Abzug Speaks At CSUSB

Bella Abzug, noted feminist and New York politician, will talk about "Political Power for American Women" at 8 p.m., Tuesday, March 3 in the Upper Commons at CSUSB.

Ticket information is available through the Cal State Student Life Office at (714) 887-7407.

Bella Abzug, lawyer, peace activist, TV commentator and former three-term Congresswoman, has been voted in many polls as one of the most popular women in the United States, and, according to a Gallup Poll, "one of the twenty most influential women in the world."

She helped to organize the women's vote credited with providing the winning margin in New York governor Mario Cuomo's 1982 election. In 1982, she also directed a six-state pilot project of WOMEN-USA to increase women's registration and voting turnout.

Bella Abzug is a founder of the National Women's Political Caucus and a member of NOW and other women's organizations. Currently, she is president of WOMEN-USA, a new national activist group designed to reach out to grass roots women who want to identify with the women's movement goals of equality and economic justice.

Bella Abzug was born in the Bronx in 1920 - the year American women won the right to vote. "Sometimes I am asked when I became a feminist," says Bella Abzug, "and I usually say, the day I was born."

The atmosphere in Bella Abzug's home was conducive to the forming of an independent spirit. Her father, Emanuel Savitsky, a Russian Jewish immigrant, called his butcher shop, "The Live and Let Live Meat Market," in keeping with his philosophy. A gentle man, he abhorred war, loved music and was an important influence in shaping Bella's values. He died when she was 13, in the midst of the Depression. Bella's mother, Ester Savitsky, then took over the support of her two daughters. She believed in education for women and encouraged her daughters to pursue any profession to which they aspired. No goal was unattainable, in her view. When Bella won the primary on first running for Congress, her mother said, "Well, Bella, congratulations. Let's hope next time it will be for President."

By the time Bella Abzug graduated from high school, she knew that she wanted to be a lawyer. She went on to Hunter College, ran for class president in her first year and later was elected president of the entire student body of 4000. After completing Hunter Law School, but was told that "we take no females." She then got a scholarship to Columbia University, where she became editor of the Law Review and obtained her LLb. degree in 1947. She specialized in labor law, and civil rights and civil liberties cases, and also became prominent in Democratic reform politics and the women's movement. An active opponent of McCarthyism, she defended people accused of subversive activities by the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy. Her first civil rights case was the defense of William McGee, a young Mississippi black man convicted of raping a white woman and sentenced to death - a case which drew world-wide attention.

In 1961, when the Soviet Union and the United States resumed nuclear testing, she helped to found Women Strike for Peace. As its national legislative representative throughout the 1960's, she led lobbies and mass demonstrations to Washington on behalf of the nuclear test ban, disarmament and an immediate end to the war in Vietnam.

Comedy Night
by Sharma Wilson

The laughs were non-stop when three L.A. comedians Steve Greenstein, Tim Jones, and Howie Gold, did stand-up routines Thursday night at Comedy Night in the upper commons. Greenstein, who performed first, acted as M.C. of the program and introduced the other performers. Originally from New York, he humorously highlighted the differences between his old home town and L.A., where he now performs. He also incorporated a violin and a harmonica into his act which showcased his talent all the more. Next was Tim Jones, whose routine made fun of everything from drugs and beer to lesbianism. The theme of drug and alcohol abuse was also recurrent in Howie Gold's routine, and while the inferences were hilarious, subtle messages of stay away from drugs and alcohol were there. A technique of all three comedians was audience participation. This showed their skill at improvisation.

The evening was both crazy and fun for all.

To The

EDITOR

Letter to the Editor:

Mr. Koch's commentary, "Alternative Employment" (Feb. "Alternative Employment" (February 11) has provided fertile ground for presenting a brief treatise on career development and the role higher education plays in it.

Mr. Koch seems to believe his college education is his career path; either he goes to school or he becomes a journeyman. Would he have us assume those in the building trades who have a college education have wasted their time? Could a college education possibly enhance a carpenter's life and career? We in the Career Development Center and Office of Student Life believe so. Why not do both Mr. Koch?

An education will have a constructive impact on all areas of one's life—not only on one's job or income level. A career path incorporates all aspects of living—not simply the means of earning a wage.

Education provides skills for oral and written communication and the ability to distinguish fact from judgment (what about your comment that the real reason for an education is that it provides only job preparation...could this be a judgment stated as fact?). Education provides an appreciation for the arts, the humanities, and cultural differences (we won't touch the comment on women and husbands!), and a host of other qualities which make us unique and productive individuals.

In short, one's education will certainly enhance one's career, but that enhancement is only a side benefit for what it will do for you as a fulfilled and growing person.

Come on in Mr. Koch Talk to us. We're sold on the idea that your college education could make you a better construction journeyman. Are you?

Sincerely,

Jack Dexter, Ed Schneiderhan, and Lynn Moss, Career Development Center and Randy Harrell, Office of Student Life

Judicial Committee Returns

Dear Student Body of CSUSB,

This letter is to inform you that after three years of non-existance, the Judicial Review Committee of CSUSB is alive and well. The purpose of the Judicial Review Committee is much the same as the Supreme Court of the United States. If you feel that a decision or policy enacted by the Associated Students has wronged you in one way or another, visit the AS office and obtain the necessary forms to start the process. Here are the general guidelines to test to see if you have a case or not:

1. Does the plaintiff(s) have standing to sue? That is, is or was the plaintiff a party to an action or situation in which he is or was adversely affected?
2. Does the damaging action or policy enacted by the Associated Students involve a point of law which is in the jurisdiction of the Associated Students Board of Directors to render a decision and which the board can offer a remedy or Judicial relief?

If you can answer "yes" to these questions then the Judicial Review Committee would like to help you.

Minorities Question
Task Force Attitudes

To the Editor:

On February 17, a group of Black, Chicano and other Hispanic students attended an open meeting sponsored by the General Education Task Force. This committee is in the process of revising the General Education requirements. The students were opposing Chicano courses that have always been multi-ethnic course as part of the General Education package. These courses, taught principally by elitist professors, tend to perpetuate racial and ethnic stereotypes and thereby insult minorities.

After we had registered our protest, Professor Elliot Barkan, the task Force Chair, replied: "I don't understand why you people don't support this proposal since it is in your interest." We replied that "you people" is hardly an appropriate manner to address individuals, and that he obviously thought that all minorities think alike. We replied that we wanted to be considered as individuals, not members of groups, racial or otherwise. Barkan's response was that all minorities think the same. Furthermore, Barkan refused to accept a petition we had prepared opposing the required course. His response was that all minorities should support this requirement, and implied that it was not necessary to forebear our complaint. We would like to know how the professor knew what all minorities should or should not do or think? This is the very stereotyping we have come to expect from elitist professors who only pretend to be interested in minorities, but have an entirely different ideological agenda to push. We are disgusted that such a person should occupy such a position of prominence in the faculty at Cal State.

We encourage students to attend future Task Force meetings to protest this authoritarian attempt on the part of the faculty to force students to take this worthless course on minorities. It may serve as an elective in General Education, but, like the Black and Chicano courses that have always been a part of the curriculum, it should not be required.

To the Editor:

In these times of heightening global tensions, the call for peace becomes more and more prevalent as each day passes. Here in the U.S., our concerns cover a wide spectrum of issues: from oppression-torn South Africa to the U.S.-Soviet Arms Race. But for those who have to live through war on a daily basis, the goal of peace can become a lifetime's work. On Thursday, February 12, we were treated with one such person; Betty Williams, who, along with Mairead Corrigan, was the recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977 for her part in the Irish peace crusade; which is attempting to bring a semblance of civilization to an area of the world that has been ripping itself apart for some 800 years now.

Although her speech was both highly informative and passionate, Mrs. Williams lost track of her purpose as time progressed. She fell into a lengthy discussion of her present activities to bring help to the starving Third-World nations we read often about. Though highly commendable, it took considerable attention away from the main topic. She seemed almost to say: "...well things are moving right along in northern Ireland now, so let's go on to bigger and better things." Next came remarks by three unrelated and highly irrelevant panelists who were obviously chosen at the last minute in order to accommodate the requirements of a panel discussion group.

Though highly grateful for the opportunity to hear and meet such an extraordinary woman, the main conclusion drawn by myself and my colleagues was that Mrs. Williams should not have strayed from the topic of the presentation—that being the progress of the present peace movement in war-ravaged Ulster (Northern Ireland). And as a final note, a word to the organizers of the presentation: as students, we are reminded time and again of the importance of properly preparing ourselves when writing a paper, taking a test, or giving a speech. This could have been heeded by those who obviously threw together, at last minute, the presentation witnessed that evening.

To the Editor:

The Moral Majority: An End of Freedom?

To the Editor:

Will the freedoms of speech, press and assembly ultimately be trampled under the boot of the minority who feel that their morals are sacrosanct? In the not too distant past, in the name of the preservation of freedom, numerous Asian Americans were incarcerated for the duration of a war. Many German Americans were queried and watched closely to ascertain if sympathies toward their "homeland" existed. Children in these bilingual families were often humiliated in front of their classmates by being made to take the saber by this campus. In her attempt to defend the purpose of the presentation, she felt the onslaught of prejudice in the form of unfeigned shock and chagrin at the fact that she was inquiring concerning the whereabouts of the meeting. The advisor asked how I came to know about the presentation. I stated that I had read one of the fliers on the bulletin board. I was appalled when the members indicated that numerous fliers had been removed recently and others defaced by prejudicial and lewd comments.

How can we, members of this edifice of higher education, react in this manner? As John Stuart Mill, the great 19th century philosopher, once stated: whenever an individual is despotic...whether it professes to be enforcing the will of God or the injunctions of men. Are we in the 20th century technologically and yet, in the dark ages socially? Do we still fear that which is different from us? Will our fear bind us so tightly that social tyranny will choke out our individual liberties?

Black History Month:
Larry Carroll Speaks
by Sharna Wilson

In celebration of Black History Month, the third 7 newcomer to CSU, Larry Carroll spoke on "Black Present, Black Future" February 14 at 8p.m. in the Recital Hall here at Cal State.

The evening opened with Natalie Arterbery, accompanied by Greg Thomas, singing the Black National Anthem followed by an introduction by Dr. Michael Pounds, new Associate Professor of Music.

In his opening statements, Carroll expressed his views about the 150-year celebration of blackness. "Trying to put 6,000 years of African history into one month, February, the shortest month of the year, is ludicrous. Carroll's message, which reported the black condition in Africa, as well as the United States, was very enlightening.

In the United States, Carroll feels that the momentum of the black movement will continue, and as long as the accurate time because, "for the first time we occupy positions of power and influence." Although Carroll sees no end to racism, he feels that the effort to keep it under control is worth it.

As for Africa, Carroll talked on the obvious oppression of the black people and he suggested that black Americans can help their distant kinsmen overcome the racism of South Africa and other countries. How? Economically. Ghana has more diamonds and Niger has more Uranium than South Africa could ever have. They have the resources and we Black Americans have the management. Doesn't that sound like the basis of a partnership to you?"

Carroll, a writer and reporter for some 15 years, was clad in the traditional dress of an Egyptian while giving his speech. This was to reiterate his admonishment of Black Americans to familiarize themselves with Africa and its history, which, in essence, is the history of the Black American.

Baha'i Club To Sponsor Discussion
"Blackness - A Barrier To World Peace" is the topic for an open discussion Tuesday, March 7 at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Room B. The public is invited.

The discussion, sponsored by the CSUSB Baha' Club, will focus on the humanity of the races of mankind in the common goal of World Peace. Baha'i believe that management, to control the nations to war no more can and will not last unless man can eradicate racism, which is, and the General House of Justice of the Baha'i Faith, "one of (our) most baneful and persistent evils."

BSU Sponsors
Music Groups
by Eric T. Grunewald

The groups Divine Intervention and X-pres-sion played Sunday night, at 7:30, in the Recital Hall in recognition of Black History Month. The Concert was to expose the groups and to help raise funds for the BSU.

The groups are from San Bernardino, and play a mixture of soul, pop, and funk music. The Recital Hall was nearly full, and the audience enjoyed the music. According to Thornton, "Everybody is welcome at these functions. It is not just for blacks. It is a time to come and learn about another culture."

The Black History Month, events and activities will continue on scheduled days for the rest of this month.

"Meet the Candidates"
To Be Held Feb. 25

The Cal State's Organization for College Women, Young Democrats and Young Republicans Clubs will be presenting a "Meet the Candidates Evening" on February 25, Wednesday, from 7:30 to 9:00 p.m., in the Upper Commons. Candidates running for office in the city of San Bernardino will be available for questions and comments from the voters. For info: Ann Preucil (714) 682-3634 or Frank Smalley at 868-4245.

CSU Fresno Sponsors
Research Competition

Interested students need to find a faculty sponsor who will then request a registration form from the office of the Associate Dean, Graduate Programs. The CSUSB nominees will be selected based upon a paper (not longer than 20 pages, double spaced, 500 word abstract of it due in AD-182 (the office of the Associate Dean, Graduate Programs) on Thursday, March 5. Final judgments will be based on their presentation held during the week of March 11.

All expenses of each candidate will be paid.

The nominees will be selected by a committee created by the Faculty Senate.

Preucil Family To Perform Feb. 28

The fourth concert in the Intimate Performances Series will be presented on Saturday evening, at 7:30 in the Recital Hall of the Creative Arts Building here on campus. The Preucil Family Players will present an evening of music for string instruments. They bring a new dimension to ensemble playing. Violinist and father, William Sr., is joined by family members Doris, William Jr. (the Concertmaster of the Atlantic Symphony) and romance on the cello and Anne on the piano to present an evening of varied and delightful music.

Commenting on their 1980 Carnegie Hall debut the New York Times wrote: "The family's argentic rapport transcends the age differential, they treat one another as artists equal—was itself a pleasure to observe."

In addition to the Saturday evening concert the group will be performing Sunday, March 5 at 11:00 a.m. in the Student Union. This is a great day because they will present two children's concerts, one at 10:00 a.m. and one at 1:00 p.m. For more information, contact faculty advisor Dr. Craig Henderson, Dean of Students Office, 887-7524.

Cal-Staters Talk Tennis

by Kim Schnepp

It's warming up outside once again and that means tennis season is starting. This year CSUSB mens tennis team has four returning players from last year. Three of these players are Rich Blackey, Tim Streck and Mike Catalano. The remaining player who was on the team the first year CSUSB began the tennis program was Tim Blackey.

Rich Blackey is a graduate of Eisenhower High School. He has been playing tennis for nine years. Two of those years he's played in a league. He has also done some tournament playing. During high school he was ranked number 1 on the Citrus Belt League. He won the championship. He has also done some singles playing. During high school he was ranked 5th in the nation in doubles.

Blackey won the most valuable player award and most improved player award.

Although, someone had to promote a legitimate wrestling event by using "professional" wrestlers. We are not going to do that. We want to conduct a real intramural tournament. The season is off to a good start and we have a chance to do the best," Blackey said.

"We're looking forward to a good season this year. Up till now we've been average, but we're ready to break out of our shell," Catalano said, adding "After all we're not flamboyant, we're just regular guys."
Injury Sidelines Athlete

by Kim Schnepf

The newest sport on campus this year is baseball. The team is off to a good start with two wins and two losses. Tom Lescher, outfielder for the team, hasn't been as lucky however. Four days before the season started he tore ligaments in his ankle diving for a ball in practice.

Lescher has been playing baseball "since I was old enough to hold a bat," he said. He started in little league when he was eight. A graduate from Redlands High School, Lescher had a successful senior year which led him directly in to playing for UCR his Freshman year in college. An injury kept him out for the remainder of the season.

"I basically just concentrated on school after this, which is important to me," Lescher said. He then transferred to CSUSB his sophomore year.

After a two and a half year absence, during which time he didn't even pick up a baseball, Lescher's back in the same again.

"I hadn't planned on playing baseball here, as a matter of fact I missed the first couple of days of practice," he said.

Ski Slalom on March 3rd

The Intramural Ski Slalom will be on Tuesday, March 3rd, at Goddine Ski Area in Big Bear. Participants must purchase their own lift tickets and register for the race on "The Deck," between 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. For those who buy a full day ($23.00) lift ticket, a "premium" prize will be included. Each skier gets two starts, with the best single time determining the winner. T-Shirts will be awarded for Men's Open, Men's Novice, Women's Open and Women's Novice, providing there are at least five entries in each category. All participants are eligible to win a door prize, donated by San Bernardino Ski & Sport. For more information, call the Recreational Sports Office, 887-7416.

Leverenz an Asset to Women's Tennis

by Eric T. Grunewald

The CSUSB women's tennis season has started, and for Kelly Leverenz that means a second collegiate tennis season. Leverenz comes to CSUSB from Molalla, Oregon. She chose to come to school here because of the friendly people and the Southern California weather. When Leverenz first came here, she was not planning to play tennis. "I started hitting the ball around with some of my friends, they suggested I try out for the tennis team," she said.

Tennis is not a new sport for Leverenz, she has been playing for six years. "I started playing Volleyball, but after taking a tennis class I decided tennis was for me," she said. Leverenz played one year of tennis on the junior varsity team in high school, and three years on the varsity team.

The CSUSB women's tennis team plays in the NCAA Division three league, but this year, they will play some Division two teams. The current team record is 2-1, while Leverenz's record for both doubles and singles is 3-1.

When in a tennis match, Leverenz concentrates most on her serve. "You can't win if you don't have a good serve, it affects all your other shots," she said. "My strongest stroke is the volley, while my weakest is my forehand," Leverenz stated.

After graduating from college, Leverenz Wants to work in the Los Angeles area in advertising. One of her favorite things about playing tennis for CSUSB is the team members. "I really enjoy all the people on the team," she said.
National Condom Week: Promoting "Safe Sex"

by Kim Schnepf

Were you surprised to see a group of people handing out condoms in front of the library last week? Did you think maybe it was a fraternity prank? It wasn’t, it was something that was happening at campuses all over the United States for National Condom Week.

CSUSB joined in the educational effort along with several other universities to promote the use of condoms as a prevention against A.I.D.S., acquired immune deficiency system syndrome. Information packets containing an A.I.D.S. pamphlet and a condom were distributed last week as part of this program.

The project was co-sponsored by the on going AIDS Advisory Committee on campus and the Inland AIDS Project. The committee on campus was appointed by Dr. Evans, Dr. Cindy Paxton, assistant professor of health science, is co-chairman of the committee with Dr. Savage, director of the Student Health Center.

The major goal of condom week was to make students aware that A.I.D.S. isn’t only contracted through homosexuals and IV use. Inland AIDS Project provides:
- Speakers on a variety of subjects relating to AIDS
- Opportunities for citizens to become volunteers

In this health crisis, there are needs for positive social growth. We must give emotional and financial support to those who have or are at risk of A.I.D.S., and foster a community network to provide a supportive atmosphere.

WE ARE COMMITTED TO MAKING A DIFFERENCE!

QUITTING. IT COULD BE THE TEST OF YOUR LIFE.
Have you ever wondered what people mean when they say that a city or a country has been 'westernized'? Webster's Dictionary says that to 'westernize' means to make something 'western' in its characteristics, habits, ideas, etc. If that's the case, then what is western? Webster's states that 'western' is somewhere in the western hemisphere of the globe, with the United States being the focus of the west.

If Webster's definition of westernization is fact, then I have seen the city/country that they based their definition on: Hong Kong. I was lucky enough to visit this city over New Year's with a small tour group from CSUSB. This large city, located in the southern portion of China and on the South China Sea, is the perfect model for other cities or countries around the world which want to appear like an American city.

Hong Kong has all of the characteristics of a western city. It is commercialized and has modern architecture, clothing, education, entertainment, foods and transportation. However, Hong Kong still contains remnants of its past: people living on boats. Hong Kong, the city which England is leasing from the People's Republic of China until 1997, has one major difference from many other western cities: its streets are immaculate. In this small city which houses over 5.7 million residents, the streets are free of litter. Because of the small area, however, the skies are filled with pollution.

The first two things I noticed when flying into Hong Kong were its many tall buildings and the smog. "No different than a Los Angeles or a New York City," I thought. When I looked closer, however, things were much different.

To begin with, the tall buildings (mostly apartment complexes) looked alike. They were the same height and had the same appearance. It was as if these buildings were built at the same time, a skyscraper version of tract housing.

The majority of Hong Kong's residents live in these buildings. On the average, a family of three to seven people occupy an apartment of 300 to 500 square feet in size. It brought a few thoughts to my mind when thinking of so many people living in so many buildings that look alike. For one, I
The Chronicle February 25, 1987

We ate at Jumbo, a multi-flowered construction valued at over $10 million. The high value of this restaurant is probably due to the layers of gold that highlight the dining room ceilings. At Jumbo, which contains identical dining rooms on each side, we ate Chinese specialties such as Peking Duck. Our seven person group also took a group photograph on a royal throne that was located at the end of the dining room for tourists to photograph.

To reach Jumbo, we took a ferry boat across from Hong Kong Island. Ferry boats are just one of the many forms of transportation that exist in Hong Kong. People may also travel on the water by means of speedboats, hydrofoils, jetties and steamships to name a few. You can also travel by airplane, train, bus and of course, automobile. However, Hong Kong roads are on the British driving system, so they drive on the ‘wrong’ side of the road.

When we were traveling on the road, we saw a few different things. We found the British buses carrying people. The majority of the automobiles we saw were Japanese-made and there were few Mercedes and Rolls Royces.

The registration of these automobiles is a simple process, however. Some people will pay up to $500,000 to obtain a certain lucky license plate number for their cars. These numbers are owned for the remainder of the car owner’s life.

Obtaining a driver’s license in Hong Kong is also a troublesome task. Prospective drivers must go to driver’s school for 15 to 20 hours (at $10 per hour) before taking the test. Many people fail the test a couple of times before they become licensed drivers and when they do, they pay $3 (United States) for a gallon of gas to keep their vehicles going.

Another important facet of Hong Kong is its educational system. The government pays for the first nine years of a child’s education—through the first part of secondary school. If parents want to send their children to a college preparatory school (high school) and then to a university, they must pay the expenses. There are two universities in Hong Kong—Hong Kong University and China University.

There is also a great deal of bars and nightly entertainment for students and tourists to hang out in. The majority of the people I met in bars and discotheques were students from Hong Kong’s high schools and universities. These students stay out until 2 a.m. or 3 a.m. on weeknights and after the students go home, the city remains lifeless until 7 a.m.

Besides disco and bars, people can go watch a movie (current shows what’s in the U.S.) or listen to their ‘hi-tech’ stereo or watch their hi-tech television and VCR’s. All of the brand names such as Sony, Panasonic, Sanyo and Hitachi are available in Hong Kong’s shopping malls.

Hong Kong: The people living on boats in Aberdeen

A week before we arrived in Hong Kong, many of the wooden boats in Aberdeen were destroyed by fire. No deaths were reported, however, over 1,700 people were left homeless.

The area is still a big money-maker. The Hong Kong government stated that they are not going to change Hong Kong when they assume jurisdiction in 1997.
Dr. Easton: A New Twist To
A Diophantine Approximation

By Sharna Wilson

"It's hard to teach somebody something you think is really neat and have them have the attitude that it's a bunch of crap," he said.

On the personal side, Easton is more like he appears to be in mathematics. He is coolly at ease and at home in his new surroundings.

Easton, 29, is tall, slender, blond-haired and blue-eyed. He runs, swims, and likes the outdoors. He travels, loves hockey and baseball. So how did a man interested in sports get involved in mathematics?

Although he is not married, he does have a girlfriend, Ulrike, who is still in Canada, finishing a master's degree in electrical engineering. She is the motivation behind a German course he is taking, since she and her parents both speak the language. He likes to read, mainly history and detective stories, and is meeting new people and getting to know his surroundings.

Easton, who lives in San Bernardino, likes it here because it's different. One difference that amazed him, however, was the traffic.

"I've never seen so many cars in my life," he said. "I've been to L.A. in rush hour." Easton seems to be getting along well. Although he wouldn't be called shy, he has a reservation and manner of speaking that makes him quite interesting. When you first see him he looks like his new office he said.

J ust by looking at him, one would never suspect he'd be interested in mathematical "diophantine approximation." As a matter of fact, it would be much easier to picture him lying on a beach, involved in sports, or doing something other than teaching Cal State students pre-calculous and number theory. Yet David C. Easton, new associate professor of mathematics, is as intellectual as he is athletic.

"I just sort of fell into it, I was always good at math and I like learning," his bachelor's, master's and a doctorate in mathematics he was ready for a change. So why here, out of all places in the United States? Mainly because of the weather. Using a publication issued by the American Math Society that lists all jobs available in North America, Easton found there were far too many openings, so to narrow down his choices he decided to apply only to places where it was warm.

"I don't like the snow, but I love it when it's sunny and clear," he said. "It's great."

Now that he's here, Easton is settling into life at Cal State, and is busy teaching mathematics courses.

Scheduling: 'A Little Shop of Horrors'

By Sue Barcus

Even with computerization changes, scheduling has always been the thorn in the side of college students throughout California. Many times a student will need two different classes that have the same schedule.

Often with classes being offered infrequently, because of low demand or unavailability of instructors, the student can face a wait of up to a year before it is offered again.

It is difficult for the student and frustrating for the college. Lack of department funds preclude offering a class during the day and at night.

The problem is funding and available space. Looking for options that ease overcrowding, within the time constraints given, and student scheduling dilemmas should always be first in priorities.

Students must be more willing and flexible in their demands. The fact that most people want classes from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and at 6 p.m. according to Dr. Jerrold Pritchard, associate vice-president for academic affairs, is understandable but unrealistic.

Students can help by checking with their particular department to keep abreast of what will be offered, when, and to plan as far ahead as possible.

Schools will never come up with unlimited finances. These problems will remain, and only by planning and diligence by both students and staff will any progress be made.

The schools must offer comprehensive information and the students must act on that information.

Speaking His Peace

by John Cloud

As 1986 came to its bitter end, we see the music/ radio scene become seemingly better and better. This may possibly provide a ray of hope in the future for those of us who appreciate good music. As 1987 arrived, most wise and "self righteous" radio station managers and music critics rack their memories and fervently assemble their synopsis of what was considered the best and worst of the 1986 music year. Since I am no exception to this tradition, I will without further ado present my considerations for the top best albums, and singles of 1986; the worst of 1986; and the artist that I will (and everyone else should) look forward to hearing more of in 1987.

CSUSB Presidents Discuss Issues At Recent Forum

by Linda Whitney

University President Anthony Evans and Associated Students President, Penni Overstreet, made comments and fielded audience questions during the Presidential Forum held in the Student Union on February 11th.

After an introduction by Associated Students Vice-President, Steve Hekman, Dr. Evans opened the forum with his comments on the university. Evans said he has "never felt more on the edge of your age." He stated the University President, Steve Hekman, Dr. Evans said he has 'never felt more

“I like it. It's the first office I've ever had that has windows. I have a computer terminal. It's great. I'm a somebody,”

Impressed by his resume and letters of recommendation, the math department, chaired by Bob Stein, decided to talk to Easton about the job. They sent J. Paul Vicknair, associate professor of mathematics, to the winter meetings of the American Math Society which met in New Orleans. Easton was brought back to Cal State where he gave a one-hour seminar on his thesis work. The department, as a whole, decided they liked Easton, and hired him.

“He has an energetic, upbeat attitude and he really seems to enjoy life,” says Stein.

Although it had some importance, Easton's specialization was not a prerequisite for employment.

“When we see a good person,” says Stein, “we find a way to fit them in.”

Survival Skills

George Gibbs, CSUSB SAIL counselor, has found that study skills rarely help if a student has major difficulty in reading comprehension. Reading comprehension, he feels is a basic necessity in college and without that skill, a student won't get very far.

Those skills can be learned, he stressed. “If a student is really motivated and has average ability, he can survive in college. Motivation is the key factor,” said Gibbs.

Although most college settings tend to encourage the student to strive for the top—the “4.0 grade point average”—Gibbs believes that students should also learn to be realistic, a trait that he feels is important for all of their life.

“Students need to know the range of their abilities—their highest and their lowest,” said Gibbs. “It’s an individual issue. A student can’t compare their best with someone else’s best. If you set your goals too high, you set yourself up to fail,” he added.

Gibbs advises to students is to learn something extra in college. “If you haven’t learned your limitations in college you’ve probably missed half of what you should have learned,” he said.
Black Enrollment Drops

by Linda Whitney

The United States of America has been called a "melting pot." It is a country in which people of many different races, cultures, and beliefs came to live to enjoy freedom in one form or another. However, not everyone was given their right to this new freedom on an equal level. Over the years this has caused problems such as discrimination, segregation, and prejudice to become commonplace in our society. Minorities of many forms must struggle for equality. This struggle exists everywhere, including here at Cal State San Bernardino.

It was reported recently that the black student enrollment percentage at CSUSB has been dropping steadily over the past year. After recent investigation it was discovered that this claim was true. The statistics provided by the school research department show a definite decline in the percentage of black students on campus. Beginning with fall quarter of 1985, the total enrollment was 6,313 with 7% black students. Winter quarter of 1986 showed total enrollment at 6,344 with 6.8% black students. Spring quarter of 1986 showed 6,315 versus 6.6% black students. Finally, the predicted enrollment for winter of 1987 is 7,434 with 5.8% black students. Why are fewer black students attending CSUSB? According to Dr. Jones, President of the Black Faculty and staff organization on campus, the administration, faculty, and staff need to work together and become sensitive to the needs of black students and all students. Jones feels changes need to be made in enrollment recruitment. "The university is not working effectively to recruit black students," said Jones. Ms. Jones' organization meets regularly once a month, more often if necessary to plan events and fundraisers for scholarships. Besides herself, there are eight other black faculty and approximately 62 staff members.

A big part of Ms. Jones' job is advising students. Of the minority students she talks with she says she heard "more complaints of discrimination" in the past year than she has in the past six years. Jones worked on this campus. While the exact complaints are confidential, there are some general similarities. Some students feel they are not being treated fairly by teachers. They feel they are not being treated professionally. Some also feel that their problems are overlooked.

It has been speculated that the decline of black student enrollment in the past quarter might be attributed in part to the controversy ignited by a letter published in the fall of 1986. The letter written by Dr. Evans, President of the university, was controversial among minorities. While Ms. Jones declined to comment on the letter itself, she said that she was "unaware of the impact of the letter on students and that she has "not spoken to anyone who refused to come here because of the letter."

"When asked his opinion on the reason behind the decline, Dr. Evans stated that "more must be done about recruiting black students." Jones stated that the complaints she received are all against administration and faculty. She has not received complaints about clubs or the student body in general. She feels the administration must not forget this purpose. The number one concern of main objective of this campus is to educate." As our forefathers said "with liberty and justice for all."

In 1970, Bella Abzug decided to seek office for the first time and challenged an incumbent Manhattan Congressman who had been in office for 22 years and was considered unbeatable. By running on a platform advocating equal rights for women, aid to the cities and an end to the Vietnam war, she attracted national attention and won a startling upset victory. Her slogan was "This Woman's Place is in the House - the House of Representatives." She was re-elected to Congress in 1972 and 1974.

On her very first day in the House, Bella Abzug offered a resolution to end the war, and before long had become the first in Congress to call for the impeachment of Richard Nixon. Earning a reputation as a shrewd parliamentarian and a prodigious worker, she fought for increased funding for mass transit, seeking - and for the first time winning - the support of rural Congressmen for urban transportation aid. She worked for environmental legislation, harbor clean-up measures, and aid to the elderly and handicapped. She helped expose and held hearings on the anti-Israel Arab economic boycott and authored the first resolution ever passed by the House recognizing New York's demonstrations of support for Soviet Jewry. In her last year in Washington, she produced bills that brought $600 million to New York City.

As chair of the House Subcommittee on Government Information and Individual Rights, she conducted important inquiries into covert and illegal activities of the CIA, FBI, and the Internal Revenue Service and other government agencies. She helped to write and pass the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts and the milestone "Government in the Sunshine" law, which for the first time opened up government agencies to public scrutiny.

While in Congress, Bella Abzug wrote the first law banning discrimination against women in obtaining credit, loans and mortgages, fought for Title IX Equal Opportunity in Education Laws and introduced many other bills to improve the status of women.

In 1976, Bella Abzug became the first woman to run for the United States Senate from New York, finishing less than 1% behind the winner. In 1977, she was appointed with Mayor Ed Koch for the majority of New York. About Ed Koch she comments: "If you read the Sunday women's leader Koch attacked it could be pulled down as single a case of mutual dislike, but he has also made it a point of stoning on other women political leaders, whom he regards as competitors."

In 1977, President Carter named Bella Abzug president of the National Commission for the Observance of International Women's Year, which sponsored the first Federally-funded National Women's Conference in Houston, Texas. The conference, authorized under legislation introduced by Abzug, was called by Time in its 1983 anniversary issue, "a coming of age for American women" and "a watershed in the history and that of the nation."

Bella Abzug was appointed by President Carter co-chair of the National Advisory Committee for Women, but was dismissed on January 12, 1979, after the Committee criticized his decision to cut funds for women's programs and increase military spending. Her firing was followed by the resignation of a majority of Committee members, including heads of many women's organizations, making the event known as "The Friday Night Massacre."

Bella Abzug is author of Bella: Ms. Abzug Goes to Washington and co-author, with Mimi Belker, of Gender G标杆 Bella Abzug's Go to Political Power for American Women, being published by Houghton Mifflin on March 16, 1984.

She lives with her husband of more than thirty years, Martin Abzug, in Manhattan. Martin Abzug is a stockbroker and novelist. They have two daughters, Eve, a sculptor, and Liz, a lawyer.

The presentation of Bella Abzug is co-sponsored by the Intellectual Life and Visiting Scholars Committee, the Associated Students' Special Events Committee and Committee for Clubs. Her appearance was arranged by the Cal State Organization for College Women.

Newman Club: More Than Just A Religious Club

There are numerous clubs and organizations here at CSUSB. There are career-oriented clubs, foreign language clubs, sororities, fraternities, religious organizations and the Newman Club. The Newman Club is a Catholic organization, but it is also much more. It combines spiritual growth with community service and events and fellowship.

The Newman Club meets every Tuesday at 7:00 p.m. in the Newman Room of the Student Union. The Chronicle February 25, 1987
