Students Take Out Frustrations During Spring Festival

Students good-naturedly pummeled each other with red pillows while waiting to try their hand at Robin Hood's Archery Contest last Wednesday during Spring Festival. All day long students basked in the sun, listened to the music of "Carl and Lewis" and watched "Sah-Ra" bellydance. Intramural Director Joe Long kept things hopping with not only archery, but horseshoes, novelty relay races, and a pet show. Candidates for 1979-80 AS offices gave campaign speeches, the Veterans Club sponsored a barbecue, and the Acrobatic club gave an outside demonstration.

Lenz Named Woman Of The Year

by Patty Wagner
Margaret Lenz, professor of Education, was awarded the honor "Woman of the Year" by the San Bernardino YWCA in March. Longevity and quality of service to the YWCA was the basis for this award. Lenz's particular services to the YWCA included being president for a four-year period (April 1974-78) in which the YWCA's land was sold for redevelopment.

She and other board members led an expansive fund drive, hoping to raise $100,000 to pay for property. They not only met, but exceeded their goal bringing in a grand total of $140,000. Along with the title, "Woman of the Year," Margaret Lenz received a plaque which is hanging in her office, a certificate from Senator Ruben Ayala, and a telegram from Assemblyman Bill Leonard. Also, her name is engraved on a plaque that is on display at the YWCA.

When asked what this award meant to her, Lenz replied, "It renewed my dedication to keep doing volunteer work with the YWCA." She personally believes that you learn much more than you give when you do volunteer work.

Lenz is now a single slate candidate for the national YWCA board. If she gets elected, she will be one of 75 members doing the business of the YWCA for the whole country.

CSCSB will also be offering 74 other courses through extension this summer. These courses will be available on campus as well as in the outlying communities. Many of the courses are degree-applicable; others offer extension credit only.

A catalog listing the extension courses available this summer will be available May 15. People interested in obtaining a free extension bulletin may contact the Office of Continuing Education at 887-7527.

Earn Credits During Summer Session

One of the largest summer session programs ever offered at CSCSB is scheduled to begin in June, announced Stephen A. Bowles, the director.

Bowles said 94 lower, upper and graduate-level courses are planned in 21 disciplines. Most are scheduled for the regular session, June 20-July 25, with registration set for June 18. The second (or post) session will convene July 30-August 17. Registration will be until July 26.

A complete schedule with registration information and an application form is available free from the Office of Admissions and Records or the Summer Session office at Cal State. Interested students may call 887-7527 to obtain one.

While some colleges are experiencing summer cutbacks, Proposition 13 has not affected Cal State's summer program because it is financially self-supporting from student registration fees. The registration fees have remained at $25 per quarter unit of credit, Bowles added.

In addition to the traditional summer session, CSCSB is also offering 74 other courses through extension this summer. These courses will be available on campus as well as in the outlying communities. Many of the courses are degree-applicable; others offer extension credit only.

A catalog listing the extension courses available this summer will be available May 15. People interested in obtaining a free extension bulletin may contact the Office of Continuing Education at 887-7527.
Three Faculty Members Honored As Danforth Associates

by Tammy Salyer

Most college students are seeking to obtain a highly specialized education which involves the absorption of endless books, lectures, and the practical application of all of this information. It would seem that there exists a danger of college students losing touch with the humanistic aspects of a college education, the interaction between students and professors as human beings.

The Danforth Foundation established a program in 1941 to recognize college professors who have committed themselves to undergraduate teaching, and share a specific concern for students as persons. The program also recognizes their spouse's role in student-teacher relationships on the college level. Three CSCSB professors and their spouses were recently named as Danforth Associates: William Gean, assistant professor of Philosophy; Vivien Bull, lecturer in French; and Fred Keene, assistant professor of Mathematics.

In conversing with them, it was apparent that each associate hoped to play a part in the students' personal growth as well as their intellectual growth.

William Gean clarified his role in the educational process by stating "If you give the students sufficient material to work with, and present them with an objective approach to learning in which all views are presented, then they can develop their own philosophies and ideas."

Gean and his wife Karen Claussen are hoping to obtain funds from the Danforth Foundation to stage a poetry conference, in which the students could be involved as well as a few name poets. In this way they hope to encourage more interaction between students and faculty members on campus.

Vivien Bull also intends to make use of the funds program available to Danforth Associates by purchasing tapes for an audiovisual French program, coordinating slides and movies with tapes. Bull has been working on a different approach to learning a foreign language for three years, with her development of the self-paced French program. She feels that "the program is a better way of teaching a foreign language, and the students learn more effectively because they really know the material when they have completed the course." In Bull's self-paced classes there is maximum contact between herself and her students, since she is available for consultation many hours throughout the day.

Fred Keene's area of concern lies with the students who aren't completely prepared for college-level work when they attend. He has been developing a remedial math program to assist these students.

In his classes Keene tries to "work with the students as individuals, know who they are, identify any weaknesses they might have in their math ability, and instinctively be able to tell when a student is not understanding the concepts."

The Danforth Associates Program will enable these professors and their spouses to meet with peers and people of other professions who share their interest in learning and humanizing the relationships between students and teachers at regional conferences which address various topics dealing with understanding and working with all different types of people. The Danforth Foundation provides meals, lodging and program costs for the regional conferences, and the associates pay their own travel expenses.

Another facet to the program is the College Project Fund, which provides a maximum of $2,000 for projects related to improving the quality of teaching and learning, on college and university campuses.

Present and past CSCSB Danforth Associates consider it an honor to have been associated with the program, because as Jorun Johns, chair of the department of Foreign Languages, professor of German and past Danforth Associate states: "When a colleague finds out that you're a Danforth Associate, he will say 'He (she)'s a Danforth person who likes people and is interested in students."

The Danforth Associates program really broadens your horizons."

Shandin Runs Away With Upset Victory In 3rd Annual Track Meet

by Tim Hamre

Shandin dorm won an upset victory in the Third Annual Serrano Village Track Meet held on April 21 at the Valley College track. Fielding a team of 14, they scored a record high of 124 points. In doing so, they unseated Mojave dorm from their two-year reign as defending champions. Mojave, fielding a team of 16 to take third place. Second place went to Morongo, who scored 116.5 points with their team of 12.

A total of 60 dorm residents participated in the 27 different track and field events of the meet. "The participation of some of the dorms was outstanding," stated Dennis Mendonca, organizer of the track meet for the third year. He went on to state that "the spirit of the participants was really super," pointing out that previous records in seven events were broken, one was tied, and records were set in two new events.

The Inter-dorm track meet was first organized in the Spring of 1977. There were 25 different events both that year and the next. This year, a coed 440 relay and a women’s 660 were added. Of the 25 original events set in 1977, only three are now standing. They are the one mile run, held by Mendonca with a time of 4:48, the men’s 220, also held by Mendonca with a time of 25.0, and the women’s 50 yard dash, held by Yvonne Dix with a time of 6.5. Both Mendonca and Dix were members of the Mojave team. Mendonca went on to express his thanks to Will Gordon, Nancy Ferretti, Chris Williams, and the many others who helped him organize and officiate at the track meet. He enthusiastically claims that "the track meet will be the most successful Serrano Village event for years to come."

Taking fourth place this year was Arrowhead, with a score of 53 points. Badger took fifth place with a score of 23 points. Tokay scored 21.5 points to take sixth place. Waterman scored one point for seventh place, while Joshua took eighth with no points.

Nine CSCSB Students Chosen To Study Abroad

by Sandy Case

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to study abroad? The CSCSB system has an International Program based in Long Beach that enables students to do so. Nine CSCSB students were selected to study abroad this summer. They are: Patrick FitzPatrick, Mexico; Karen Franklin, Italy; Deborah Hernandez, Spain; Gene Hurford, Germany; Graci Knowles, Germany, Ana Isabel Lopez-Rosende, Spain; Kevin Luster, Great Britain; James Van Marowell, Sweden; and Kerry Seaman, Sweden. A reception in honor of these students will be held sometime in May. This reception is open to the entire campus. Details are available in LC-201.

Qualifications to study abroad are 1. — You must apply before your junior or senior year (Some graduate students are accepted into some programs). 2. You must have a minimum GPA of 2.75 with the exception of a 3.00 to study in Great Britain, New Zealand, Israel, and Peru. 3. You must attain upper division or graduate status before departure date for the overseas center. 4. — You have to achieve the appropriate level of language proficiency where required (France, Germany, Spain, Mexico and Peru). This is equivalent to two years of college-level foreign language.

If you are interested in this program, pick up an application from the Faculty Senate Office (AD 169) and fill it out. Missel Riedell, professor of French and IP campus coordinator, will be more than pleased to help you with this. After you turn in your application, you will be interviewed by a review committee here on campus, then by another review committee at the Chancellor’s Office. After your second review committee, you will be notified if you have been accepted into the program.

Wine Study Class A Good Buy

by Jeannne Houck

Last Wednesday evening at the Vintage Shop at 434 Highland Ave, a small group of people thoughtfully examined a number of wines. They held their glasses up to the light and delicately swirled, sniffed, and tasted the beverage. A group of meticulous customers? No, members of Robert Lee's wine study course.

The class is an "in-depth study of premium red and white wines of California," and is being offered through CSCSB's Extension program. This course costs only $40 for an individual, and $55 for a couple. As Leslie Layman pointed out, "This class enables people to taste a variety of wines without spending a lot of money. Who has the money to buy a whole bottle of all the wines you're curious about? After taking this course, I'll know what I like, and what wines to buy."

For four Wednesdays, Lee, associate dean of Academic Affairs and professor of English, will introduce the class to 6-10 wines a session. He explains the background of each wine as it is being passed from student to student. The class is seated informally around a table, and Lee solicits reactions from the students to the wine as they are tasting it.

Last week the class was tasting some major California red wines, and comparing them with their French counterparts. As Lee said, "It is interesting to see how the California and French wines vary, though they are made from the same grape."

The first two wines examined were both made from the gamay grape: the California "Gamay Beaujolais," and the French "Beaujolais-Villages."

The class compared the color, "nose" (smell), and taste of the wines. Wine connoisseurs have a unique vocabulary all their own, and words like "body," "bouquet," "acidity," and "tannin" kept recouring in their discussion. It was generally agreed that the French wine was more "intense," and "finished" than the California wine in this case.

This is not to say that the class was always in total agreement in their evaluations of the wines. One wine at this meeting was said to "smell like flowers," and taste like "sauerkraut," and "coffee." Lee was not taken aback by the disparate responses, in fact he encouraged them, commenting that "People have different tastes. Studies have shown that wines taste differently to people depending on whether they smoke or not, their age, and even the kind of work they do."

Lee went on to say that one shouldn't necessarily infer from this first experiment that all French wines were better than California wines, although he admitted later that he "loved French wines." "In most cases, California wines are a much better buy," he pointed out. "For instance there are some good St. Jean wines which cost under $4 that you can serve with pride."

What is an English professor doing studying wine, not literature? "They're a lot alike," smiled Lee. "When I study poetry I take the poem apart and analyze its components. I do the same with wines. I enjoy the analytical."

Lee is obviously well-liked by the students in this class. Most of them have taken other wine study classes with Lee, and signed up for this one because they enjoyed the classes so much.

Veteran Pamela Stevenson said she had been drinking wines for some time, but was ignorant of any technical knowledge before taking an earlier class with Lee. This time she brought a friend, Maggie Smith, with her. "I admired Pamela's ability to appreciate wine," said Smith, "so I followed her to this class. It has been a rewarding experience." Bill Stevenson echoed this appraisal, stating, "It is gratifying to be able to benefit from Bob Lee's experience and perspective." Indeed, one of the most striking aspects of this class is the knowledge Lee exhibits about wines. Not only are his discussions well-prepared and informative, he is able to field virtually any question put to him. Lee can tell you the ingredients of a wine, the history of the wine, where the grapes are grown. He can identify bottle shapes, decipher the mysterious information on labels, and spout prices and legal requirements.

Lee is currently the director of the San Bernardino-Riverside chapter of Les Amis du Vin, an international society of wine lovers. Lee will be teaching another wine studies class this fall. Contact the Office of Continuing Education for further information.

Career Goal Information On Display

What can you do now as a freshman, sophomore or junior to help yourself attain a career goal? You will be able to find some answers today and tomorrow if you take advantage of the browsing table and display in the library.

The Career Planning and Placement Center is sponsoring the display in the south entrance area on the first floor of the library. Nancy Pemberton, Paul Esposito or Theron Pace from the Placement Center staff will be present during the informal hour of music today and tomorrow. The group performed on campus in February and the Christian Life Club is pleased to sponsor their return.

The group creates their own songs and lyrics in conjunction with a variety of musical instruments such as acoustic guitar, electric guitar, electric bass, drums, and percussion. The SONRISE group is composed of Cal State and Valley College students: Julie Cline, Lee Ann Roberts, Sonnie and Steve Latanation, Mike Hodge, and Rick Molden.

SONRISE, a locally well-known Christian rock group, will be featured in an encore noon-time concert on Wednesday, May 9. The informal hour of music will be held outside on the Student Union's patio from 11:30 to 12:30. Everyone is invited to bring their lunch and enjoy a relaxing noon hour.

"We are musicians, not preachers," according to a SONRISE spokesperson, "and therefore our goal is to give an audience a musically well-pleasing concert and a sense of our joy as expressed in our playing and singing," according to a SONRISE spokesperson.

Orientation Leaders Wanted

The Activities Office is presently recruiting some of Cal State's finest to become orientation leaders. Your reward for this meritorious service to your school is a CSCSB T-shirt, a parking space on campus, and dispensed valuable information about classes here, in addition to performing a host of other tasks.

In this kind of opportunity sounds appealing to you, stop by the Activities Office, SS-122, for more information and an application.

Student Production, "Sleeping With The Enemy," Opens

by Eugene Morse and Johney LaRue

March 2nd marks the opening of Sleeping With The Enemy, the second student-directed play in CSCSB's 14-year history. After carefully observing numerable rehearsals, this reporter has no qualms in predicting that Director Owen Sheeran, with the aid of his cast and crew, will make this intrigueing and somber work enjoyable for all. In fact, anyone attending performances tomorrow through Saturday will feel part of the success that will no doubt be overwhelming Sheeran.

The play is an unpublished "adult-comedy" written by successful writer Harry Cauley. Cauley is a close friend of Sheeran's project-advisor, Bill Slout, professor of Theatre Arts. Slout, his wife Marte, and Cauley acted in the original production at the Apple Hill Playhouse in Pennsylvania in 1974. Cauley is better known for his often-produced work, The Paisley Convertible, and is currently working for Paramount Pictures.

The cast for "Sleeping" is small; two married couples, who are placed in the awkward position of dealing openly with a subject familiar to all: the extramarital affair. "In the play," said Sheeran "a middle-aged woman has an affair with a magazine publisher and they go to a house in Lake Arrowhead for a liaison. Suddenly her husband and his wife show up and a potentially awkward yet funny situation develops." Anyone who has simultaneously dated several lovers will recognize this sticky situation. Following the initial encounter, a kind of physical and psychological power struggle ensues, underlining the amusing surface dialogue with subtextually serious questions. During this internal struggle, an external "heat" is created by a fire that is rapidly working its way up the mountain, adding to the overall suspense. Of the opportunities this project provided, Sheeran remarked, "This came to watch us rehearse last week. The advice of both has helped me a better understanding of the play's enormous potential."

Sheeran cited the professionalism of his cast as the major reason for the ease with which rehearsals went. "Given our intensive four-week rehearsal schedule, I'm fortunate that in I'm working with experienced, mature actors."

Mary-Kay Vincent plays the part of Margo. Vincent did an excellent job in CSCSB's first student production, Vanities last fall quarter, and Reader's Theatre last year. Jeff Reese is John, a lawyer and Angie's husband. Along with a moving portrayal of 'Aegus' in this year's Medea, Reese charmed hundreds of elementary school children last year with his strong characterizations in Sue Rudisill's successful Imagination Players.

After praising the technical crews and cast of The Winter's Tale who "have been very understanding and generous with rehearsal space," Sheeran stressed his gratitude to Lola Stone, his stage manager. "Lola has been indispensable to me. The work that goes into stage managing is often overlooked, but the dedication she's shown has been an inspiration to everyone."

Leslie I. Harris String Quartet Gives Excellent Performance

by Caren Nece

The Leslie I. Harris String Quartet, CSCSB's first quarter in residence, displayed a superb talent and creativity in their concert, Sunday night, April 22, in the Recital Hall of the Creative Arts Building.

The quartet, named in honor of Leslie I. Harris, a founder and past president of the San Bernardino Symphony Association, performed for an hour and a half the music of Beethoven, Haydn, and Milhaud.

The concert opened with the "Quartet in F Major" by Ludwig van Beethoven, flowing very nicely from a graceful and mischievous melody line in the beginning "Allegro," to the more agitated and somber mood of the "Adagio molto e mesto." This selection brought out rich instrumentation of the violin and cello.

"String Quartet No. 12" by Franz Joseph Haydn was the second selection and conveyed a more romantic mood.

Cellist Catherine Graff evoked an emotional interpretation of the middle piece of this selection entitled, "Lento." Armen Turadian, violinist, gave a beautiful performance in the last selection "Quartet In D Major," by Darius Milhaud.

Turadian's unique phrasing complemented the section's slow movements. Throughout the concert these musicians displayed a superb tone and phrasing that only many, many years of practice and diligent work can produce.

Each musician has been performing for almost fifty years. Between these four excellent instrumentalists there lies almost a century of practiced musicianship. Clyda Yedinak, violist, said "We appreciate very much the interest in music that is taken by the young people in the colleges, especially here at CSCSB."

The quartet devoted about eight hours a week for rehearsals. These musicians are also involved in symphony orchestras throughout San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

The quartet was formed in the spring of 1973 and includes: Armen Turadian, violin, of Rialto; Catherine Graff, cello, of San Bernardino; Clyda Yedinak, violin, and Victoria Shapiro, viola, both of Riverside.
Waterman Defeats Mojave Indians
by Tammy Salyer

INTRAMURAL UPDATE APRIL 20-25: In Coed Softball, Waterman defeated the Mojave Indians (actually the Indians helped to defeat themselves, since they loaned Waterman a pitcher and catcher!); the Bad News Bears actually won a game, beating Supply and Demand, and Cretin Trucks-Delmann Hts. extended their winning streak by cruising past Super Maxx.

In Ladles 3:3 Basketball, the fantabulous Born Losers extended their streak with a forfeit to Amelia Earheart, while Sonja Jackson's Instant Funk topped Triple Trouble Five-some 2 games to 1.

In Coed Volleyball Triples, it was the Barking Spiders over Tom's Team, 3 games to ZIP; Blues Power ran over Tami and the Titans 3 games to ZIP, and The Unknowns defeated Emergency Five, 3 games to ZIP.

The Spring Festival Events were a success, with 109 participants trying their hand at Archery for a kiss from the fair Robin Hood (Joe Long). Anita Hughes took first in the ladies division for the second year, while Pat Hattaway copped first in the men's division. Janice Brown and Eddie Perez finished second in the event. Robin Hood extends his thanks to his assistant, Friar Acosta, who oversaw all the frustrated Archery participants pummeling each other to death with those big red pillows! A special thanks is due to Augie Santini of Rancher's Feed and Supply who loaned out his alfalfa bales.

Bob Horn and Pegl Roffers emerged victorious in Horseshoes, scoring 11 and 6 points respectively.

Talented Harris String Quartet Under Appreciated

Editor, the PawPrint:

CSCSB is one of the rare colleges so fortunate as to have an endowed string quarter in residence. We are referring, of course, to the Harris String Quartet. Mr. Harris has bequeathed a marvelous gift to the college and the city. High quality chamber music (and at such a low price — free to students) is always a treasure, especially in a city without a wealth of cultural resources.

One can only wonder why these concerts have such low attendance from the students. Clearly price is not the issue. It is incredible that Sunday's performance, the last this year, had an audience of no more than thirty. One hopes that next year the college, with the help of the "PawPrint," will encourage more appreciation for one of its most valuable resources.
