ASI president calls for constitutional reform

By William Ludquist
Staff Writer

A personal dispute between Aaron Watson, President of Associated Students, Inc., and Robert Sadlak, ASI Legislative Director, has led to Watson's call for constitutional reform.

"The personal conflicts were never an issue that I brought up," said Watson. He has no plans to ask for Sadlak's resignation, but he said, "The question is what the president, any president, can do."

Sadlak, as CSUSB's representative to the California State Student Association, believes that one thing the ASI president cannot do is remove him from office.

At the heart of the conflict is an ambiguous ASI bylaw that allows the president to appoint the legislative director, but says nothing one way or the other about removal.

Watson feels the right to appoint implies the right to remove, much as the President of the United States can fire a Cabinet member.

Sadlak interprets the bylaw as not allowing removal by the president, since it does not outline such removal. He sees the appointment process more like that of a Supreme Court Justice, who once in office is beyond the scope of the executive government.

Sadlak believes that CSSA must remain independent from ASI, since CSSA representatives must occasionally disregard the wishes of their president or student association to pass legislation that benefits students statewide.

Watson thinks a ruling must be handed down from the ASI Review Board to

Colleges promote travel

By Su Lyn Combs
Staff Writer

Have you ever dreamed of visiting France, Australia, or Germany?

Through the International Program students can study in beautiful foreign countries and still receive full resident credit.

There are a total of 34 foreign universities cooperating with the program in 16 countries.

Some benefits of studying overseas include exposure to other cultures, learning a foreign language, and personal growth. The program improves the students' skills within their own academic disciplines and in pursuit of their degree objectives.

The IP offers courses related to most of the programs of the schools found on campus. For example, education courses are offered in Sweden.

CSUSB representative to the International Program, Dr. Gabriel Bassiry, said, "It is interesting to know that nationwide more business students are interested in the program. Most corporations are interested in college graduates who have

New CSUSB curriculum considered

By Raj Daniel
Staff Writer

"A required course of studies—a core of learning—can ensure that students have opportunities to know the literature, philosophy, institutions, and art of our own and other cultures," writes Lynne V. Cheney, chairperson for the National Endowment for the Humanities.

In her recent publication entitled 50 hours: A Core Curriculum for College Students, Cheney urges colleges and universities to revise curricula so that undergraduates study essential areas of knowledge.

The publication sets forth a core of learning, 50 semester hours (75 quarter units) of required study in cultures and civilizations, foreign languages, mathematics, natural sciences and the social sciences.

Sound familiar? It should, because CSUSB's general education curriculum reflects this exact core of learning.

"I think Ms. Cheney's publication is very thoughtful and requires careful examination and reflection

Newsweek panelists discuss events in Europe

By William Lundquist
Staff Writer

Recent events in Warsaw Pact nations dominated the agenda when four panelists from Newsweek Magazine spoke at CSUSB on Nov. 14.

They were unanimous in their opinions that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is the most important news-maker in 1989.

White House Correspondent

Tom DeFrank and Washington Correspondent Doug Waller replaced the previously announced Maynard Parker and John Barry on the panel. Other panelists were Rich Thomas, Chief Economic Correspondent, and Margaret Warner, Diplomatic Correspondent.

DeFrank likened the impact of recent events in the communist world to the Protestant Reformation, or the American, French, or Russian Revolutions.

"Most of the countries of eastern Europe will be socialist democracies," said Warner. "I think we're coming to a demilitarized Europe."

Waller said, "In the next five years, we'll see at least a division [of U.S. troops] come back. Basically, the Soviets are depriving us of an enemy."

Thomas thought that U.S. forces would remain in Germany for the foreseeable future to ease fears other nations might have about a reunited Germany.

On the upcoming Malta superpower summit, Warner said, "Gorbachev has yet to come to a meeting without a surprise."

Thomas thought that Bush might lift the trade ban on the Soviet Union if they would relax their emigration laws.

DeFrank said, "Bush is smarter, less likely to be seduced [than Reagan]."

On the subject of President Bush, all the panelists commented on his incredible energy, and how hard it was to keep up with him.

DeFrank said, "George Bush is hyperkinetic, to put

Break-in rekindles safety issue

On Friday, Nov. 3, between midnight and 7:15 a.m. faculty offices 528 and 541 in the library were broken into.

Ralph Nichols, professor of communications, and Tony Huff were the victims of the theft. An Apple Macintosh Plus computer, an external hard drive and back pack were stolen from Nichols' office. The items were valued at $2,400. To date the report does not include amount for Huff.

The crimes were reported by the custodian in the early morning, according to Public Safety Chief, Ed Harrison.

"It has been established that the culprit moved a table to the wall of the offices and jumped over the open portion of the partitions. There was no sign of forced entry," Harrison said. "The partitions don't extend to the ceiling so there is easy access over the top into the office," he said. "We had a similar situation this past summer, but it just involved pilfering."

To date there are no leads. "Whoever took the items has to be a staff or faculty member or someone who knew they would have the time to get in and do the job," Harrison said. "It is hard to tell the magnitude of people who are in and out of that area of the building."

Harrison said, "The last person out of the area usually makes sure the exterior doors are locked. Public Safety officers then check them later in the evening."

"An officer checked the door at 11 p.m. that evening," Harrison said. "It was listed as checked in the officer's log."

"I am extremely disappointed about the theft," Nichols said. "My biggest question is why or how someone has access inside the double doors at that hour. The campus police should be responsible for checking that the doors remain locked."

According to Harrison the case has become inactive because there are no leads. "We still need to get information from Mr. Nichols and Mr. Huff regarding serial numbers to put in a state-wide computer system," he said.

Have you heard the one about the cow, the Frenchman, and the bottle of Budweiser?

It goes something like this.

In 1872, a Frenchman by the name of Louis Pasteur discovered a way of keeping bottled beer fresh for an indefinite period of time. He called the process "pasteurization." A year later, an American brewer by the name of Adolphus Busch got wind of the idea. And he soon began using it to bottle his own beer.

Together they started a revolution in the packaging of fresh goods. In fact, 22 years later, the dairy industry would jump on the wagon. That's where the cow fits in.

It's an old story, but an important one. Because every time you pop open a cold Bud, you know you can count on a fresh tasting beer. One made with no additives. No preservatives. And with quality in mind. And that's no joke.

Pasteurization. It's just one of the reasons why Budweiser has remained the King of Beers, for over 110 years.

THIS BUD'S FOR YOU.

Safety up in lights

By Kim Kelley
Staff Writer

In 1981, a large project to conserve energy was conducted on campus which reduced the level of illumination of campus lighting.

Because lighting has been a big concern among the campus community, a phased program to improve lighting was implemented on campus.

This program is in its third year, or phase, and is an ongoing program, according to David DeMaura, director of the Physical plant at CSUSB.

All exterior lights on campus use a high pressure sodium bulb. "This bulb gives us the lowest operating cost," said DeMaura. "In comparison to an incandescent bulb it is seven times better operating cost because of the amount of time the bulbs last as well as the amount of electricity they burn," DeMaura added. There is a bulb which is more cost effective called the low pressure sodium, but it was felt that this bulb was of poor quality.

The high pressure sodium bulb is what gives the lights their yellow glare.

To determine the amount of illumination and positioning of lighting on campus both safety and cost are taken into consideration. "It is basically a balance of both of these things that we consider. The students safety is important as well as being cost effective." DeMaura said.

Ed Harrison, Campus Safety Police Chief, said "more activities are held at night, so there is a higher possibility for crime at that time."

The recent faculty burglaries took place during the evening hours. "That's why most officers are staffed at night," Harrison said.

The decision for additional lighting involves several areas of input: the physical plant, public safety, students, the administration, and others. The monies for existing lighting are distrib-

Students against racism

By William Lundquist
Staff Writer

In response to a proposal submitted by the Cal State Chico American Indian Club, representatives of the California State Student Association, (CSSA), met in San Francisco to vote on a resolution against racism.

According to Associated Students, Inc. Legislative Director Robert Sadlak, the resolution was certain to pass during today's meeting.

The resolution is the first statewide student policy against racism. It defines racism as, "Any act of physical or verbal abuse excluding, restricting or undermining an individual's self-esteem or dignity based on race, ethnicity or national origin with the intent or effect of impairing or nullifying constitutional rights, liberties and freedoms in political, economic, cultural and social spheres of public life."

CSSA is calling upon the chancellor of the Cal State system to form an independent task force on racism at the state level. CSSA would also like to see a similar task force established on each member campus.

The resolution was spurred by acts of racism at Chico, but the media have reported incidents of racism on Cal State campuses at Fresno, Fullerton, and Hayward,

Adams: an example to be followed

By Richard Kontra
Staff Writer

Whether he's on or off the court, Troy Adams is always moving. He can be dribbling past opponents on his way to the basket, or walking past students on the way to his classes. Which ever the case may be, Adams knows what he's doing.

Adams is a senior and points guard on the Coyote basketball team.

Adams knows his role on the court very well. He received the coaches award last year for his role, as he says, in "keeping up morale."

After four successful years at Rubidoux High School, in which Adams was named All Citrus Belt League player for his final two years and was four time "Most Inspirational Player", it was clear that his leadership qualities were important.

As well as being a team leader, Coach Jim Ducey says, "He works as hard as anybody and leads by example."

Ducey, after observing Adams for the past four years, sees that Adams' ball handling and shooting have improved.

Adams has come to terms and realized that basketball is not his whole life. He is a very much a family man and participates whole-heartedly in his family's go-cart business. Adams is the track manager and says his job is to assist, "Keeping maintenance up". His family has owned and operated the track for over thirty years.

Adams is a marketing major and hopes to own his own business one day. He realizes, being a senior, that his role is to help players now more than ever.

Adams also sees the need for positive role models in today's society.

He believes people need to focus on where they want to be in the future.

Adams wants to be able to project a positive image on younger people and he thinks it is important to have a positive outlook.

For now, Troy Adams is looking toward the upcoming basketball season with eagerness.

Civic Light Opera provides meeting place for art devotees

By Jen Fairfield
Staff Writer

"We're trying to get youth in the opera," Dale Gorman says to me. "Trying to get them into the theatre." Men in cowboy hats yelled, "Programs! Get your programs!" I took my father's arm, and we entered the theatre, ready for a night of music and dance.

We were well rewarded by the Civic Light Opera Association. "110° in the Shade" delighted us with its wit and beautiful sound, sets, and square-dancing. (Yes, square-dancing.)

The performances should not have surprised me, but the theatre itself was a delight. Its velvet curtains and spiral staircase leading to the balcony seemed right out of a 1930's escapist film.

In fact, the theatre was built in the 1930's to escape the bleakness of the Depression, and to entertain the common workers.

Now, however, the theatre seems to be a meeting place of the elite of San Bernardino. Upon entering the Don Quixote Lounge adjacent to the lobby, I met a few of the Association's "Big Cheeses". I can't say that I, a lowly college student, felt unwanted.

The Carriage Club, devoted to the furthering of the arts through the Civic Light Opera, assures me that any and all devotees of art (or, indeed, lovers of square-dancing) are encouraged to attend.

The Civic Light Opera owes much of its moral support to the Carriage Club. At every opening night you can see Dale Gorman, the president of the club, his wife Chris, and his associates chatting it up in the lobby of Civic Light Headquarters in the California theatre on E Street.

The cast party is thrown by the club at the San Bernardino Elk's Lodge on the hill. This party is for the cast, not the club, and this difference is evident in the choice of live band-playing. "Stinger" covers mostly middle eighties-style music, and it's a hoot to see those senior citizens fox-trotting to "Like a Virgin".

The club also sponsors scholarships for music-minded youths.

See Da Gallery

By Beth Sanders
Staff Writer

Showing now through Dec. 15 at the CSUSB art gallery is work presented by the Da Gallery.

A Pomona based organization, the Da Gallery has been making waves in the field of fine arts for 10 years. The gallery also stresses the need to bring art to depressed areas.

The pieces presented by the Da Gallery which are currently being displayed at the CSUSB gallery are varied in style and medium.

There is everything from sculptures of mixed media to poetry done in chinese stick ink. Other mediums include oil on wood, acrylic paint, clay, fresco, and even polaroid film.

The Da Gallery also recognizes the need to have fine arts presented in a way that exhibition and performance are emphasized, not only the selling of art. Therefore, the gallery places no requirements on its artists. In this way, artists of all forms of expression are free to display their particular style, whatever that may be.

CSUSB's gallery has the artist's work displayed in such a way that you really get a feel for each artist's individual style. This showing is also an excellent opportunity for students to see pieces of art that are varied in style and medium.

Gallery hours are Monday through Friday 9-4.

Is this page a waste of space?

By Kevin R. Horney
Editor-in-Chief

Here it is, another Sunday afternoon and the editor has to become a columnist again to fill space.

Commentary

If you look around this story, the rest of the page is pretty much devoid of anyone else's opinion. Below this story is an editorial cartoon, displaying the opinion of a Chronicle staff artist. To the left is The Chronicle's staff box. Where's the student's opinion? Where's the heated arguments and rebuttals over hot ideological topics?

This page is labelled the opinion page for a reason. This page is set up to allow you, the typical college student an opportunity to sound your voice on topics that you feel strongly about. It's a page to gripe about parking, about safety, about the person behind you in PS 10 spilling a coke and soaking your books and backpack.

It's a place to bring up the topic of abortion, of date rape, of racism. It's a place to write rebuttals to others' opinions, and to read their responses. In general, it's a place to not only learn how other students feel on topics, but to understand why.

So far this year, there has been no letters to the editor responding to any of the articles written by myself or any of The Chronicle's staff writers. Only three submissions have come from outside sources: Dr. Pritchard's informative rebuttal to the campus growth editorial, Chief Ed Harrison's letter on safety, and Faculty Advisor Rob McKenzie's letter responding to an article on KSSB.

Not one of these has been written by a student. Is this page a waste of space? Most college newspapers have to hold letters to the editor due to lack of space. These are papers who devote at least two pages, several give more, to opinion and have a student body of around six to eight thousand.

Last year, a Chronicle writer wrote a commentary about the privileged treatment she thought minorities were receiving over caucasions. The letter received so many responses that a four-page insert had to be run just to handle them all. That is the first time The Chronicle has received a large-scale response like that, and has yet to see another one.

Why is it that the only time students actually write in to the newspaper is when the feel insulted or cheated? Why is this campus devoid of an opinion for 360 days of the year, and then suddenly explodes virtually overnight?

I'm not going write an editorial, nor assign an editorial to be written solely to insult or aggravate people into responding. That's not my style, nor is it the style of this newspaper. What I'm trying to do is to simply entice opinionated members of this university to inform the rest of us how they feel on issues and occurrences in their everyday lives.

I sit every day in the Pub and eat my lunch. Every day I hear comments about this, comments about that, "why doesn't someone do something" about this or that. People come up to me as I walk across campus and agree or disagree with my commentaries, and they go into some incredible detail as to what they like or dislike about it, but come the deadline for submissions and nothing at all comes in.

According to others in the student services field, the apathy is wide spread. Associated Students, Inc. has several boards and committees that are inactive this year because no students have wanted to get involved. In fact, most students who do get involved get involved in several different committees because they are in such high demand.

The elected officials of ASI have exhausted all of their recruitment ideas and have all but given up on trying to fill these positions.

The problem is simple, but so is the solution. If you want something changed, tell the appropriate people. If you want more parking, tell the administration, not the students you eat lunch with. A letter to the editor will not only inform your lunch-mates and the administration of your opinion, but will also inform the rest of the student body. Your letter just might cause other concerned students to write in as well.

As Johnathan Murtagh wrote in his parking editorial, "not one letter does a change make." We need to use the power of the students' voice. My comments about any of these matters will not cause anything to happen, but fifteen or twenty letters (that's slightly over 1 percent of the student population here) has a much greater chance.

Please, use this page. Spend an hour a week, or a month, and write a letter. You will, in some small way, contribute to the educational process of your fellow students. Their responses to your letter can do the same for you as well. Let's make some changes and work together to do something for this university.

on many campuses," said Dr. Amer El-Ahraf, CSUSB Acting Vice President of Academic Affairs.

However, El-Ahraf stated that CSUSB, as well as the CSU system, has for a long time seriously approached this issue of a good core curriculum.

"We as a university and as a system believe very strongly in the argument proposed by Ms. Cheney that people should be trained in the humanities, the natural sciences, etc. Our general education program reflects this curriculum," El-Ahraf said.

CSUSB is also continuing to expand its general education core curriculum by recently increasing the number of general education quarter units from 75 to 86.

According to El-Ahraf, the goal of this change is to help the students become well rounded, knowledgeable people.

"Our [CSUSB's] objective is to broaden the perspective of the student, and that is one reason why strong general education requirements are a healthy portion of the entire curriculum," El-Ahraf said.

An interesting point which Cheney explains in her publication is that many colleges have loosely arranged "distribution requirements," as opposed to a strong core, which direct students to take some courses in certain areas and some in others.

For instance, she cites numerous examples of universities where one can fulfill humanities distribution requirements with courses in interior design, or social science requirements by taking a "Lifetime Fitness" course.

"It's difficult for other colleges and universities which do not have a general education curriculum to try to build a well-rounded person," El-Ahraf said.

"But here [CSUSB] there is a very well defined structure. For example, in order to graduate, students must take the specified courses in the general education curriculum."

Another aspect in Cheney's publication is the importance of good teaching.

Cheney writes, "The stature of general education is diminished when a college or university's most distinguished faculty do not teach in it."

El-Ahraf states that CSUSB students are fortunate, because they are trained by a person who has the highest possible knowledge in his/her field.

He notes that 96 percent of CSUSB's faculty have a Ph.D. or equivalent. This figure is among the highest compared to other universities.

El-Ahraf concluded by stating, "The principles and ideas in Ms. Cheney's publication pertain to CSUSB as to any other college or university. What needs to be differentiated is that CSUSB has efficiently acted on these ideas and principles."

some kind of international knowledge, culture, and exposure in addition to their functional discipline such as managing, marketing, finance, etc..."

Dr. El-Ahraf, associate vice-president of Academic Affairs, said, "Compared to students who study in large urban campuses such as UCLA, Berkeley, and Harvard, CSUSB students don't have as much exposure to international students. There is a great number of international students at the larger campuses who provide students with exposure to different cultures."

The IP is a wonderful opportunity for students to take advantage of. Bassiry said, "The Chancellor's Office is promoting the IP because of the vital necessity for the American college graduate to have exposure to foreign culture due to the rapidly changing world market. For America to maintain its competitive edge while faced with increased worldwide competition; understanding and appreciation of other cultures is imperative."

Most students do not realize that the costs of studying overseas are tangible. There are no overseas tuition or administrative costs, students pay current CSUSB campus fees, round-trip transportation, and living expenses. Financial aid that is available on campus is applicable overseas.

To be eligible to study overseas a student must have a cumulative grade point average of 2.75 or 3.00, have upper division or graduate standing by the end of the spring quarter 1990, and have the necessary prerequisites which include having college level foreign language in the chosen country. The deadline for application is February 1, 1990.

For information and applications contact Dr. Bassiry in AD 157, ext. 5732; International Program campus coordinator Dr. Richard Rowland in FO205, ext. 5519; or Donna Stone in PL 107, ext. 5034. Brochures and information are available at the Student Union front desk and billboards around campus.

their lead to 10. The two teams traded baskets for most of the second half, but Whitehead's three-pointers kept falling as the Aussies pulled farther ahead. Ducey was forced to call time-out after the Aussies' lead reached 18, and his team responded by out scoring the Aussies 14-8.

The Yotes come-back attempt fell short as the Rowe fouled-out with seconds left and the Yotes down by only six. The Aussies managed one more three-pointer as the game ended; 84-75.

clarify his powers. He is also calling for a constitutional convention to rewrite the ASI bylaws along more representative lines. He said that "There are other board members that agree." and that, "We need students to get involved."

Sadlak thinks that any bylaws in need of revision can be amended, but does not see any need to change the wording of the bylaw that applies to his office.

seen a vast improvement in the last three to four years. "Two to three years ago I used to receive two to three complaints a week about lighting. This year I haven't received any," DeMaura said.

The biology building has a new spotlight and the library has 4 new spotlights which are on all night. The Student Union lighting has been improved with one-third more illumination. The Creative Arts building is being improved and the Physical Education building is next to see additional lighting.

The parking lot that will soon be paved by the P.E. building will also be given additional lighting. The parking area seems to be the biggest cause for concern regarding lighting. "When the seasons change and the trees add more foliage, the lighting in the parking area is effected," DeMaura said.

If students have a concern regarding lighting on campus, DeMaura encourages them to call him at 880-5166.

Aussies beat Yotes at home

By Kevin R. Horney

CSUSB men's basketball team got a good look at Aussie-ball as it dropped its opening home game to the Australian Men's Youth Team; 84-75.

The Yotes entered the game Sunday night with a 1-1 record following the Master's College tournament. CSUSB defeated Bethany Bible College 96-90, before being defeated by the tournament hosts 81-80.

CSUSB started off in a bad way as they threw the ball away several times. The Yotes had trouble getting anything going at all as their offense sputtered and their defense had trouble adjusting to the Australian's outside shooting.

Dave Webb got the Yotes offense back on track with a three-point basket after two minutes of play. The Australians retaliated immediately with a three-pointer of their own, but Greg Rowe and Jim Falvey teamed up to continue the surge. Ron Ligon's second basket brought the Yotes even with the Aussies, and Falvey's three-pointer put the Yotes up by one; 23-22.

The Yotes defense sprang to life as Troy Adams and Ben Stokes came in from the bench. Adams and Stokes, both 5'10" guards, combined to force five Aussie turn-overs in a one minute period.

The second half proved worse for the Yotes as they went 0-5 from the field in the first 30 seconds. The Aussies were much more efficient as they stretched

Schwartz prepares Lady Coyotes for title hunt

By Jeff Zelenski
Staff Writer

While coaching in Montana last year, Gary Schwartz went looking for a new job.

Luckily for the CSUSB athletic department, he applied at CSUSB and is now the new women's basketball coach.

Schwartz chose CSUSB after a year of searching for a change from his head coaching job at Montana State, a Division I school.

"There were a lot of (reasons for leaving MSU). First I had been wanting to get out of Montana for awhile because the economy in Montana is depressed. This move was the best thing for me and my wife," Schwartz said. "Also I felt that we had reached the highest level we could at Montana State."

Schwartz had also looked at some other west coast schools before choosing CSUSB.

"I'd been looking for a job at Sacramento State and at University of California, Santa Barbara, but they weren't going to pay me enough," Schwartz said. "My choice had a lot to do with the financial opportunities."

With an overall coaching record of 131-64, Schwartz has proven he knows how to win at all levels in college. Schwartz also has been known for his outstanding achievements in building winning programs as well as recruiting.

"Anytime you have a coach of that caliber, with a record like his, you know that he can win. He has changed losing programs into winning ones; he's a winner," said Dave Byer, CSUSB sports information director.

"We are very happy that (Schwartz) applied and took the job when it was offered. He'll do a great job here at CSUSB. He's had success everywhere he's been," said David Suenram, CSUSB athletic director. "He also is known to be a very strong recruiter."

Coming to CSUSB has meant a change of school level for Schwartz, coming from Division I (MSU) to a Division III (CSUSB), but hasn't been to much of a factor in his mind.

"I've been at all levels of competition. I started at Division II and then moved up to Division I. The one thing that you realize is that there's good players at all the levels, it's just a matter of getting good players where ever you go," Schwartz said. "I've got about four or five players here (CSUSB) that could have played for me at Montana."

Schwartz started his collegic coaching at University of North Dakota (Division II) where he compiled a 62-22 record in just three seasons. Also while at UND he led them to NCAA regionals and was ranked as high as 17th in the nation. At Montana, Schwartz tallied a 69-42 record during his four years at the helm and was in and out of the top twenty in the nation.

Before Schwartz began his coaching career, he learned how to win on the court from personal experience. He led Briar Cliff College to the NAIA playoffs and then continued his playing career in the pros. He played in the European International League, based in Iceland, and led Iceland as he scored 38 points per game.

With his winning ways intact, both as coach and a player, Schwartz hopes to lead the lady coyotes to another winning season this year.

"My goal where ever I go is to win. I've never had a losing season, I've had some outstanding years including national tournaments and 20 win seasons. Where ever I go I want to be the top in the nation. We (CSUSB) want to be the top in the nation," Schwartz said. "I think if we continue to work hard we have a shot at Division III playoffs. We're not there yet, but if we continue to work and stay healthy we'll be in the hunt."

That's what the athletic department had in mind when they hired him for the job.

CSUSB runners finish season

By Orin Smith
Staff Writer

The CSUSB cross country team ran their final race of the season on Nov. 12 in Santa Cruz.

The men's team placed ninth out of 12 teams with about 80 runners participating. The number one CSUSB runner was Scott Johnson who placed 39, followed by Orin T. Smith, 40; Bob Thweatt, 48; Russel Fortin, 68; and Kevin Arcaris, 69. The women's team did well, but didn't score as a team because they do not have enough runners. However, Kika Pelligrin placing 18th and Bobbie Heck finishing 42nd.

Coach Tom Burelson felt it was a difficult season, but it could be a strong base for next year. The team's biggest obstacle was finding enough runners to compete.

A standard cross country team has seven people with the top five scoring. Unfortunately, the team was handicapped by the loss of the graduating seniors and some minor injuries.

Both the men and the women placed sixth last year, but the men lost three of their top seven runners and the women lost all but one.

The returning men's team had the minimum of five runners, while there were only two women. Nevertheless, the men's team has been competitive, finishing second in the Masters Invitational and generally beating about 50% of the other teams. The women have done well, individually, usually placing in the top 30%. Being a small team did, however, have its benefits. It created a stronger bond among the individuals on the team, towards the coach and a loyalty to the team that will make a stronger team next year.
