United We Stand, Divided We Fall

There was an article that appeared in The Press Enterprise on January 15, 1999, which contains the following statement in its introduction:

"The Black community is, in many respects, the living embodiment of the Black experience in America today. It is a community that has grown in size and influence, from the humble beginnings of slavery to the present day. The Black community is diverse, with a rich cultural heritage and a strong sense of identity. It is a community that has faced numerous challenges and overcome them with courage and determination. The Black community is a vital part of the fabric of American society, and its contributions to our nation are immeasurable."
Dear Dr. Levister:

The media is confusing about people dying with measles. We have a 10-year-old daughter. What can we do?

A worried parent

Dear Worried: Measles (Rubella) is a highly infectious viral disease. Humans are the main reservoir and the transmiter of the virus by sneezing and coughing. Individuals are infectious for several days prior to developing the rash and for five days after the rash has developed. The attack rate in susceptible individuals is approximately 90%.

Measles is usually benign but complications can and do occur with pneumonia, encephalitis, ear and brain infections. You can get from measles.

The disease is prevented by vaccinations. The present recommendation is for all children born after 1956 or under 35 check their immunity status.

The disease is affecting those individuals in which the vaccine was not completely effective. Some young pre-school aged children, i.e., the poor, Afro-Americans are being handed hit.

The disease is being spread across the country. Southern cities have the highest incidence, urgent care facilities and physician's offices.

In some cities the minimum age of vaccination has been lowered to 12 months and in some communities to 6 months. Young adults look into your vaccination status. Parents check on your children and if you are not sure give your personal physician or the local public health department.

Dr. Levister was a private praction in San Bernardino and welcomes reader mail concerning their babies or radiates that he is unable to answer individual letters. Your letter will be incorporated into the bulletin as space permits. You may direct your letters to Dr. Levister in care of Voice News, P.O. Box 1581, Riverside, CA 92502 or visit his website at http://www.teve.org/health/levister.

Because of CO-OP Network’s national expansion in the last several years, management decided to “take the pulse” of its key audiences. CO-OP Network commissioned research among Network credit union CEO’s, operational staff and, most importantly, cardholders to determine whether the corporate name and logo clearly define the company as it enters the new decade.

“We discovered that the CO-OP Network name has significant equity—it’s an accepted, familiar marque,” says Robert Rose, CO-OP Network president. “The cooperative structure of our Network, reflected in our name and logo, represents great value to members and is supported by cardholders.

“The consensus on the logo, though, was that it needs to evolve on a course that incorporates CO-OP Network’s expanding technology and national direction and image. Accordingly, now we feel our corporate name and new logo are clearly representative of our membership’s needs and expectations.”

The launch of the new logo coincides with the move of our membership’s needs and corporate headquarters, where CO-OP Network, the country’s largest credit union network and eighth largest electronic funds transfer network, serves 400 credit unions, nearly 5.7 million cardholders and processes approximately 10 million transactions per month.

Lewis, best known for his neurotic brand of comedy in which angst plays a large part, is no stranger to fans of the laugh circuit. He’s been on Saturday Night Live, in The Blaqk Voice News, and featured in such films as Trilogy From Hell, nominated for an ACE Award for best comedy special, and yearly appearances on Comedy Central. He’s been on Late Night with David Letterman over 50 times. Past television credits include starring with Jamie Lee Curtis in the acclaimed special entitled the Odds, co-starring with Jamie Lee Curtis in the acclaimed special entitled the Odds, and yearly appearances on Comedy Central.

The final mix, heats up on five newly-mastered volumes of the Rhythm & Soul series. Legacy, a division of Sony Music, has scheduled all five releases for April.

The five titles include new compilations focusing on the hit-making machinery of the Philadelphia International label (Deep Grooves by MFSA and me and Mrs. Jones. The Best of Billy Paul), two collections from the vaults of Columbia Records (Love Songs by The Emotions and Go Away Little Boy: the Sam & Soul of Marlena Shaw), and the long-awaited restoration of landmark by Johnnie Taylor, his 1976 Columbia album featuring the massive #1 pop and R&B smash “Disco Lady” (the first million-selling single ever certified platinum by the RIAA).

As in previous editions of the Rhythm & Soul series, the new compilations contain fan-friendly Billboard Soul Singles and .Black Studies chart signatures and delve into the artists’ albums and studio productions with well-chosen tracks, informed by specially-commissioned liner notes by respected critics and journalists.

Samuel and Angeline Smith Technology Building Dedication

BY Adelina Castro

During my third trip to Greensboro, North Carolina, for the dedication of the Samuel C. and Angeline D. Smith School of Technology at the North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University, I had the opportunity to appreciate not only the beauty and apparent serenity of the state, but to also observe first hand the love, respect, and deep appreciation the people of Greensboro, North Carolina, have for Dr. and Mrs. Smith, parents of Center, named after their parents.

The School of Technology at the North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University, in Dr. Smith’s capacity as appropriate identifying plaques functioned as an English teacher there. Their parent’s picture from the Dudley High School furniture, donated by Joseph and Angeline Smith, was taken to Smitty and Fort, entrance lobby a portrait of our community Mayor of Greensboro, Mr. Bailey.

The Carolina Mayor of Greensboro was great of the dedication. Of having had the benefit of Angie’s guidance and help throughout her political career. In general, the tributes were no different than those I had heard at the time of their memorial services. Yet, they were equally or perhaps more impressive, considering that years after their deaths, the people of Greensboro continue to keep the Smiths alive in their memories. The Smiths’ significance, yet it was nothing new, was the dedication.

The Smiths’ significance, yet it was nothing new, was the dedication.

During my third trip to Greensboro, North Carolina, for the dedication of the Samuel C. and Angeline D. Smith School of Technology at the North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University, I had the opportunity to appreciate not only the beauty and apparent serenity of the state, but to also observe first hand the love, respect, and deep appreciation the people of Greensboro, North Carolina, have for Dr. and Mrs. Smith, parents of Center, named after their parents.

The School of Technology at the North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University, in Dr. Smith’s capacity as appropriate identifying plaques functioned as an English teacher there. Their parent’s picture from the Dudley High School furniture, donated by Joseph and Angeline Smith, was taken to Smitty and Fort, entrance lobby a portrait of our community Mayor of Greensboro, Mr. Bailey.

The Carolina Mayor of Greensboro was great of the dedication. Of having had the benefit of Angie’s guidance and help throughout her political career. In general, the tributes were no different than those I had heard at the time of their memorial services. Yet, they were equally or perhaps more impressive, considering that years after their deaths, the people of Greensboro continue to keep the Smiths alive in their memories. The Smiths’ significance, yet it was nothing new, was the dedication.
