EDITOR'S
NOTES

by Elrond G. Lawrence
Chronicle Editor-In-Chief

The perils of a writer's block...

What do you get when you have a typewriter, cassette ribbon, erase ribbon, a nice chair and table set, and one frustrated editor suffering from writers block?

Insanity?

Well, not quite insanity, but one can definitely go a bit berserk when column space on a weekly campus newspaper is opened up for him on a weekly basis, and he can't find the written words to fill that space.

Layout people don't like writers blocks, either. It's interesting to watch what kinds of things can be maneuvered from page to page, and space to space, when a story - or column - doesn't show. It's along the lines of creative writing, but a better name would probably be creative graphics.

It seems safe to say that there are quite a few people out there who can appreciate this dilemma - such as term paper authors, English Majors, and any other writer one can think of. So this assortment of ramblings is hopefully serving more than one purpose - it's giving this writer a chance to overcome a writing "blackout," and it's giving all those other victims out there a chance to laugh at someone else for a change. Maybe it's even a few would-be writers that they're not alone...

Of course there has to be a few "devil's advocates" who might suggest that this column is simply an excuse to fill space.

Well, they're right. But what better way is there to overcome a writing problem than by writing about it?

On a different note, it seems the year of 1987 is starting out as a rather positive year for California State University, San Bernardino. A rather large growth in enrollment has remained strong during the winter quarter, the university's newest structure finally appears to be taking shape, and the first CSUSB baseball team is off and playing (kicking off with a split doubleheader on Feb. 7). As many students who have been here a while would tell you, CSUSB has gone through quite a tremendous growth in the last few years. From expanded programs of study to the imminent chartering of two fraternity colonies here, Cal State San Bernardino is keeping pace with the phenomenal growth that the Inland Empire has been experiencing in the last few years. Hopefully, the pace will not slow.

One last related note: Effective with this issue, all Chronicle staff writers will be paid 80 cents per published column inch. So if there are any students reading this column who've had experience writing for a newspaper or other kind of publication, think about writing for the Chronicle. It doesn't take that much time, and the experience will last you a lifetime.

All of us will not graduate. This shouldn’t be considered a catastrophe but rather an opportunity for alternative employment that may be more satisfying and financially rewarding than the forms offered to a degree holder. The structured form of education taught in college is but one form of learning. You can educate yourself and still enjoy Cheers.

For a job. According to a major rationale for obtaining a new study conducted by the US high school students and 88% of the parents polled believed the prime purpose of a college education was to promote career advancement. If your value structure is committed to the necessity of obtaining a degree then do so. If you don’t follow through it is helpful to have an alternative career pathway.

Consider the construction trade. Construction unions build edifices (that word is on the vocabulary section of the Weechi IQ test) like the Pentagon, First Interstate Bank, Angel Stadium, the Blue Whale (in L.A.), and lots of fast food emporiums.

I am promoting unions rather than non-unions because the union pay scale is higher and because they provide a systematic education in the trade designed to take you from beginner to expert during a four year training period on the average.

You don’t need any prior experience to join. Women may apply also. It’s a ripe field for husbands. Don’t eliminate yourself if you feel you aren’t mechanically inclined. The use of tools is a fine and gross motor skill that is learned and can be taught. Unions include carpenters, plumbers, pipe fitters, electricians, dry wallers, heavy equipment operators, and laborers. Each except laborers have a 2 to 4 year apprenticeship program that leads to becoming a journeyman (expert). The learning process is mainly on the job instruction supplemented by one or two days or night school per week (not paid).

An apprentice generally starts out at 40% of the journeyman’s scale of $20 an hour. Every six months you get a raise of about 6% if you are steadily employed. In four years you will have earned about $100,000. You are now earning $40,000 a year. A BA won’t buy you that for a long time.

Each union has individualized entrance requirements vary by locality. Some may be joined at any time while others restrict application to once a year. The ones that restrict membership are generally better because they are controlling the labor pool so that most are assured of having a job.

Call the union halls (called Locals) to find our requirements or visit a construction site for information. Job dissatisfiers: You may not have steady employment during the apprenticeship. Good journeymen though are usually employed year around. You work outside and are subject to the vagaries of heat and cold. The jobs usually aren’t intellectually stimulating and can be downright dull. Some are physically tiring. The plus side to this is that you will stay healthy and fit longer than your desk-bound compadres. Also you will enjoy Cheers more. You have to travel to where the job is. This may mean a commute to L.A.

Job satisfiers: Money. The jobs aren’t mentally stressful, you don’t have to travel to where the job is. You will enjoy Cheers more. You have to travel to where the job is. This may mean a commute to L.A.

Forum to Discuss GE Program Revisions

The Task Force invites all members of the University community to join us for a series of open forums to discuss a draft of proposed revisions in the GE program. The draft will include:

a. Proposed revisions in the course requirements,

b. Proposed objectives for each segment of the program, and

c. Proposed criteria for evaluating all present and future courses that will be designated as meeting the various GE requirements.

Responses and suggestions will be considered by the Task Force in its preparation of the final proposal, which will be submitted to the University curriculum process on March 19, 1987.

We expect to distribute copies of the draft to departmental and dean’s offices, the Student Activities Office in the Student Union, and the Library circulation desk by February 11 for your prior review. Written comments can also be sent to me by February 27. We will welcome comments from all individuals; they need not represent collective school or departmental responses, although those, of course, are also invited.

Rumors by Cheri Metier Once again Committee for Clubs has some tasty tidbits of news to bring the students and staff of CSUSB. One should keep in mind that the information given here may contain some halftruths, not lies, just unconfirmed rumors. The annual Battle of Clubs is scheduled for the 14th of May. This afternoon will be filled with competition, fun, food, and excitement. There is also talk of t-shirts for those who participate and of course PRIZE MONEY! All clubs should be searching for the details. It has been heard that Sociology Club’s Tom Hannan is planning an American Heritage Festival to precede the Battle of Clubs. This would possibly include such things as a live band, speakers talking about some of America’s diverse cultures, exhibits, and more. Money is said to be a language of its own and this is exactly the tongue that David Bellis is speaking. With funds that have come from the lottery, the opportunity of increasing club’s treasures and helping out the community at the same time is available. To learn more about this one may contact Bellis at 887-7704. Black History Month Channel 7 Newcastle Larry Carroll will host the 6th annual Black History Month celebration. Larry Carroll, KABC-TV anchorman and reporter, will speak on “Black People and the Future” at 8 p.m., Saturday, February 14 in the university Recital Hall. Julian Bond, currently a syndicated newspaper columnist and political activist, will appear at 8 p.m., Friday, February 27, in the university Upper Commons to talk about “Echoes from the Past—Eiching the Future.” Both speakers’ presentations are free and open to the public. Cal State, San Bernardino also will observe Black History Month by showcasing the talent and expertise of its students and faculty. AN INTERVIEW WITH MARK ALLEN OF 99.1 FM

by Kim Scnep

Have you ever sat in class and looked at the person next to you and wondered about them? Are they married, single, are they an alien from another planet maybe? Well if you ever sat next to someone named Mark Allen, he's not from another planet but he is a radio announcer for the local radio station 99.1.

How Mark got his job at the station is interesting. He was in a ski accident in the second grade which kept him out of school and in bed for a while. During this time he read a book on ventriloquism. He became interested but never appeared in public, until a friend saw the movie Magic. He entered the west Texas talent show at 13 and won.

Allen then met John Clay, a graduate from SDSU, who told him he should think about getting involved in radio. Two years later he saw Clay again while working at Chess King. Allen asked him if the offer still held for him to get involved in broadcasting.

Six months later he was on the air doing a Sunday taped program. Four months after that he worked his own midnight to 6:00 in the morning show. This job continued through high school. He was then offered a job in Dallas Texas on a no. 1 rated radio station.

While working in Dallas, Clay called and told him he was going to California to work as a program director for 99.1 and asked if Allen wanted to come. He debated about it and finally agreed. After he had applied to CSUSB and was given a going away party, Clay called and told him he turned the job down. A friend of Allen's who worked for KISS FM called and talked him into coming to California anyway. He came to California and ended up getting the job he was originally going to take as a radio announcer for KGGI in Riverside.

Allen is a theater arts major. He hasn't worked with the school radio station but claims he would be interested in possibly conducting a workshop for interested announcers on what it's like to be an on-air announcer. He feels college radio is a good way for people to get their feet wet.

"Doing the promotional things that I do for the station gives me such variety that I don't really...

Deagle to Organize

Coyote Baseball

The head of an organization usually reflects the intent and purpose of that company. Chuck Deagle is a proven winner at the NCAA Division III level. Deagle took his former Team to the Div. I College Baseball World Series in 1985. Coach Deagle is now coaching the Cal State Coyotes in their inaugural baseball season. Deagles intent and purpose is to melt his 22 players into a single unit. Deagle's values on the field, relates the coach. Magness will work mainly with the pitchers.

The first month of the season is when I like to bring the team together as a family. That is my job. II can make the players enjoy playing together we will be successful," said Coach Deagle. That is my playing together we will be successful," said Coach Deagle. Deagle feels the team requires two-three weeks of playing to reach their potential. However the coach would say, "CSUSB pitching looks pretty good at this point. The defense looks good also. Hitting is coming along and needs more time."

Cal State Intramural "B" Division

by George Brunson
CSUSB Recreational Staff

The 1986-87 Intramural "B" Division baseball season is now underway. Two conferences consisting of four teams each make up the league. The Monday league, which starts at 2:45, consists of the following teams: (1) Where's the Net captained by Greg Haikik, (2) Runnin's captained by Jim Manly, (3) Natural Scientists captained by Bob Stein, and (4) One team who could possibly stop the Beatie Boys are Sigma Slammers, if they can add one money player to their roster. The Glazers are strong in numbers and may be the spoilers of the conference. The Fighting Faculty epitomize the true meaning of recreational sports. They're out there to just have a good time.

For those readers who have free time on Mondays or Fridays at 2:45, come on over to the CSUSB gymnasium and catch all the action. For more information call Recreational Sports Office 887-7416 Joe Long-Director.

Volleyball Team Begins with Victory

by Linda Whitney

The CSUSB’s Men’s Volleyball Team began the season Thursday night with a victory over Mount San Antonio Junior College, 16-4, 15-9, 15-11.

According to Chris Grenfell, however, the CSUSB team is a men’s club team, not an intercollegiate team.

"Eighty percent of the teams we play are intercollegiate teams, the others are clubs like us," Grenfell said. "So even though we’re not an intercollegiate team, we are playing on an intercollegiate level."

Because they are club team, the CSUSB team receives no funding from the Cal State Athletic Department. Instead, they are funded by the Recreational Sports Department. In addition, the players also furnish their own uniforms and hold fundraisers.

The team members are: Robert Boggioni (team captain), Dave Callahan, Tim Driscoll, Patrick Esaley, John Fay, Eric Haugan, Greg Haulke, Scott Henderson, Willie Sakaguchi and Phil Walsh.

"We practice about three days a week," team member Patrick Esaley said.

The practicing paid off for the Coyotes in their first match, but they still must face 13 other opponents this season.

The team’s next home game will be against UCSD on Friday, February 20 at 8 p.m. in the Gym.

Smith wants New Activities For Campus

by Kim Schnapp

Curtis Smith, new activities director at CSUSB, is planning a variety of new activities to engage students on campus. Some of the events he is considering include a film festival, a poetry slam, and a student-run newspaper. Smith says he is looking for input from students on what they would like to see on campus. He says he is open to any ideas and welcomes students to share their thoughts with him.

Enthusiastic about his new job, Allen said, "I really enjoy what I'm doing, especially the promotional things I get to do." He really enjoyed radio during high school and at 21 has had a rapid climb to success. "I'd like to finish school and find a job in broadcasting after that." He would like to work somewhere in Los Angeles but plans to be out of radio announcing by the time he's 25. He's had job offers from stations in San Diego and Sacramento already.

So the next time you're sitting next to someone in class and wonder who he or she is, don't be afraid to ask. He might be an old high school chum, a neighbor or he might be the voice you hear on the radio announcing your favorite song.

You can hear Mark Allen weekdays between 6:00 and 7:00 on FM 99.1 KGGI Riverside.

Dr. Michael Pounds Joins Communication Dept.

by Kim Schnopp

Dr. Michael Pounds, who has had the experience of directing and producing some TV shows, has recently joined the faculty in Cal State's Communication Department.

Pounds received his doctorate from New York University and has taught at the University of Florida and, most recently, at Rutgers University in Westchester, New York. He has also been visiting a researcher for IBM at its T. J. Watson Research Center.

While he was in California in 1982 studying film at UCLA, he decided he really liked Southern California. He feels that people here like to play and work hard. "People in professional circles are aggressive and assertive but not like in New York where it's a 24 hour non-stop pace," Pounds said.

CSUSB's location wasn't the only thing that drew Pounds to the University. "The University is new and still growing. The attitudes of the faculty and staff are enthusiastic for the future prospects of the school," he said. "Rutgers tends to be old and staid with no real direction."

Making the move this summer to California was difficult for Pounds, who had some family concerns. His mother was in the hospital and he was concerned for her recovery. He spent most of the summer at home with his family in Baltimore, before coming directly to California just before the Fall Quarter started.

Pounds plans to make his stay at CSUSB a long one, helping to contribute to the ever-expanding Communication Department. "I want to contribute to it's growth input," he stated.

Dr. Fred Jandt, Chairman of the Department of Communication, said that Pounds has a broad practical background in media and computers. He has had several published works and has produced and directed some TV shows.

"He has a unique talent for looking at the diversity in the communication field," Jandt said, adding that "he will be an asset in seeing future trends in the field."

Pounds has just made a proposal to the state which would allow him to explore new technology in communication. He is very interested in computer usage in the classroom.

"Graphics and outlining are basic now, but there are other areas that interest me as well," he noted. "Conveying video and audio onto computer are other areas to be explored and researched."

The Communication Department has plans to expand more in the area of film and this is one of Pounds' specialties. When the department hires a new professor, they look for professional experience as well as academic knowledge. Pounds definitely has both.

"He has been a delight to have in the department and has great potential," Jandt said.

During the Fall Quarter, Pounds taught "Communication Theories and Systems," as well as topics in professional writing. He is also assisting in directing the newly developed radio station on campus, KSSB. This quarter he is instructing classes in radio TV, oral communication, theories and systems and film as communication.

He feels that his colleagues have been very helpful and warm. "It's been quite different from the aloofness you can find in a large institution," he said.

Pounds feels that the best of his students here compare to the best of his students at Rutgers. He is enjoying the chance to teach older students here; they bring maturity to the classroom.

He does miss some things about New York, however. The big city is what he misses the most. "The big city is a critical mass, it has density," he said, "You can turn the corner and find a newswstand or a food stand."

Study in Another Country

Are you interested in learning first-hand about another country while working toward your degree? Then CSUSB's "Study Overseas" program under the direction of Dr. Richard Rowland may be for you.

Rowland's personal interest in international education makes him enthusiastic about recruiting students to enter Cal State's international "Study Overseas" program.

Rowland, a professor of geography and international program coordinator here on campus, said, "I try to promote international education because the more opportunity students get to have exposure to the outside world, the greater their horizons become."

The "Study Overseas" program is a perfect way to do just that, because it has 16 countries to choose from: Australia, Brazil, Canada, France, Germany, Israel, Italy, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Quebec, and Taiwan, Republic of China.

The program enables someone to study a whole academic year in the country of their choice and then transfer those units earned to Cal State.

But besides that, it gives them a new perspective and greater understanding of the world. It makes one aware of how other people from other countries perceive us. It opens their eyes to new ideas and new concepts.

Rowland said that the overall response from the students is it's the best experience of their whole life. He admitted he would have liked to have studied overseas, but there were no programs like this when he was in school.

He hopes the program keeps growing, and that other countries can soon be included.

Students Helped by Mentors

Cal State students who might encounter academic difficulty now have an educational support system through the auspices of the Mentor Program.

The program is targeted at new, underrepresented students, which consist of minorities, freshmen, transfer students with a low GPA, and students with academic background is low, especially in terms of college preparatory classes.

Mentors, who are Cal State faculty and staff, serve as role models, provide information and access to services, and facilitate a relationship between students and the university. Mentors must meet with students a minimum of once per quarter, but must meet much more, about eight to ten times during the year, according to Raul Valenzuela, project coordinator.

The program is an extension of a pilot project, The Summer Transition Enrichment Program, which was under the supervision of EOP director Walter Hawkins.

Valenzuela says the program is getting underway for this year, and he is in the process of mailing out mentor assignments. Anyone interested in becoming involved in the program should contact Valenzuela at extension 7395 or go by the EOP office for more information.

Nursing Program Offers Electives

CSUSB offers a two-year program of upper-division classes toward a bachelor of science degree through the Department of Nursing. This program has just been re-accredited for another eight years through the National League for Nursing.

Most students enrolled in the program have come from a community college and received an A.A. in nursing and are registered nurses. Although the students are registered nurses, it's important to get a B.S. because of the competition in nursing. It is also becoming required nationally in many hospitals.

About 130 to 140 students are enrolled in the program. Many are part-time students and work in the nursing field. Most have a good hospital background. The program is directed toward theory and clinical work because of this, according to Dr. Janice M. Layton, chairperson of the Department of Nursing.

"We emphasize health history and community health mostly," she said. "There are several different health agencies around town and the surrounding area that students can work in after graduation."

Health assessment is part of the program's focus also. At the end of the quarter, usually the last three weeks, students from the program give free health exams at the school.

Dr. Layton would like to see more students take some nursing classes as electives. "Most classes consist of nurses only," she said. "It would be interesting to get non-majors in classes such as our aging class."

Biology and chemistry majors might find it interesting to take a class in a different major that would give them credit in their major. The aging course, Dr. Layton mentioned, is the study of the changes which occur in the aging person.

"This would be a good course for people who plan to work in the field of gerontology, or any student for that matter, because it's a subject that touches us all personally," she said.

Taking different courses would provide variety to chemistry or biology majors who need similar courses to fill requirements toward their degree.
 Secondary Smoke Endangers Non-Smokers

by Sunnie Bell

I dedicate this column to my precious friend Helen Washko, who died in 1984 of cancer of the lung. She smoked to the end, staying at home until the day she died. I begged for pain medicine for her from my own doctor and I am thankful that I could get little bit to see her through. While she should have been on morphine for the pain, she took only mild codeine pills. -courage was astounding. I roze with her on the last day as she lay in an ambulance on the way to the hospital. She was unwilling to go, but unable anymore to argue against the decision of her husband. She looked at me with eyes opaque from suffering and spoke an airless sentence. There was no sound, but I could read her lips. She said, "I am finished."

According to the journal Cancer Research, tobacco smoke causes 30-40% of all cancer deaths, and the majority of deaths from lung cancer. In spite of advances in cancer treatment in general, the five year survival rate for lung cancer victims remains less than 10%. You are familiar with the physical effects of the many ingredients of tobacco smoke...if not, just read the warnings on the sides of the packages. Here are a few which I took out of the advertisements from one magazine: "Smoking causes lung cancer." "Smoking by pregnant women may complicate pregnancy." "Smoking by women...either figuratively or literally. Not only that, but the smokers have probably stopped reading by now.

The movement that is having the biggest effect is among non-smokers' right to clean air. Cigarette smoke as an atmospheric pollutant is high on the chart right now because there is clear indication that secondary smoke (that left in the air from smokers' exhalation and from sidestream flow—that which is not inhaled but streams out of the cigarette while it's at rest) is highly dangerous. Sidestream smoke actually contains twice the toxins of mainstream smoke (that which is inhaled directly through the cigarette). This is because filters take out a portion of the toxins, concentrating them in the remaining cigarette butt from which they burn off into the atmosphere. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop now reports that secondary smoke puts non-smokers at high risk of getting lung cancer...there are also studies going on to investigate the relation of leukemia and lymphomas to sidestream smoke.

There are many ideas in the "wind" to help control the dangers of smoking for both current smokers and non-smokers: The American Association for Cancer Research proposes the following:

1. Legislation against cigarette advertising and promotion. (The American Cancer Society also asks for a ban on tobacco company sponsorship of sports and cultural events).
2. Reduced availability of cigarettes.
3. Legislation restricting smoking in all public places (I hereby make a plea to my college president to include the hallowed halls of the university who has the power to restrict smoking from our hallways to some special rooms where smokers can exercise their freedom while the rest of us exercise our lungs).

A story appearing in Kaleidoscope January 28 erroneously indicated that Dr. Raymond Torres-Santos of the music department arranged music for Donna Summer. Torres-Santos has played as a musician for Ms. Summer but has not arranged any music for her. While the story highlighted his background and interest in contemporary music, Torres-Santos has also an extensive background and continued interests in classical music.

Student Leaders Prepare to Fight proposed Education cuts

Grants Cuts, Controversial Income-Contingent Loan Program Targeted

Washington, D.C. (NSNS) - At least two national student organizations are taking action to prevent passage of a 46 percent slash in federal student aid requested by President Reagan in his Jan. 5 budget proposal. The United States Student Association and the National Student Roundtable announced that they are sponsoring nationwide campaigns to encourage students to write or call their members of Congress in opposition to the proposed cuts. They also set dates in March for Student Lobby Days during which students will travel to Washington, D.C. to meet directly with legislators.

"It's pretty hard to believe that they would have the guts to propose this kind of budget again," says NSR Associate Director Jim Schmidt. "We are shocked at the scope of these cuts." USSA Legislative Director Mary Preston adds, "The administration is trying to absolve government of its responsibility to provide equal access to education." Among the proposals targeted for action are:

- A two-thirds cut in funding for the federally subsidized Guaranteed Student Loan program, from $3 billion to $1 billion. GSLs are "indispensable to the majority of students," says Schmidt. "For most of them, going to college is contingent upon getting one."

- A complete phase-out of the federally subsidized National Direct Student Loan and work-study programs, moves which would cause the loss of jobs and tuition for needy students, according to Preston.

- A request for $600 million to expand the "Income-Contingent Loan" program now being tested at ten colleges around the country. The ICL program, which raises borrowing limits while eliminating federally subsidized interest rates, is in Schmidt's view "a highly creative way to have the government invest less in education and make the students pay more."

- A 50% cut in funding for the TRIO program, which provides assistance for low-income and first-generation (those whose parents did not attend college) students to enroll and remain in college. USSA in particular has championed TRIO. "We cannot let the Department of Education neglect this kind of need-based program," says Preston.

Even with a convincing show of student concern and sympathetic Congress, however, student leaders expect an uphill battle to secure government support in the face of the current $176 billion federal deficit. "It's going to take a lot of work from a lot of people," Preston says, "to make sure that we don't turn away from the programs for which there is an established need, and from which the entire country benefits."

In addition, both groups have scheduled major conferences and lobbying days in Washington in March, with each expecting a turnout of several hundred students. NSR members will fire off the opening salvos March 6-10, testifying before House and Senate educational committees and meeting with their delegates. USSA will take its turn March 13-16, with rallies and press conferences planned as well as intensive lobbying.

In the meantime, the student lobbies will work to convince key education policymakers of the need for federal student aid — "educating the education officials," as Schmidt puts it — and study alternative budget proposals. In particular, Preston says USSA will look into the proposal put out each year by the Congressional Black Caucus, which the characterizes as "addressing human needs much more than that of the President."
