand at the helm and guide our ship over the troubled waters and white and black people as we’ve never been led before.

I should hope that all concerned before Kommander Korn and volunteer to do whatever is necessary to get our last great hope elected to the highest office in the land. Just the fact that he has decided to run for the highest office in the land should be an invitation to all of us. The possibility of such an opportunity being available and willing will probably not occur again in our lifetime — not until the bicentennial year. I cannot emphasize too strongly the urge of the situation. Only an informed citizenry can vote intelligently in the election, but you will cast your vote for Kommander Korn.

Sincerely, Marilyn Goldstein, Member Concerned — For Country In Support of Kommander Korn (CCC-SSK)

Appreciation

I would like to take this time to express my appreciation to all of the students of this country. I have been selected to represent you at the polls. As you know by now, I did not win the election, and I have been subjected to the total vote. To put it simply, I needed 3 more votes to take the election. All freshmen were people voted for Mark Wronak, 23 were for J.P. Duncan, and 43 people voted for me.

For the upcoming runoff election, I hope that you will vote for me. The support I got on Oct. 27 and 28 will be very strong, if not stronger.

I’ve worked very hard for this position and I believe all of you...
A visit to the past

By Cheryl Brown

The purpose of Dr. Leon Litack's Multi-Media Presentation at Cal State on Oct. 25 was to give his American history students at UC Berkeley a feeling for that particular period. And that he did.

He combined slides and film in a montage of images that gave the viewer a feel for the 1930's, and also the '50's and '60's. The sound was the sound of the period. No narration was used only music and voices speaking the thoughts and feelings of the time.

Of the two presentations, the one of the 1930's was made last. A persistent theme throughout this fifty minute "history lesson" was the Depression. There were breadlines upon breadlines, the most ironic one being a line of blacks waiting in front of a billboard that supposedly depicted the "happy American family" enjoying their healthy and fulfilled life. By matching images of breadlines with those of the enormous, magnificent and happy musicals of the same period, Litack successfully conveyed the message that the people did not want to be reminded of (in their entertainment) of what was going on in the real world.

Other reminders of the 30's included Hitler and a hilarious imitation of him by Charlie Chaplin, baseball, unions and strikes, Roosevelt, part of the Grain Wall's Martian invasion broadcast, the victims of the Dustbowl, and the hundreds of Flash Gordon type magazines and movies, pictures of which were flashed on one of the three screens in rapid succession. "The 1945-70 sequence," Litack commented between presentations, "was made first." "It is a very impressive view of the time span." The music of the '50's and '60's filtered through scenes depicting how drugs, TV, the "sexual revolution," violence and the Vietnam War had all affected our lives. Rock 'n roll and Chuck Berry; Elvis; Dylan; Joan Baez; with his interpretation of the "Star-Spangled Banner" — which is a moving statement of the '60's youth. Backpack to tranquility

By Frank Moore

Well, the CSCSB Escape '76 "Backpack to Lion" Trail Camp did not quite pan out as expected. For one thing, we never did reach the trail camp (thanks to the leader and author of this article) due to a mistake in our bearings. But it was worth it. At least, I think so.

The group ended up climbing a mountain pass from where we descended into some wild back country. We had it all to ourselves! Sleeping camp was set up in a little meadow, and the kitchen down by a little brook.

The weather was balmy all weekend with a fresh rain scented air hanging in the air. The scenery was far superior to the confines of Lion Camp, and it was for us alone. Worth climbing a mountain for? There were varied (mostly unprintable) opinions, but no one was disappointed.

Don't miss our Nov. 26 hike to Sugar Pine Mountain, just up the road. Apply at SS No. 172.

It was a cold, wintry October afternoon as the Crestline Cougars fired up opposite the Try-ers to do their traditional battle. No, this isn't a book by Homer, or Cecil B. DeMille movie. The battlefield is not the Gallerian in Rome. The names of the gladiators aren't Achilles or Ulysses, but Carolyn Shoup and Kommander Korn to name a few.

The game isn't kill, unless someone dies laughing. This is the Cal State Pantiwaist Football game between the Cougars and the Try-ers. A game fast saw a Cougar defense led by Joey "Too Tall" Thomas and Carroll "How's the Weather Down There" Day hold the Try-ers' one-man offense Dennis "Jim Thorpe" Mendonca to a meager one touchdown.

The Cougars' offense, besides the Gayle Sayers of Pantwaistdom if Kommander Korn, had a new field general. He is Mike "Drive Ya' Home a Deal" Shaffer who is affectionately known by his friends, I mean friend, as "Brainless."

After a shaky first half, he led the Cougars by ripping the Try-ers' defense with pinpoint passes in the second half enroute to a 24 to 12 win.

The second Pantiwaist encounter saw Maria Myers' M M Goods trash siding Connie's EBA's 25 to 0.

Maria's animals showed no mercy to poor Connie's kids as the Goods marched up and down the field at will throughout the contest. Dave "Dave's Not Here" Amori and Ron "the Hippie" Hanke led the balanced Goods offense, while Roger "Butt Plug" Odle and Brice "The Hammer" Hammerstein smacked the less than potent EBA defense.

The EBA's spirit and enjoyment of the game can best be illustrated by their fearless leader who during the game could be heard cheering in the offense from the sideline, "All right, team, we caught the center, we're half-way there."

A pass from Miles "the Snake" Rogers to Chuck "Adhesive Hands" Satcher accounted for the EBA's only tally.

THREE-PERSON BASKETBALL LEAGUE

There were spectators fainting from shock last week as the powerful J.D.L. led by "Doctor C," Ronnie "The Hawk" Myers, were destroyed by the "I Don't Care's" led by Hector "Stretch" Guzman and Rusty the "Chump" Shoup.

The games were close, the two teams exchanging baskets until the "I Don't Care's" double teamed "Doctor C" leaving Jim "the Triple" Given open. Jim could not pick up the slack, and Jim Roesler, though battling hard, was being out rebounded by Joe Long and Rusty Shoup, this and an offensive barrage by Hector Guzman led to the J.D.L.'s demise. The real key note to this game was probably the leaping blocks of "Doctor C's" 2 hand set shots by Rusty the "Chump" Shoup.

Next week's game has Benene's boys, the B-Bombers vs. the Ringers, I mean, the Misfits led by "A" league Al Diaz, Tim Olsen, Rich Adams and Steve Hernandez.

The B-Bombers' only chance is if the Misfits can't concentrate on the game because of the gorgeous legs of the Misfits' newest member, Diane Blosecker.

"A" LEAGUE

The big story in the "A" League game of the week was that Francois McGinnis, the Freshmen's one-man offense, can and did make a pass. (During the game.)

He threw the ball to Seakerrise Tastoo who in turn made a lay-up. But it was too much to ask to see anymore than that one pass in the Freshmen's 2 out of 3 wins over Manko.

Manko, who had Ron Miller and Greg Thompson take turns trying to stop McGinnis, but both obviously were less than successful. Ivan "Truck" Glasso could not counteract McGinnis and his good team (?) play.

SPORT SHORTS

Are there any female "animals" on this campus? Would any of you girls like to take a "legal" swing at some other of your "fairer" sex?

If you answer yes to either or both of these questions then I've got just what you need.

The Riverside Rugby Club needs women for its newly formed team. Practices are on Sundays at 4 p.m. on the UCR Soccer field. Games will be played against other clubs from throughout the state. So come on girls, get brutal!

Jack Nicklaus, where are you?

If he was a student here at Cal State there would be no doubt that Jack Nicklaus would be in our big golf tourney.

Rumor has it that Jack was about to enroll at Cal State just so he could play in our prestigious tourney. But he found out the infamous "Dover Boys" would be in it and, yes, Ben's kids scared good ol' Nick off.

Don't let them scare you off. It's again time for that hailowy event, the Cal State 9-hole golf tourney will be held from Nov. 3 to 14.

Play your 9 holes one of those days, then bring your scorecard signed by a witness to Room P-124 by Nov. 15, 1976. Results will be posted the following day.

This event is open to all students.
Concert to be presented

Clarinetist Dr. Arthur Moorfield and pianist Timothy Strong, both members of the Cal State, San Bernardino music faculty, will present a program at the college Saturday evening, Nov. 7. Robert Kuehn, violist, Cal State junior music major, will assist in the performance of a Mozart trio. Kuehn is a graduate of San Bernadino High School.

The public is invited to attend the recital at 7:30 p.m. in the Lecture Hall of the Physical Sciences building.

know that. This run-off is just as important to me as it should be to all of you. It has the same effect on the freshman class as the general election. I haven't waited for the last minute to campaign and I don't plan to wait until the last minute to get things done once elected.

In conclusion, all of your support will be greatly appreciated and you will not be sorry you voted for me. I thank all of you for your sincere support.

We would like to express our concern about the fact that very few Chicanos are interested in attending MECHA meetings. Some of us at some level do not identify with the word or concept "Chicano." Some of us might have a completely different idea as to what a Chicano "should or should not" be, and there are possibly some of us who are completely indifferent. Actually you could say that of most groups, but whatever might cause the feeling of indifference, only you know. We would be interested to hear your arguments on this position.

Open letter

We the Chicano Students of CSGSB would like to invite you and all other interested students to attend our MECHA meetings held every Thursday at 12 noon in LC-227.

Library to show

"Holiday"

A real entertainment 'sleeper' is the Library's film classic series. Top stars of yesterday prove that they aren't making films like they used to.

Today's "Holiday" with Katherine Hepburn and Cary Grant starts at 1 p.m. in the Listening Facility on the Library's fourth floor.

These two legendary stars of Hollywood's heyday are still up and about. Hepburn currently starring in Enid Bagnold's "A Matter of Gravity" at the Ahmanson Theater in Los Angeles' Music Center, and will be there through Nov. 27—unless they extend the sell-out run.

Grant, now a director of Faberge, spends his time urging people to smell good.

These two stellar performers have racked up a record that will stand forever. Twenty-eight of Grant's film motion pictures have played Radio City Music Hall. Hepburn holds second place with 22 of her films shown there. The records will never be topped because it was recently announced that Radio City Music Hall will be torn down.

So, grab a quick shot of Geritol and take in "Holiday." It's a memorable movie that your parents probably saw. If you can't make the 1 p.m. Tuesday showing, there will be a re-run at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

And remember, for the classic film series you're invited to bring your lunch and enjoy an indoor picnic while watching yesterday's film glory.

Rally winner predicted

Rallymaster Dave Fowler predicts that an amateur rallyist will win his Dummy's Car Rally, being held Thursday, Nov. 4, starting at 1:30 p.m. in the Serrano Village parking lot.

"I set up the course," said Fowler, "so that $5,000 worth of rally equipment in a $15,000 sports car could happen, but I doubt it." He explained that the equipment used in setting up the course would provide this probability.

Fowler also explained that previous rally experience would probably help, since rallyists are used to following obscure and misleading directions and are used to controlling their speeds carefully. But common sense would make up for that, he suggested.

This is a chance for those who'd like to compete in a car rally with a chance of winning. Bring a buck, bring a partner, and come to the dormitory parking lot on Thursday afternoon and enter Dave Dummy's Car Rally. It'll be a good time.
