Statement of the Problem

Driver Education is required to be available to all students attending a California public high school. Many districts, including Redlands, require successful completion of a standard Driver Education course in order for a student to graduate. This requirement presents a problem for many high school Special Education students. Some Special Education students take the Driver Education course in the regular program and are successful. A great many more, however, must take the course in the Special Education classroom, as they are unable to succeed in the regular program. Textual materials currently in use in Special Education for Driver Education are either too difficult or too simple for students reading between the third and sixth grade level. In addition, those materials being used in the Special Education classroom do not correlate with the written tests students must take at the Department of Motor Vehicles in order to receive a driver's license in the state of California.
Review of the Literature

In Special Education today, a problem exists concerning the teaching of driver education to learning handicapped students. Much research has been done on teaching driver education to physically or orthopedically handicapped students. However, until recently no consideration was taken of the learning handicapped student. Those students who are able to survive in a mainstream class do so. Those who can survive with some limited help in the Special Education classroom also may be successful. Those who, because of their handicap, cannot survive in a regular, i.e. mainstream, class have had no suitable alternative in current programs that the author is aware of.

In an article written for The Journal of Learning Disabilities, Wirths discussed the options for learning handicapped students who must take driver education. She mentions commercial driving schools which use a workbook method (reading level 7-13) and gear the program toward meeting minimum requirements. Another option is that offered by the public schools. Here the texts are at the fifth to tenth grade level and students read, answer questions and take written tests for certification. A third option is that of doing part of the work in the regular class and part in the special class. According to Wirths, each of these options presents certain problems. For the student, many of the texts used are beyond their limited reading ability. Therefore, those programs are useless unless private tutoring can be arranged. There is also the question of driver education being provided in the special classroom by those not certified by the state to provide that instruction. In addition, many public officials feel that driving and/or driver education should be postponed until well after age sixteen for learning handicapped students due to questions about these students' abilities to make quick and rational judgments when driving.
Wirths mentions that several states have taken steps to address these concerns when it comes to taking the written test for the driver's license. Florida, Michigan and California are mentioned as having adapted their testing procedures for learning handicapped license applicants. The major effort concerning curriculum for driver education for learning handicapped students has been completed at the University of Maryland's Safety Education Center. This center has prepared separate curricula for the various populations within the broad special education category.

Wirths stresses the need for a great deal of further research, particularly in the area of determining which learning handicapped students should and should not drive. A second area of concern is the preparation of material for the teaching of motorcycle and moped safety in addition to the material relative to the automobile. A third is the preparation of instructional material for the non-reader or low-level reader. In addition, she suggests a need for programs which will involve the parent as well as the learning handicapped student.

In 1979, McInenly completed a doctoral study on "The Effectiveness of Using Multimedia to Instruct Intellectually Exceptional Students in the Classroom Phase of Driver Education." The purpose of the study was to determine if intellectually exceptional (IE) students who were taught the classroom portion of driver education by means of a multimedia instructional program were comparable in driving knowledge with IE students who were taught by means of a regular instructional program. In addition, McInenly wished to determine whether a relationship existed between the reading ability of students assigned to the various instructional modes and their post-performance scores.

in Ontario, Canada. The sample was divided into three groups; a twenty-eight member control group and two thirty-one member instructional groups. One instructional group received the regular driver education instructional program. The other instructional group received the multimedia instructional program developed by the Aetna Fire and Casualty Insurance Co., USA. The control group received no driver education instruction during the time of the study. The testing, both pre and post, was done both visually and orally. Both tests consisted of sixty true/false items.

McInenly's conclusions show that there was no significant difference between the post-test scores of the two instructional groups. The only significant differences were between both instructional groups and the control group. He found no significant correlation between the reading ability and post-test performance scores for students assigned to the regular instructional program.

Other material relative to the teaching of driver education in the regular program was also reviewed. A study by Fields at Michigan State University in 1981 indicated that the use of "The Shell Answer Book" and accompanying Learning Activity Packets, prepared by Fields, resulted in significantly higher scores on a post-test for the experimental group than for the control group. Although this study was not related to special education students, it may have applicability to the development of curriculum for those students. The abstract of this study gave no information as to sample size, population the sample was drawn from, or who presented the instruction, information necessary to more accurately evaluate its significance relative to this study.

In a telephone interview with Mr. Bob Terry, California State Consultant for Safety Education, he stated that currently there is no program in California which addresses the problems of driver education in the Special Education classroom.

Each of these studies or articles points out the need for development of curricular materials to be used for special education students in driver education. Wirths explicitly stated certain areas which need further research and program development. Fields' study points a possible direction that curriculum creation might follow. McInenly's study had certain shortcomings which may limit its applicability to the area of concern here. A much larger sample group from a variety of high schools would make the study more reliable. In addition, greater indepth pre- and post-testing might better establish the level of internalized learning of the material presented. Conclusions based on teh results gained from two sixty item true/false tests may also be suspect.

Certainly, the varied instructional program prepared by Aetna may enhance the learning of this material for many students. Further testing would need to be done in order to prove its effectiveness with learning handicapped students.

In summary, little information is available on driver education instruction for the learning handicapped student. That research and curriculum preparation which has been done is limited in scope and seems to create as many questions as it answers.
Procedures

The purpose of this study was to lay the foundation for the creation of a Driver Education curriculum for Special Education students. In order to establish the need for this curriculum, the literature in the field from the last seven years was reviewed. In addition, a questionnaire (see Appendix A) was prepared and distributed to one hundred eighty-seven secondary special education teachers in San Bernardino and Riverside counties. In addition to the information gained from this questionnaire, information was requested from the Department of Motor Vehicles as well as from the State Department of Instruction, Department of Traffic Safety.

Of the sixty-seven surveys returned (see Appendix B) thirty-three related to special education driver education. The responses provided specific information relative to the teaching of driver education to special education students in the two counties. The texts being used are listed (see Appendix B) and have been reviewed by the author prior to the creation of the curriculum project. After analyzing the data and more specifically the comments (see Appendix C), the reviewer determined that the area of greatest need was material relative to the vocabulary used in the materials prepared by the Department of Motor Vehicles. That same vocabulary is used on the tests which all students must pass in order to obtain a driver's license.

Once all of the texts had been reviewed the project was organized. The project is a workbook designed to teach students the vocabulary of the DMV handbook. The workbook presents small segments of the actual DMV handbook and then drills the students on the vocabulary and concepts in that section. The workbook also includes two sample driver license tests accompanied by the answer keys. A final section is a glossary. (see Appendix D for sample)
Limitations

There were certain limitations to the study and the curriculum which resulted. First, because only teachers in San Bernardino and Riverside counties were questioned, the curriculum may only be appropriate for use in those immediate areas. Research after the creative process is necessary to see if, in fact, the curriculum does help students in passing not only the Driver Education class, but also the DMV test. If the material is successful in this local area, more research is needed to see if there is a larger population in the state or perhaps, nation, which could benefit from these materials. Also, because the materials developed are so closely related to the California DMV Handbook, they may not be useful to potential drivers in other states.

Despite the limitations mentioned, there may be additional applications for the material developed. It is possible that the materials may be helpful in adult education driver education programs or those at the junior college level. They may also benefit poor readers at all levels. Dyslexic students may also find that the exercises are helpful to them. Because of the absence of pictures, the materials are not limited to any one group or age within the population which would be taking a driver education class.
Summary

This curriculum project grew out of a felt need by the author. That same need was expressed by other teachers of special students whenever the topic came up at a conference or inservice presentation. The area of driver education seems to be one of concern for many special educators. The author felt from the beginning that the vocabulary was a major problem for many students. The survey comments verified that this was true in many schools for a great variety of students. Hopefully this project will help to meet the needs of those special students who want a driver's license and who are capable of handling an automobile on the highways of the state. In addition, perhaps this workbook will make the job of the teacher easier.
The Vocabulary of the DMV Handbook

a workbook

Geraldine S. Slaght
1982
To the teacher:

This workbook is primarily designed to assist the student with the vocabulary used in the DMV handbook. Although it will highlight many of the legal concepts and rules of safe driving, it is not designed as the primary text for a course in driver education. In addition, the workbook includes sample test questions and one complete sample test written in the format used by the DMV. It is hoped these will help the student prepare for the DMV written examination on rules of the road, driving safety and road signs.

The workbook is designed for individual or group instruction. Because of the level of difficulty of the DMV handbook, each section is meant to be read aloud by the teacher or aide prior to the students beginning work on that section.

A brief dictionary is included at the end of the workbook as many of the words and phrases used in the DMV handbook are not found in dictionaries used by many learning handicapped students.
Driving a motor vehicle on public roadways in California is a privilege—not a right. Evidence that you have been given this privilege is your California driver's license. You may apply for a license at any office of the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV).

You may be given a license after you have properly answered questions about the law and safety rules, and shown that your physical and mental condition is satisfactory. Your thumb or finger print will be taken. If you have a medical problem or a disability, the Department may require you to present a statement from your doctor regarding your condition. For your first license you must successfully drive a vehicle while an examiner grades you.

WHO MUST HAVE A LICENSE

California Residents

If you are a California resident and drive a motor vehicle on a public highway, you must have a California driver's license. Residents who may not need a California driver's license are:

1. Members of the Armed Forces or civilian employees of the United States Government—but only while operating vehicles owned or controlled by the United States, on federal government business.
2. Persons operating farming vehicles which are not normally used on public highways
3. Persons driving legally identified off-highway vehicles or snowmobiles while crossing a highway (other than a freeway) at right angles

WHO MUST HAVE A LICENSE

California

If you are a California and drive a motor vehicle on a public, you must have a California driver's license.

who may not need a California driver's license are:

1. of the or _______________ of the United States Government—but only while _______________ vehicles owned or controlled by the United States on federal government business.

2. Persons farming vehicles which are not normally used on public _______________.

3. Persons driving legally _______________ vehicles or _______________ while crossing a (other than a freeway) at right angles.
Persons Visiting California

If you are a visitor in California over 18 years old and have a valid driver's license from your home state or country (your place of permanent residence), you may drive in this state without getting a California driver's license as long as your home state license remains valid.

When you make your home here you must get a California driver's license within 10 days. Get one immediately if you become a resident and are employed to drive for pay.

Visitors Who Are Minors

If you are a visitor in California, between 16 and 18 years old, you may drive here with your home state license for only 10 days after you arrive in California. After the ten days you must have a Nonresident Minor's Certificate or a California license. You may not be employed to drive until you are 18 and have a California license.

A Nonresident Minor's Certificate lets you drive in California with a valid home state license. This is issued by the Department of Motor Vehicles to a minor who has given proof of ability to respond in damages in case of an accident. This proof is usually given by means of an automobile liability insurance certificate from an insurance company authorized to do business in California.

MILITARY PERSONNEL
California Service Persons Away from Home

If you are out of state on active military service in the United States and your California driver's license will continue to be valid beyond its normal expiration date as long as you are absent from the state and for 30 days after your honorable discharge. You may ask the Department of Motor Vehicles for a card quoting the California law which extends your license.

Ask the authorities in the state or country where you are on duty if they will honor your extended license.

Of course your license is not valid if it has been suspended, canceled or revoked.

Non-Resident Service Person Stationed Here

If you are 18 years of age or older, see the rules for "California Residents" and "Persons Visiting California" on the previous page.

If you are visiting California and are between 16 and 18 years old, you may drive with your home state license for 60 days after entering this state before applying for a California driver's license. You may extend your driving privilege in California with the valid home state driver's license by getting a Non-resident Minor's Certificate (see page 4).

HOW OLD YOU MUST BE

Adults: If you are over 18 years old and meet the requirements and pass the tests, you may be issued a California driver's license. There is no upper age limit.

Minors: You are legally a minor if you are under 18 years old. If you are a minor, your parents or guardian must sign your application for a license or any change of class. Any person who signs for a minor's driver's license accepts liability up to $35,000 for any one accident. In addition, the minor may be liable for civil damages. If the collision involved a law violation, the minor may be fined.

*Such assumption of liability may be voided by notifying DMV and having the license cancelled. This liability automatically ceases when the minor reaches age 18.

If you are between 16 and 18 years old you may obtain a license after you (1) finish an approved driver education course (in the classroom); (2) finish a driver training course given by a secondary school (high school) or take at least six hours of behind-the-wheel training given by a licensed driving school; (3) pass a test on the rules of the road; (4) pass an eye test; and (5) pass a driving test.

Permitting Unlicensed Person to Drive

You must not let your child, ward, or employee under the age of 18 years, drive on a highway unless the minor has a license or permit. The law also says that you must not employ, permit, or authorize any person to drive a vehicle on a public street or highway unless the person is licensed to drive that class of vehicle.

LEARNING TO DRIVE

Driver education (in a classroom) and driver training (behind the wheel) can both be given in a public or private high school, or by a state licensed driving school.

A high school may issue a student license to a person over 15 years old who has the written consent of parents or guardian. A student license lets you drive only during school-supervised instruction.

DRIVING SCHOOLS

Because the driver training you receive will mark your driving habits for the rest of your life, when learning to drive you should seek qualified instruction either in the public high schools or in state licensed professional driving schools.

Professional schools and instructors in California are licensed by the Department of Motor Vehicles after meeting rigid qualifying standards. Schools must carry liability insurance, be bonded, and maintain complete records for DMV inspection. Cars are subject to inspection every six months. Instructors must pass a qualifying examination, both written and driving, every four years, or show proof of continuing education in the traffic safety field. If you use the services of a professional driving school, ask to see the instructor's identification card.

Questions

1. Tell in your own words what the difference is between Driver Education and Driver Training.

2. Before a school can start a driver education and training program it must do certain things. List the steps a school must go through before it is allowed to teach driving.
THE INSTRUCTION PERMIT

If you want to use public roads while learning to drive, you must get an instruction permit. If you are a minor, you may be given a permit if you are 15 years old and have completed driver education or are taking courses in driver education and driver training at the same time.

To use the permit before you are 17½ years old, you must be taking or have successfully completed driver training with a qualified driving instructor or driver training teacher. After beginning driver training, or after becoming 17½ years old, you may use the permit to practice under adult supervision outside of school.

The adult must be 18 years or older, with a good California license and must be with you in the vehicle, close enough to take control of it at any time. An instruction permit doesn't permit you to drive alone—not even to a DMV office to take the examination.

To get a permit, you fill out the regular application form for a driver's license and pay the required fee at a DMV office.

There you will be asked for:

1. Your birth certificate. If you can't obtain a copy of your birth certificate, certain other documents that prove your birth date may be acceptable.
2. Your driver education and training documents (to get a permit if under 17½—to get a license if under 18).
3. A $10 application fee. This entitles you to three examinations within 12 months. The fee must be paid when you apply for an original license, a renewal license, or an instruction permit. It will not be returned.

Your fee covers both an instruction permit and a driver's license, if you qualify within 12 months.

You will be given an eye test, written traffic law test and a road sign test. A thumb or finger print will be taken.

The permit is good for 12 months. When you are ready to take your driving test, go to the DMV office where your application is, accompanied by a driver who meets the stated conditions. You must be at least 16 years old. If under 18, you must show proof of driver training if not shown before. When you pass all the tests you will be eligible for a license.

Can you use a California instruction permit to drive outside California? That depends on the state or country to which you go. Before you go, contact the driver licensing offices of the places you plan to visit.

Reading Selection

Your examination for a driver's license includes the following:

— An eye test. If you need glasses to pass this test, you should wear them. Your license may be marked to show that you must wear glasses while driving.

— A test of traffic laws and driving safety rules (written or oral), to find out if you know how to handle your vehicle and yourself. The tests are available in some non-English languages.

— A road sign test, including bikeway signs, road markings and traffic control devices.

Note: You must show that you can read and understand simple English such as is used in highway traffic and directional signs.

— A driving test.

If you want a Class 1, 2 or 4 license or any special certificate, you must take more tests. (See Truck Driver's Supplement for Class 1 and 2 requirements.)

Bring your old license with you.

4. A part of the highway that is marked for bicycles only is called a ____________.
5. Another name for traffic signals is ____________ ____________ ____________.
6. An ____________ test means that someone reads the test out loud for you.
THE DRIVING TEST

You must bring the vehicle to be used. It must be in safe operating condition.

No child, other person or animal may be in the vehicle with you and the examiner during the driving test.

The test is given to show that you know how to drive safely. The examiner will give you directions. You will not be tricked nor be asked to do anything against the law.

The examiner may ask you to (a) back up in a straight line; and (b) turn the vehicle around on a narrow two-way street.

You will be asked to show that you know your arm signals, but may use the vehicle's turn signals during the test.

While you drive in ordinary traffic, the examiner will score you on the following:

How you start your vehicle. When leaving the curb do you look for passing vehicles? Do you give a good signal and wait until it is safe to enter traffic?

How you keep control of your vehicle. Do you use the gas pedal, brake, steering wheel and other controls correctly?

How you drive on the street or highway. Do you use the proper lane? Do you change lanes carefully and with the proper signal and follow other vehicles at a safe distance? When driving away from the curb or changing lanes, do you turn your head to look back rather than rely entirely on your side or rear view mirrors?

How you drive through blind or crowded intersections. Do you pay attention to signs and signals, the right-of-way, pedestrians and other vehicles?

How you steer your vehicle. Do you turn from the proper lane, and into the proper lane, giving a good signal the proper distance before turning? Do you turn too wide or too sharp?

How you stop. Do you give a good signal, stop smoothly and at the proper place? Can you stop quickly and safely in an emergency?

How you back the vehicle. Do you back in a straight line? Do you keep the vehicle fully under control?

How you control your speed. Do you give attention to the number and speed of nearby vehicles, to people crossing the street, condition of the pavement, the weather, amount of light, and the distance you can see at the time the examination is being given?

How you judge distance. Do you keep a safe distance when following and passing vehicles and when passing people walking or cycling on the highway?

How you respect the rights of others.

Whether you pay full attention to the job of driving.

At the end of the test the examiner will give you your score sheet, which you are welcome to discuss.

Questions

1. Why must you take a driving test?

2. List 3 things the examiner may ask you to do?

3. Why does the examiner give you your score sheet?
TEMPORARY LICENSE

After you have passed all the tests, an examiner will take your picture. You will be given a temporary license; good for 60 days.

Regular drivers' licenses are mailed from the Sacramento headquarters of the Department of Motor Vehicles. You will receive yours within a few weeks unless your record shows a reason why it shouldn't be issued. If you have not heard from Sacramento within 60 days you should go to your nearest DMV office and tell them.

Your first driver's license will be good for a period of not over four years. It will expire on the fourth birthday after the day you applied for it.

LICENSE MAY BE REFUSED

Some reasons for refusing a license are: A history of alcoholism or drug addiction; Unlawful use of a license; Concealment of material facts or making of false statements in the application; Lack of understanding of traffic laws or signs; Inability to read simple English; Lack of driving skill; A health problem that makes it unsafe for a person to drive, etc.

RESTRICTED LICENSE

The Department may place restrictions on your license. If you cannot pass the eye test without glasses, you will have to wear glasses while driving, and this will be stated on your license. If you cannot see well enough at night you may be restricted to driving during daylight. Many other restrictions are possible. The Department may suspend or revoke your license if you violate a restriction.

NO CALIFORNIA DRIVER'S LICENSE can be given to you until you surrender your California driver's license to the California Department of Motor Vehicles any valid license issued to you by any other state or country. A license issued to you by a foreign country will be returned to you stamped "Not valid in California".

CARRYING AND SHOWING YOUR LICENSE

You must have your driver's license with you whenever you drive. You must show it to any police officer who asks to see it. You must also show it to the other driver(s) if you have an accident.

Do not laminate your license. It is already plastic coated.

UNLAWFUL USE OF LICENSE

It is against the law for any person:
1. To have or display any canceled, revoked, suspended, fictitious, fraudulently obtained, or altered driver's license.
2. To lend a driver's license to any other person or permit another person to use it.
3. To display or represent as your own any driver's license that is not yours.
4. To refuse or fail to surrender to the Department of Motor Vehicles the driver's license which has been suspended, revoked or canceled, when the Department asks for it.
5. To permit your driver's license to be used unlawfully.
6. To do anything against the laws regulating drivers' licenses or fail to do anything required by the law.
7. To photograph, photostat, duplicate or in any way reproduce any driver's license so that it could be mistaken for a real license.

DRIVING WITH SUSPENDED, REVOKED LICENSE

It is against the law to drive with a suspended or revoked license. If you do, you can be fined and/or imprisoned. When the Department of Motor Vehicles notifies you that your license has been suspended or revoked, the court will presume that you know about it.

___ to get something by not telling the truth
NEWING YOUR LICENSE

Your driver's license expires on your birthday in the year shown in the upper left corner. It is unlawful for you to drive after the expiration date.

Department will send you a renewal notice two months before your driver's license expires (DMV have your latest address?). The notice is your renewal application form. Bring it with you when you apply for renewal of your driver's license. If you don't receive a notice, you must apply for renewal of your license.

When applying for renewal of your driver's license the Department looks at your record. If your license has been suspended or revoked because of traffic tickets or accidents, you may not get a license. See page 13 about treatment of negligent operators.

If you have not appeared in court in response to a traffic citation, or if you have not paid a traffic fine, the Department will hold your license until you have settled your obligations as you promised when you signed your ticket, and the court has notified DMV's headquarters.

When applying for renewal you will need to (a) present your renewal notice or fill out an information form; (b) pay the required application fee; (c) pass the eye test; (d) pass the traffic law test; (e) give a thumb or fingerprint; and (f) have your picture taken.

If you are renewing a class 1 or 2 license, see Truck Driver's Supplement for additional requirements.

A road test may be required as a part of any driver's license examination. Road tests are not required simply because of age.

Drivers with physical or medical problems may have to be re-examined periodically by a physician or be retested by a driver's license examiner.

ONE YEAR EXTENSION

If you are away from California and cannot apply in person (although you have a legal residence here) ask for a one year extension of your license. You must apply on or before the day it expires. A "limited term" license cannot be extended. Write to the address shown below.*

LOST OR DAMAGED LICENSE

If your driver's license is lost or damaged, you must get a duplicate. You must apply in person. The fee is $10.00. If you are a minor, you must have parents' or guardian's written permission. A new picture will be taken. Once a duplicate license has been issued, the original license becomes invalid and must be destroyed if you find it later.

7. About two months before your birthday the DMV will send you a ____________ ________________ ________________ to fill out for your new license.
CHANGING YOUR ADDRESS

If you change your ADDRESS you must report the new address to the Department of Motor Vehicles within 10 days. You may go to a Department office and fill out a change of address form. If you can't do this, telephone, or send a written notice, giving your name, the number on your license, your old address and your new address. Include apartment number or mobilehome space number, if any. Mail your report to the address shown below.

Write your new address in ink on the back of your driver's license. Sign and date it. At a DMV office this will be done for you.

When you move you must also change your vehicle registration records.

Ask at any Department office for an address change form. Up to three persons with the same last names and/or three vehicles can be listed on it.

CHANGING YOUR NAME

If you change your NAME by marriage or for other reasons, you will need a new driver's license. Take your old license to a DMV office in person.

Turn it in and ask for a new one. A new picture will be taken. No fee will be charged, and no additional examination will be given. Ask for vehicle registration name change documents if you have a vehicle registered in your name.

4. In a trailer park, each space has a number as part of the address. This is called the ____________ ____________ ____________.

5. The papers you fill out to show you own a car, truck, boat or motorcycle are called the ____________ ____________.
NEGLIGENT DRIVING AND LOSS OF LICENSE

Your license can be taken away if you break the law or drive an unsafe driver. When you are stopped by a law officer and cited for a traffic violation, you sign a promise to appear in traffic court. You may plead guilty or not guilty. Or you may forfeit (give up) bail. Paying bail counts as a guilty plea. If you ignore the traffic ticket and don't keep your promise to appear in court, the failure to appear (FTA) goes on your record. More than one FTA will cause the Department to spend your license. Ending the suspension will cost you a statement fee.

When a traffic conviction shows that a person drove a motor vehicle unsafely on a highway, it counts as one point. An accident is normally counted as one point. Each time you are convicted of a moving traffic law violation, the court notifies the Department of Motor Vehicles. A record of this conviction is placed in your driver's record file. Each conviction counts at least one point against you. An accident is normally counted as one point. Six points are charged against you if you are convicted of: 1. Hit-and-run driving. 2. Driving under the influence of liquor or any drug. 3. Hitting an unattended vehicle without stopping the owner. 4. Causing property damage by hit-and-run driving.

When court findings of traffic law violations are also reported to the Department, the Department keeps a public record of all your traffic convictions and accidents for 37 months, and of more serious convictions for up to seven years.

You may be considered a NEGLIGENT OPERATOR of a motor vehicle when your driving record shows the following "point count":

<thead>
<tr>
<th>If you drive less than 25,000 miles a year</th>
<th>If you drive 25,000 or more miles a year</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>4 points in 12 months; 6 points in 24 months; 8 points in 36 months.</td>
<td>6 points in 12 months; 8 points in 24 months; 10 points in 36 months.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Suspension of License by DMV

If you get too many negligent driver points you may be called to a hearing by the Department to discuss your record. If you don't come to the hearing, the Department may suspend or revoke your license.

At the hearing a Driver Improvement Analyst will talk with you. You will need to show why your license should not be suspended or revoked. If you are unable to do so, you may have your license taken away for a limited time (suspension), or it may be taken away for at least one year (revocation) after which you must apply for a new one. You may be permitted to continue driving on condition that you have no more violations (probation).

Suspension of License by a Judge

A judge may suspend the license of anyone convicted of breaking speed laws or reckless driving for up to 30 days on the first conviction, up to 60 days on a second conviction, and up to six months on a third or later conviction.

13. If you have been drinking or are drunk you are driving _______________ the _______________ of _______________.

Suspension of a driver's license by a court also may result from conviction of one of the following: (a) Driving under influence of liquor or drugs. (b) Hit-and-run. (c) Reckless driving causing bodily injury. (d) Failure to stop as required at a railway grade crossing.

Regardless of point count, many serious offenses in which a vehicle is used are punishable by heavy penalties such as fines and/or imprisonment. Examples are felony drunk driving, felony grand theft, manslaughter and driving under the influence of narcotics or other dangerous drugs. The Department usually has to suspend or revoke the offender's license.

YOUR RECORD IS PUBLIC

Most information in your driver's license file is open to the public. Law enforcement agencies, insurance companies, and others examine hundreds of thousands of drivers' records each year. Records of physical or mental condition of a driver, however, are confidential.

You may obtain a copy of your driving record by requesting it at a DMV office and paying a small fee.

Dear Colleague,

In an attempt to survey the status of Driver Education for Special Education students in San Bernardino and Riverside Counties, I would appreciate your filling out the enclosed questionnaire. More specifically, I want to shed light on the problem of appropriate materials for teaching Driver Education to learning handicapped students. A stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed for your convenience in returning the questionnaire.

Sincerely,

Geraldine S. Slaght

Response to survey question 6.

Briefly list the most negative aspects of the Driver Education program you currently have in relation to your Special Education students.

1. There is no special program for the RSP (resource specialist program). They are only in regular driver ed. program. I feel they need special program and more driving time.

2. No good place to leave the students when they are not driving. Most of the students can be sent back to my room while the Dr. Ed. teacher is driving with the others.

3. They don't understand the DMV book and none of the books help.

4. Class involves a great deal of reading and written work which is difficult for many Sp. Ed. students. The vocabulary is above them.

5. There still needs to be more drill exercises with the laws.

6. Difficult to place them in the Driver Training cars.

7. Out-dated books and materials. (4-comments)

8. A few students do not have enough time behind the wheel.

9. The vocabulary of the books and the vocabulary of the DMV tests have almost nothing in common.

10. Scheduling students for the Driver Training and getting absent days made up.

11. They feel frustrated at the tremendous amount of paper work assigned by the regular Dr. Ed. teacher, which takes slow learners or those with problems of some kind to have to take it twice, often with extra hours of tutoring in my class to pass.
Response to survey question 6.

Briefly list the most positive aspects of the Driver Education program you currently have in relation to your Special Education students.

1. Close contact between Driver Ed. teachers and Special Ed. teachers. Students are sometimes sent to Special Ed. classroom from DE class for special help with worksheets, lessons, and reading of tests.

2. They are interested.

3. I'm using the materials I have plus a modification of the regular class program. The students are adequately schooled to pass Dr. Ed. at the DMV with no problem.

4. We work very closely with Dr. Ed. teacher. Modify material, make any change needed for success of student.

5. The students can succeed.

7. My students are mainstreamed in the regular driver's ed program. One of the instructors is extremely helpful and caring about my students.

8. It works with the actual vehicle code handbook. It has the students do an exercise using the vehicle code vocabulary.

9. Mainstream teacher is cooperative with Special Ed. staff.

10. The class is smaller during the period that we place the Special Ed. students.

11. The SDC (special day class) students get more time in car and simulator.
Appendix D

The glossary is designed to be used in the ordinary dictionary form or as a card file. Many students prefer the card file system. This system has each individual word on a three by five inch file card. The definition is on the back side of the card. The cards are filed alphabetically in a small box, and a student removes only the card or cards which he needs. After using the cards, the student refiles them. Some students prefer the dictionary type glossary as it does not require them to leave their work area when they need the aid of the glossary.
