Escorts provide protection for students

By Kim Kelley
Staff Writer

As collegiate crime continues to rise around the nation, some campuses have established student escort services. CSUSB has recently established an escort service of its own.

The service is to provide students with a trained escort, to walk them to their car or dorm. CSUSB has been allocated enough money for two escorts, although at present there is only one.

Kevin Crain, a 21 year old Business Administration major, is enthusiastic about his job as an escort. Crain found out about the position while looking for a job at the Career Placement Office. "I didn't want to just sit at a desk, and this seemed interesting," Crain said.

Crain was interviewed by Police Chief Ed Harrison and fingerprinted before being hired. Prospective escorts are also screened for prior criminal records.

An escort training consists of learning the campus and how to handle a crisis situation if one arises. To date, no incidents have occurred. However, the escorts are not to interfere if they see something suspicious. "Our job is to escort people. If we see a problem we're supposed to radio in for an officer," Crain explained, "of course if someone being attacked I'm going to help, that's almost a personal thing to help people."

The escorts aren't required to have first aid training, but Crain has worked for

Students still shaken after quake

By James A. Harper
Special to The Chronicle

For Alfred Taylor, a freshman majoring in English at CSUSB, Tuesday, October 17, 1989, will be a day that he will always remember. Tired and beat Taylor was on his way home after a full day of classes when another passenger, on the bus which he always rides, began to inform everyone aboard about the tremendous earthquake that had just shook San Francisco. "I was on the bus, on my way home after class, when this guy got on and said that there had just been a tremendous earthquake in San Francisco, and that the entire city was on fire," Taylor said. Worried, because he has relatives in San Francisco, Taylor jumped off the bus and ran to the nearest pay phone and tried for two hours to get through. Tried for also most two hours to get through but the lines were busy. I was worried sick, my family lives there," he said.

At 5:04 p.m. on Tuesday, October 17 while Alfred Taylor rode the number 10 bus home, the San Francisco Bay Area was hit by an earthquake that measured 7.1 on the richter scale. Centered in the Santa Cruz area the quake took 59 lives and injured over 1000 people. It was the most severe jolt in the area since the great San Francisco earthquake of 1906.

The first reports dealing with the quake were Soul-shaking for those CSUSB students from the bay area. With phone lines down or jammed in the bay area, many students had to depend upon television and radio for information. Amid reports that sections of the Bay Bridge falling and freeways collapsing, many students found it difficult to remain calm.

Pamela R. Brown, who is from Berkeley and is at CSUSB studying social science, found the situation frightening. "My brother lives in Oakland and works in San Francisco, and I could not help but wonder if he was on the Bay Bridge or the freeway when they collapsed," she said. "I couldn't get through on the phone and all I could do was sit and wait."

Earthquake experts say that there is a 50 percent chance that a major aftershock will strike the Bay Area before Christmas. Thousands of aftershocks have already hit the region, the largest measuring 4.4. But for students at CSUSB, please see SHOCKS, page 2

Program provides assistance

By Raj Daniel
Staff Writer

Students who receive financial aid and are looking for some extra help with their courses don't have to look very far, thanks to CSUSB's Student Assistance In Learning (SAIL) program.

Under the division of Undergraduate Studies, this federally funded program, which began in 1981, is primarily geared toward helping low income, first generation college students in writing and math skills, as well as motivating them to do well in college.

According to Dr. Tom Rivera, associate dean, Academic Affairs, 30 percent of CSUSB's students receive financial aid.

"The whole idea of the SAIL program is to keep students on campus and to make sure that they make progress toward their degree, and eventually graduate," stated Dr. Rivera.

"To accomplish this task, the SAIL program offers informational counseling which Dr. Rivera refers to as a "how-to-service."

The counselor's main goal is to inform students of the different programs available to help them continue their education at CSUSB. Also, the SAIL program offers advising for proper course selection, career focus workshops, and financial aid counseling.

In addition to these services, the SAIL program offers adjunct courses not only to financial aid students, but to all interested students.

Emphasis in these adjunct courses is on textbook content, term papers, and abstract ideas related to the course content.

"They [the adjunct courses] work," stated Dr. Rivera. "Recently, in one Political Science 203 course the highest grade achieved on an exam was by an adjunct student. Also, every one enrolled in the Psychology 100 adjunct course passed their first exam."

"The degree of success depends on the students," states Dr. Rivera. "The more successful the students, the more successful the university."

The Woodman

By Venus Marshall Special to The Chronicle

It has been a long morning. Three classes and one exam are over and two more exams are to come. Missed breakfast this morning, desperately in need of food. One hour and thirty minutes before the next class. Rush over to the famous CSUSB pub for something to eat. Standing in line reading the menu, can't believe nothing is on the menu for health food eaters.

CSUSB students have classes all day. Therefore, they need something to eat between classes. The campus pub is the ideal place to meet for conversation and grab a bite to eat. Although Walker, a health conscious person, feels she is sometimes forced to eat from vending machines, or bring something from home. Walker says, "The only nutritional food on the menu is the salad without the dressing."

According to manager Kevin Kane, "Approximately 95% of the food sold in the CSUSB pub is eaten every week. Kane also said, "The most popular selling items are pizza and turkey club sandwiches."

Kane said, "The healthiest foods on the menu are the egg salad sandwiches, the cheese pizza, the turkey sandwich, and the salad." Vida Malikmoore says her major concern is "variety, lower prices, and faster service. She admits that the primary reason she goes into the CSUSB pub is to socialize, and because she's there, she eats the food."

From 8 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. the pub serves donuts, bagels, and a variety of juices. Jane Singer says in addition to these breakfast foods the pub could serve "whole wheat bagels, bran muffins, natural juices and an assortment of caffeine free herbal tea."

Walker suggests some healthier foods to add variety to the menu are "meatless deli slates that taste similar to bologna, turkey, salami, roast beef, and olive loaf." She says these foods consist of nutritious vegetable protein and wheat-oat products.

Kane said, "I will be exploring the possibility of adding an assortment of vegetarian foods to the menu." However it would help me if students expressed an interest in these foods through a survey. "My primary interest is providing what the students want." Kane also says he will be introducing the wheat bun to his menu in the near future.

The draft beer keg. It's awkward. It's bulky. And it's not particularly attractive. But in all our years in the brewing business we've found no other container better suited for maintaining the consistent quality of real, ice-cold draft beer than the keg.

So whenever you purchase Budweiser draft beer, it comes from a keg... Not because we still care that much about kegs. But because we still care that much about quality.

Draft beer in kegs. It's just one of the reasons why Budweiser has remained the King of Beers, for more than 110 years.
KSSB identity crisis

By Jonathan Mortau

CSUSB's fledgling radio station, KSSB, has a problem. No, they're not really having trouble with money. Yes, they have plenty of music to play. So what is the problem? As one CSUSB student put it eloquently, "K-what?" Yes, that's right, CSUSB's radio station has some major identity problems, and it doesn't look like they're going to go away anytime soon. It seems that CSUSB's students just don't know a thing about their own radio station. A small poll was taken among 38 students. They represented every class year, transfers, night-time students, and career people who have come back for their degrees. The results were downright embarrassing.

The first question posed was: "Did you know that we have a radio station?" Fortunately, only six knew the actual name, KSSB. Thirty-two people were left floundering for imaginary names. The next question was "Do you know how to receive it?" Sadly, only two people actually knew how to get KSSB. Then came the big question: "Have you ever listened to it?" Not one person surveyed had ever actually listened to KSSB. Obviously, this radio station needs an audience and it isn't getting one. But KSSB is not at fault for their lack of identity. They find themselves in a rather strange and difficult predicament. The fact is, KSSB is incredibly hard and impractical to get. It is carried by two cable companies, Comcast and Cassi and Chambers. To receive KSSB off campus, one must first have Comcast cable. Then you have to buy a part that will connect it to your stereo. Then you can finally listen to it on 106.3 FM. To receive it anywhere on campus, you must go through the same process, except this time you can connect it to your stereo. And the number changes to 107.5 FM. Now, realistically, there aren't many people who are going to pay the cable company just to have this station piped into their home or apartment. If someone already has one of these companies hooked up, they can't take it anymore, becoming unbearable, mid-term anxiety

By Raj Daniel

Students, if school work is becoming unbearable, mid-terms have almost killed you, and you feel like you can't take it anymore, CSUSB has got a place for you: the Learning Center. Headed by Sandra Clark, Learning Center director, the program offers many free services to students such as one to one or group tutoring in many academic areas, self-paced courses on tape, and the privilege of using computers for writing papers.

In addition, the Learning Center sponsors workshops for the Entry Level Mathematics (ELM) exam, and two sections of study skills courses taught by Diane Pelletier, a study skills specialist.

Village Council officers begin 1989-90 sessions

By Andrea Rodriguez

Serrano Village Council elections have already taken place and new officers have been chosen. The new Serrano Village Council consists of Koli Winfrey, president; Marcos Mendosa, vice president; Kathy Zimmermann, secretary, Nickie West, treasurer; and Jason Boll, sergeant at arms.

The main objective of these five students is to provide and vote on activities and events for all Serrano Village residents. They also must visualize ideas for policy and facility improvements and how to raise funds for these improvements. Assistant Housing Director Dan Schaefer sums up the Serrano Village Council's duties as "To represent the voice of the residents."

The tutors consist of graduate students as well as students who currently attend CSUSB. They are either recommended by faculty or chosen by the department chair.

According to Clarkson, many students involved with the Preparatory Enrichment Program (PEP) and the study skills courses come to the Learning Center.

"We have a pretty good group of students," Clarkson, "but, particularly in the late afternoons and evenings, we still have plenty of space to accommodate more." A service new to the Learning Center is walk-in tutoring. Students no longer need to be scheduled for tutoring when they need it immediately.

Students steamed over parking situation

By Jonathan Murtagh
Staff Writer

With the growth of CSUSB being a hot topic lately, one of the major issues in the minds of students is the parking situation.

Feelings about the problem are almost universal among students. Sophomore Sean Whaley summed up the problem, “I think since we’re paying the money for parking, we should be able to have parking that is a little more convenient. Many were quick to point out the inconvenience of the time it takes to find a spot. Junior Michael Griffone expressed his thoughts, ‘It [the parking situation] has made me late to class almost every day. I’m a junior here. My freshman year, parking was great. My sophomore year, it got worse. Now it’s really, really bad.’ Sophomore Carlos Limtaico added, ‘Sometimes it takes me 15 minutes to find a place to park.’

The only students who don’t have tremendous problems are those with 8:00 a.m. classes. Even those students must arrive quite early or end up in the dirt. But for those who have classes later in the day, parking is like a horror film. It might be called, ‘Day of the Frowning Parkers.’ Students are buried down by perspective parkers as they head for their cars. Slowly they creep behind the nervous student, until finally they claim the vacant spot as their own.

The time is not the only problem that is on student’s minds. Sophomore Noel Valera had this to say, ‘People are getting mad because they’re paying $36 for parking on dirt, and I don’t think that’s fair.’ Sean Whaley added, ‘For example. I parked [in the dirt] after I washed my car one time and when I came back out it was all dusty and dirty...there went five bucks! Also, when parking in this dirt at night, it’s not well lit at all.’

I went to visit the dirt parking area by the dorms to see what condition it was in. About 50 cars were parked in it and I felt very sorry for them. As I drove across the lot, I grimaced to see rocks of all sizes kicking up and hitting the undercarriage of my car. Anyone driving across this lot risks damaged tires or worse. Even going 5 m.p.h. feels like an off-road adventure.

Sophomore John Chung was quick to point out, ‘I think when it starts raining, the dirt parking lots will be bare.’

So what is to be done about this situation which seems to only be getting worse? Student Matthew Bradac stated, ‘This is a large campus, and it wouldn’t hurt them to make another parking lot.’ It’s $36 per

Slammers get carried away

By Jen Faisfield
Staff Writer

‘Develop a boundless ethic that includes all living things.’ Margaret Mead said that, and I want all those people who went to the Food for Foot concert and slammed to read it. Please understand, I am not against having fun, or getting a little loud, however, don’t push me, because I punch, I punch hard.

Is this ‘having a good time?’ Is this all in the name of fun? Is this making it a ‘good time’? I guess I’m no better than them. Are they? When a wave of large bodies swept towards me with violent intentions, I braced my little body. I punched, hit, and pushed these people out of my way. At the time, I felt I was protecting my friends from the chaos, but now that I consider it, hitting all those people was fun. I felt like I was disciplining them or something. I warned one guy, because he was kind of nice, so he stayed out of my way, but I couldn’t warn them all. Besides, they looked kind of dangerous. I saw some of the same people this morning going to class. They looked kind of dead (as we all do in the morning), I thought, ‘Are these the same people who threatened my well-being last night?’ I guess I was angry at the concert, because I’m normally a non-violent stay, but that doesn’t give me the right to punch someone I don’t know. I’m sorry.
Singers look forward to European tour

By Jen Fairfield
Staff Writer

Do you want to go to Europe? Are you the kind of person who likes to strut your stuff in front of an intelligent, appreciative audience? Most importantly, are you willing to devote time to the development of a skill that we all have, but few choose to exercise? Read on.

The Chamber Singers (Music 386) is a performance ensemble that sings throughout the year all over San Bernardino. Specific performances include the Renaissance dinner in April, and a Christmas celebration which occurs on December 15, 16, and 17. The Christmas dinners are primarily for providing money to tour England, but Dr. Filbeck promises it will entertain. "We're quite busy; the singers sing and serve the food. It's a lot of fun."

The dinner's price is tentatively set at $25 dollars, and will be served in the Commons. They hope to raise thousands for the trip. It is a select class, which means you must audition, and you must have been chosen from the class's prerequisite, Concert Choir, which will also to tour England.

The Chamber Singers ensemble teaches vocal technique with an emphasis on performance. They presently have 16 members in their group.

Redfern seeks to provide CSUSB with informative gallery exhibits

By Beth Sanders
Staff Writer

Whether you know it or not, there is a wealth of culture right here on campus at CSUSB's Art Gallery.

Located in the Visual Arts building, the CSUSB Art Gallery produces six to seven showings per year, which include an Annual Student Exhibition at the end of the school year and several lectures.

Funding for the gallery's activities is mainly provided through grants and student fees.

The gallery's director, Danny Redfern, encourages student involvement in all of the gallery's activities. "Our shows should become more informative as students become involved," said Redfern. "With student input we are better able to produce a show that will interest students."

The gallery mainly hosts contemporary artists, although there has been collaboration with other departments as well. In the future, Redfern hopes to incorporate more theatrical and anthropological influence into the gallery's productions.

Openings are funded by an organization known as "Friends of the Gallery." With student input we are better able to produce a show that will interest students. Everyone is invited to become a part of this organization. "It is an excellent opportunity to stay informed of upcoming events," said Kathy Lintault, Assistant Director of the gallery.

Student membership is $10 per year, which includes advance notice of all showings and special group trips. Also included is a free catalog from each show.

Instead of the Chicano exhibit, which was originally scheduled to open Nov. 10 but has been postponed until April, the DA Gallery, a non-profit organization serving many emerging artists from Claremont Graduate School and the Greater Los Angeles area, will serve as its replacement.

The opening reception will be Friday, Nov. 10 from 7 to 9 p.m. Everyone is invited to come. Admission is free.

Gallery hours are Monday thru Friday 9-12 p.m. and 1-4 p.m. or by appointment. Everyone is encouraged to come by and take advantage of the culture that our campus has to offer.

good team by the end of the season, because we continued to improve throughout the year. I was also very pleased with the overall team effort. I think we had a good season, but if we would have made the play-offs, it would have been great. After the last game, I gave the players, especially the seniors, a few words of encouragement. "I escort mostly students, with a few faculty and staff members, and even the sororities monitor phone lines and will dispatch the police if necessary, especially the temporary lot."

There are phones located around campus, which are direct access to the public safety office where a dispatcher is located. However, Crain said 50% of the people he escorts are people who just see him.

Tuesday and Thursday seem to be the busiest days and the Biology Building and Library are where most students need to be escorted from, according to Crain. "I escort mostly students, with the Biology department and Library being the busiest locations."

"It's better to take the students when they need it the most. You can give it to them, and if possible, put them with a tutor immediately," states Clauson.

Some future plans for the Learning Center are to acquire more funds for additional computers and software. Also, the Learning Center will move to the new 1990 building, therefore increasing its size.

Clauson had nothing but praise for the staff of the Learning Center, "They are hard-working, dedicated people, and we would love to see the Learning Center thrive and be considered an important part of the learning process at CSUSB."

The Learning Center is located in PL 37. The hours are Monday-Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. For information: (714) 880-5038.

It is sad that the radio station is so impractical to receive. In speaking with Rob McKenzie, the station's faculty advisor, I learned that the station actually has an excellent format. It is what is known as "diversified college radio." This means that they have different times, or "blocks", during each day when they will play any type of music you can think of. KSSB plays Top 40, jazz, disco, alternative rock, rap, reggae and much more. It also airs news, sports, and interview shows. It really has great potential. If you have any questions concerning the station or how to get it, Rob McKenzie would love to answer them. His campus extension is 5772.

WATER—

Continued from back page moved for a foul, the oppos- ing team then formed a wall and pass and find a clear shot. In some cases a foul also allows a player a free shot at the basket, which is almost always a goal.

Defense in water polo consists of two general methods. The first is to swarm up and push against the offensive man or pressure him. This can cause offensive errors and makes it easier to steal the ball. The second method is to play back with the defense holding up their arms and defending the pass.

Water polo is a violent sport. There is a constant amount of kicking and punching underwater that is discreetly hidden from the referee. There are a number of black eyes, bruises, lacerations, and jammed fingers.

The water lessens the momentum and therefore the severity of the injuries. Nevertheless there are also a number of elbow and shoulder injuries.

The CSUSB water polo team is a relatively new one. According to Coach Lowell, the players are learning to work together and need to work on passing. They have a number of strong shooters but don't have an experienced goalkeeper. They are strong defensively and are gradually improving as a team.

The coach is looking forward to a full year program. Joining the U.S. Water Polo Club will enable the players to train and compete year long. As the players continue they will improve both individually and as a team and return stronger next year.

Clinic draws record crowd

By Jeff Zelenskl

Rain had no bearing on the recent clinic that the soccer teams of CSUSB held October 22.

Despite the rain, members of the athletic department and the soccer teams put on the free soccer clinic that attracted nearly 400 people. There were 252 youngsters registered for the youth clinic, and 41 area coaches for the coaches clinic, and approximately 100 spectators.

"To put it mildly, the numbers of the turnout that we got exceeded any expectation that we had dreamed of. We expected about 150 overall participants," said CSUSB sports information director Dave Byer. "If it hadn't have rained the total number of kids would have been closer to 500." Co-directors Carlos Juarez (men's soccer) and Ralph Perez (women's soccer) were very pleased with the success of the clinic.

"We've received only positive responses from people that went to it. People called back saying we got exceeded any expectations," Perez said.

Coach Carlos Juarez instructs coaches at the CSUSB soccer clinic.

"I think it was a good experience for everyone," Byer said. The soccer teams got a taste of coaching and teaching of the game. They helped out coaching, registering, and herding the kids from one station to another. The administrators, coaches, and players all learned in some way because we critiqued ourselves."

The clinic was officially sponsored by the CSUSB athletic department along with Soccer Centre, who provided free t-shirts to the first 200 kids, and Lucky's Market, who provided folders for the participants at the end of the day.

"I think that there is no doubt that (clinic) will be a yearly thing," Byer said.

Soccer narrowly misses bid to national tournament

By Jeff Zelenskl
Staff Writer

Every loss during a season for a team can be costly, especially when that team is hoping for a post-season tournament bid.

Coach Carlos Juarez has just lived through it. His men's soccer team ended its regular season on Oct. 29 with a loss to Cal State University, Hayward, 3-1. The loss ended the Coyotes' regular-season at 11-8, just a few wins short of qualifying for the national tournament.

"They [the selection committee] have already selected the teams for the tournament. We didn't get in, but we were close. We missed receiving a bid by only a few wins," said Juarez. "I think that if we had made the tournament we could have been competitive, but that's the way it goes."
