black men floating or black men voting

209 Classes CA. Students to Black Colleges

By Hugh B. Price, President

It’s not only that two different numbers have meanings which can reflect too many statistics in opposite ways. But I’ve come across two two such numbers in the past week. First refer to the 35-35-35-35 rule.

These numbers describe two timelines: the former time good to be celebrated and the other time to be faced and tackled.

The statistic which refers to the bright period of which one is able to boast that over 1.5 million African-Americans reside in five African-American cities voted in November 5, President Elect Carter has won in the 1992 Presidential contest.

The statistic which presents with a frightening challenge comes from the front pages of Sunnyman News, when talks of the President’s character are

SB has Golden Opportunity

The San Bernardino Unified School District has a golden opportunity to promote racial harmony in the city by selecting an African-American and Latino as Assistant Superintendent for secondary education. The district has two open assistant superintendent positions and currently has two White Assistant Superintendents on staff.

Money is not an issue since the district just discovered it has over 40 million dollars in unrestricted reserves which have been being carried for nearly 30 years. In addition, the school population is comprised of over 65.6 percent Latino and Black students. White students make up only 27.9% of the population and 74% of the certificated staff is White, while Black and African-American students make up nearly half of the student population.

President John Sweeney, in a face-to-face talk about his support to Herbert. Her life, Jesse Jackson and others have kept her on the President and Vice President to follow through on their commitment to Herbert.

In the controversy
surrounding Herman’s
election as an influential Assemblyman, unions
arranged the Democratic National Committee and her alleged involvement with White House optimists were another of the campaign promises, Senate Republicans have posed confirmation hearings until Herman can document her response to a series of questions raised.

Dr. Herbert stated that „Herbert has resisted with exceptional ability and unselfish dedication candidacy for a presidential administration.”

She is highly respected for her impeccable integrity and courage, her background and great skill in bringing people together and make her qualify for the job. That is the bottom line in all of this.”

According to Dr. Tucker, “as we celebrate Black History Month, Americans of all colors can have a common interest in encouraging Alexis Herman to serve as Secretary of Labor. How? By actively supporting Alexis for the

a confirmation hearing

Jordan gets All-Star Game's first triple-double, but Rice gets MVP award

By LELAND STEIN III

CLEVELAND, Feb. 9 - The NBA, ever the marketing genius, pulled another rabbit out of its hat, and it was golden as usual.

This year's All-Star Weekend coincided with the NBA's 50th anniversary, and the special occasion brought together the greatest gathering of past and present stars ever.

Sitting at courtside and available to the media through out the weekend, are the men known by a nickname and/or a first or last name. Their presence had many talking in remembrance and on a nostalgic tour of what was and is.

With Cosse, Hakeem, Bing, Mikan. Magic, Michael, Bird, Oscar, Charles, Moses, West, Isaiah, Pearl, Kareem, Russell, Dr. J, Ice Man, Walton and, well, you get my drift. More legends than you'd find in a history book, all introduced at halftime of the game. Daily Shaquille O'Neal, Larry Bird and the late Pete Maravich were missing - 47 out of 50 showed up and redressed in those personalized leather jackets the NBA made for them.

None of them being to stop the freight train that is the NBA. Not even during its showcase weekend when a number of the league's best hands were cast and chosen All-Stars were unable to play. Thus, the West's Kobe Bryant, Scottie Pippen, Kevin Garnett, Chris Gatling and Delk Schrempf for the West and the best just kept on going.

With Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen, Glen Rice, Grant Hill, Anfernee Hardaway, Hakeem Olajuwon and Torn Chambers were the Event's marketing geniuses, pulled another rabbit out of their hat with the NBA's 50th anniversary, and the special occasion put the game in a secondary role. Even in the halftime locker rooms of the East and West, it was all about the NBA's 50th anniversary. Nothing seems to be able to stop the freight train that is the NBA. Not even during its showcase weekend when a number of the league's best hands were cast and chosen All-Stars were unable to play. Thus, the West's Kobe Bryant, Scottie Pippen, Kevin Garnett, Chris Gatling and Delk Schrempf for the West and the best just kept on going.

Michelle Smith talked to report about her first All-Star selection.

ON COURT: Penny Hardaway (f) and Michael Jordan share a light moment at an All-Star practice.

Rice scored 26 points and edged out Jordan for the MVP award.

Rice was selected as the starter for the East. Rice and Jordan formed the cleanest backcourt the league has ever had. The duo combined to make 12 of 18 shots from the floor for 67%. In the second half, the duo combined to make 10 of 16 shots from the floor for 63%.

Rice said during the post-game locker room interview: "Once I got it going it felt like everything I threw up was going in. It's a great feeling when you get in a zone like that, especially in a game like this where all the legends of the game was still out courtside watching.

"Hey, I thought I could win the three-point contest, but I guess there are better things down the road."

Jordan about Rice and the MVP voting: "My shots were not falling so, I knew I had to do other things to help the team. Glen got hot, so I kept finding him the ball to get my assist total up. I'm really happy for him, he deserved the award."

Behind Rice and Jordan, the East erased a 56-34 deficit with five minutes remaining in the first half, by going on a 44-7 run that active players, coaches and fans didn't see coming. The All-Star game is always a fun event and a time for the warriors to dull the elbows, pack away the top check against an airborne opponent, and, bond together as a league. But, this special occasion was one of the great occasions in a special role. Even in the halftime locker rooms of the East and West, it was all about the NBA's 50th anniversary. With Jordan's movie Space Jam fresh on the minds of the voters, he finally unseated Hill for the MVP award.

On Tuesday, February 25, at 10:00 p.m. (Eastern Standard Time), PBS will broadcast Black America: Facing the Millennium, a 60-minute public affairs special that explores the challenges and priorities of Black Americans on the brink of the 21st century.

In celebration of Black History Month, America: Facing the Millennium is presented by public television station WQED Pittsburgh and the National Black Programming Consortium (NBPC), a non-profit media arts organization established in 1976 to distribute quality Black programming to public broadcasting stations nationally.

The program features three prominent African-American analysts who critique the state of Black America from three vantage points of history, sociology, and culture.

* Glenn Loney, professor of economics at Boston University, chairman and co-founder of the Center for New Black Leadership and author of One By One, the Inside Out, Essays and Reviews on Race and Responsibility in America, addresses the socioeconomic issues of Black America and concerns relating to personal and public responsibility. His topic: Socio-economic Vantage Point.

* Manning Marable, professor of history and director of the Institute for Research in African American Studies at Columbia University and author of Speaking Truth to Power: Essays on Race, Resistance andRadicalism and the internationally syndicated column "Along the Color Line," presents the state of Black America from a historical perspective. His topic: Historical Vantage Point.

* Greg Tate, cultural critic and columnist for the Village Voice, co-founder of the Black Rock Coalition and author of Flyboy in the Buttermilk, Essays on Contemporary Black America, looks at the culture of Black America from what he terms a "black body/white space" perspective. His topic: Cultural Vantage Point.

In addition to the video essays, an ongoing dialogue among a group of people who represent diverse experiences and political perspectives is interspersed throughout Black America: Facing the Millennium. Brought together by one common aim—the advancement of liberty and justice for all in the 21st century—Democrats, Republicans, Independents, youth, elders, various religious backgrounds, grassroots activists and scholars provide a conversational framework for the essay as well as an avenue for more in-depth examination of issues. Key issues addressed include the national political process and whether it works, racism and the economy as well as the role and responsibility of the Black middle class, the Black Church and the future.

Facilitating the round table discussion is Michael Eric Dyson, associate professor of history and author of the critically-acclaimed book Dog Fish: Soul, Body, and the Culture War. The roundtable discussion is interspersed with conversations and interviews with Until Blackwell, the first Black woman mayor in Mississippi, often her thoughts on what is happening in her town, Mayerville, where the prison is scheduled to open in February.

Underwriters of the special are the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, PBS and public television viewers.

Black America: Facing the Millennium is one of three national PBS specials presented by the National Black Programming Consortium in February. WEB Du Bois—A Biography in Four Voices, produced by Lewis Masiah, aired February 7th on PBS, and Conjure Women, directed by Dementia Royals and produced by Louis Dame, aired February 13th on PBS.

March First For Your Community

80,000 soldiers and their families marched from Addis Ababa, Ethiopia 600 miles on foot in late fall to arrive in the distant city of Adwa to defend their communities. What a headliner that would be today! And what an event it was then! March 1 is the 101st anniversary of the Battle of Adwa, an anticlonal victory for Ethiopians over Italian invaders. This largely neglected story compels us to recognize the cohensiveness, cooperation and triumph inspired African-Americans of all ages in the U.S. today as much as it did then.

The students were of a creative community, called childhood, my job was to annoy grownups in ingenious ways, except when they were telling me the traditional stories I loved. Their dramatic and vocal presentations of ancestral spirit hands, up to wait in line for 15 minutes to have green, yellow and red headbands—the tricolors of the Ethiopian flag—wrapped around their heads so they could "define" their people while on the dance floor.

In England, the historical fiction read to some youngsters excited them so much that they decided to act it out in a play.

A Chicago professional told me that when he was a teenager attending an integrated high school, white friends kept asking him if anything important had ever happened in Africa. He had no reply. He said that his entire adolescence was reduced to the Battle of Adwa. And this sparked an interest in the many African battle scenes continuously from the package containing One House. The Battle of Adwa—100 Years. This stunning collection combines paintings, poetry, fiction, social analysis and history to tell the "human" side of history. Adam and Wew, who live in Virginia, are 8 and 11 years old. They had never heard the story before. They asked what color was used to bring "a little color" to the bedroom with the book. Though the boys wouldn't give the book back until they were through reading it, they were ready to read it once more.

Youngsters in Philadelphia were beyond looking at the pictures, to try to imitate the battle scenes they saw in the book. As a recent event in Philadelphia, many children
