ASI now accepting election applications

By William Lundquist
Staff Writer

If you've ever wanted to be president of anything, your chance is here. Application forms are now available for elected positions in Associated Students, Inc. (ASI).

Jason Stewart, ASI Elections Chairman, is urging students to pick up petitions at the Student Union desk for any of the 12 positions available. According to Stewart, some of the candidates ran virtually unopposed last year.

Students may run for the offices of President, who is the chief executive officer of ASI, Vice-President, who serves as chair of the ASI Board of Directors, or Treasurer, who prepares monthly financial reports.

The three positions each come with scholarships that amounted to $3,300 per student, last year. Each position requires the officer to maintain at least ten office hours per week.

Besides the three major positions, students may run for nine ASI Board of Direc-

'Dracula': a classic tale of horror

By Larry Rippee
Staff Writer

University Theatre's presentation of the classic horror story "Dracula" opens Friday, March 9 at the CSUSB Creative Arts Theatre.

Starring in the lead role as Count Dracula is Dean Fortunato, a professional actor who has performed on stage and made numerous television and film appearances.

Some of Fortunato's recent television credits include "Quantum Leap," "China Beach," and "Twilight Zone."

This stage adaptation of Bram Stoker's 1897 classic tale of vampirism was written by Hamilton Dean and John Balderston.

The play closely follows Stoker's novel.

After Lucy Seward (played by Edie Scriven) falls ill to a mysterious form of anemia, her father calls upon a Doctor Van Helsing, an expert in obscure diseases, to investigate.

Van Helsing becomes convinced that Lucy's ailment is the work of a vampire.

Van Helsing's careful investigative work leads him to the Count Dracula.

The play is directed by Bob Yowell, the Chair of CSUSB's Theatre Arts Department.

The play will be performed at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday and continue its run March 14 through 18.

Curtain time for the March 18 matinee is 2 p.m.

The tickets for "Dracula" are $3 for students and senior citizens and $6 general.

CSU system budget outlook bleak

"The news we received from Governor Deukmejian indicates it is going to be a very lean budget year for the CSU," said Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds in her report to the Board of Trustees at their Jan. 10 meeting. "From the CSU standpoint, it is a proposal with, at best, mixed blessings."

"The Capitol Outlay portion of the Governor's budget provided $212,626,000, which represents 95 percent of our request. It is one of the highest levels of construction funding the CSU has ever received," said Reynolds. "While the program still has to be reviewed by the Legislature, and ultimate funding is dependent on voter approval of a bond measure, I am gratified by the administration's support for the facilities the CSU so desperately needs to meet the enrollment challenges which the university is facing."

The Chancellor reported that the state budget provided a pool of $57.7 million for employee compensation, which will be subject to collective bargaining. "I am concerned over the six month delay in providing the compensation for faculty and hope that the Governor and legislature will return salary increases from the anticipated January 1991 effective date to our traditional salary increase date of July 1990.

"The 1990-91 Governor's Budget submitted for operating support of the CSU is disappointing. Its net total is $1,682,722,000 which is $244 million less than the Board of Trustees' Amended Request. Exclusive of the compensation provision previously noted, it represents a 2.1% increase over

IT TOOK 138 YEARS TO MAKE A NON-ALCOHOLIC BREW TASTE THIS GOOD.

Creating a non-alcoholic brew as good as O'Doul's wasn't easy.

It took talent. It took taste. It took tradition.

But most of all it took Anheuser-Busch, with over 138 years of brewing excellence. The kind of excellence you'll discover in O'Doul's.

O'Doul's starts as a fine premium beer. Carefully brewed, fully fermented and cold aged, using only the finest ingredients. Then the alcohol is naturally removed, retaining all the great taste of a fine premium beer.

Smooth. Delicious. Refreshing.

So the next time you'd like a non-alcoholic brew, ask for O'Doul's. You'll enjoy the taste for years to come.

O'DOUL'S. THE TASTE WILL WIN YOU OVER.

MONEY FOR STUDENTS IN THE SPRING

The California Faculty Association, San Bernardino Chapter, will award one scholarship each to an undergraduate and graduate student. The scholarships will cover tuition and fees, at the resident student rate, and will provide $50 toward books for Spring 1990. Only CSUSB students are eligible. Candidates must write an essay of no more than five typewritten double spaced pages focusing on the positive contributions of cultural diversity to quality education. Each entry should include a cover page with student's name, undergraduate or graduate status, social security number, address, and phone number. Scholarships will be awarded to the essays. Ties will be resolved using GPA's. Entries are due March 30, 1990. Submit them to Dr. Mary Smith's mailbox, AD 135 or to her office, AD 174.

Rapp strives to serve the students, work together

By William Lundquist
Staff Writer

"One reason, one purpose: service to the students," is how Ron Rapp, the new Legislative Director of Associated Students, Inc. (ASI), summed up his philosophy of student government.

He said that six years of summer work in public relations for a vending machine company taught him the importance of service in a job.

Rapp, a political science major, has been a student at CSUSB since 1988. He was involved in student government at Citrus Community College in Glendora, and wanted to see how government worked in the CSU system.

"I like the enthusiasm," said Rapp. He also likes "the idea of a smaller school with smaller classes" at CSUSB, and enjoys the individualized teaching here.

Rapp plans to graduate in June of 1991 with a bachelor's degree in Political Science, and also a paralegal certificate. He would like to work as a paralegal and is also thinking about law school.

This summer, Rapp will travel to Uganda to teach in a mission.

His initial impression of ASI is that "we all need to pull together and work as one." He once again emphasized service by saying, "That's what we're here for."

CSUSB delegates visit state capitol

ASI President Aaron Watson practices lobbying at the CSSA Convention in Sacramento.

By William Lundquist
Staff Writer

Nineteen CSUSB students learned the techniques of lobbying and practiced their new skills on state legislators in Sacramento, Feb. 25 and 26.

Led by Ron Rapp, the new Legislative Director of Associated Students, Inc. (ASI), the students presented CSUSB concerns to Senators Ayala, Leonard, and Presley, and to Assemblymen Bader, Clute, and Eaves.

The CSUSB delegation joined students from every campus in the CSU system in the California State Student Association's (CSSA) 12th Annual Legislative Conference.

On their first day at the State Capitol, the students were instructed in the techniques of lobbying by David Hawkins, Legislative Director of the CSSA. Workshops on each of the important issues were conducted by consultants from the offices of several assemblymen.

The CSSA decided to lobby for three bills this year. The first bill would allow funds obtained from campus parking fines to be used to develop solutions to the parking crunch. Each campus could use the money to build bicycle paths, buy shuttle buses, build parking lots or structures, or to fund any combination of alternatives.

The second bill would increase funding for Cal Grant awards to help students on financial aid.

The third bill would create a CSU systemwide policy on racism and sexism. The bill includes sensitizing workshops for administration, faculty, and students, and would add an ethnic studies requirement to undergraduate degrees.

Gregor Sarkisian, a member of the CSUSB delegation, summed up the lobbying trip. "The conference was a chance for me to learn about the Capitol and how the legislature works. It was also nice to see all the ASI officers working together for the good of CSU students."

In addition, students were briefed on the master plan for higher education and Proposition 111, which would modify the state spending limit. Hawkins instructed the students in how to raise support for Proposition 111 on their campuses.

After ten hours of instruction in state government, the CSUSB delegation sought out much needed refreshment in Sacramento's historic Old Town.

The trip was organized and coordinated by Russell Bogh, Assistant Legislative Director of ASI. He felt "the CSUSB students were very effective in their lobbying. We set some pretty solid ground on the parking bill."

The ASI officers, President Watson, Vice-President Said, Treasurer Gonzalez, along with Rapp and Bogh, took an earlier flight up to attend the monthly meeting of the CSSA Board of Directors.

Said introduced a public safety resolution on behalf of CSUSB. Her resolution will come up for a vote at the CSSA conference in March, in Pomona.

Model U.N. team travels to New York

By Deborah Johnson
Special to the Chronicle

Eleven CSUSB students will participate in this year's National Model United Nations (NMUN) April 9-14. NMUN is a simulation of an actual session of the United Nations. Through the General Assembly, four General Assembly Committees, and four Economic and Social Committees, major world problems are expressed and resolutions are sought.

While in New York, NMUN delegates will receive classroom instruction on the operation and procedures of the United Nations and the complexities of foreign relations. The delegates receive first-hand experience at solving global problems through cooperation rather than confrontation.

As hosts of the area conference held on the CSUSB campus May 9, the delegates will share their knowledge and experience with high school students.

During the past 18 years, CSUSB students have represented 25 countries. This year's team will represent Mauritius, an island country in the Indian Ocean.

Under Dr. Brij Khare's instruction, the 1990 team members are Scott Anderson, David Gilmore, Deborah Johnson, Monika Keatly, Ann Knickerbocker, Dino Luna, Michelle Rojas, Rima Said, Carlos Scallisi, Michael Taelour and Larisa Tompkins.

Several fundraising activities are planned to help pay for the trip to New York and defray the costs of the area conference.

Library celebrates 500,000th volume, civil rights activist to speak

Renaissance woman Maya Angelou will be featured at CSUSB on Thursday, March 15, as the CSUSB's John M. Pfau Library celebrates the addition of its 500,000th volume.

Festivities begin with the unveiling of the milestone volume at 3:30 p.m. in the library. The celebration continues with a speech entitled "An Evening with Maya Angelou" beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the gymna-slum.

Angelou, who is world famous as a writer, poet, actress, dancer and singer, is best known for her book, I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings which won her a National Book Award nomination in 1970. She has been nominated for a Pulitzer Prize, a Tony Award and was an Emmy Award nominee for her role in the television mini-series "Roots."

A long-time advocate of civil rights, in the 1960s Angelou served as the northern coordinator for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference at the request of the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Advance tickets are required for Angelou's speech. General admission is $5 for adults; $1 for students not attending CSUSB. Admission is free to all CSUSB students, faculty, staff, Library Associate members and members of the Alumni Association with a complimentary pass obtained in advance. Tickets and passes are available by contacting the Associated Students Box Office at (714) 880-5933.

A large crowd is expected, so there are no guaranteed seats after 7:15 p.m. An autograph session will follow Angelou's performance. For more information, contact Beverly Ryan at (714) 880-5108.

For more information contact a physician in the CSUSB Student Health Center.

A taste of the Mexican side of town

By Toni Calvino Mellinger
Staff Writer

When the stomach is growling for something substantial, nothing hits the spot as conveniently as Mexican take-out. It's quick, tasty, and fills you fuller than most "fast-food" will ever for just a few dollars.

At CSUSB, finding good Mexican take-out is as easy as turning the corner, in either direction. Rosa Maria's, on Sierra Way and Mi Cocina, on Kendall, are two restaurants that span the spectrum.

While both are inexpensive, they're as different as red and yellow (excuse the comparison).

Rosa Maria's is famous for their gargantuan garbage burritos. It definitely takes two hands to tackle the big combination of meat, beans, cheese, rice, lettuce, tomatoes and onions wrapped in a king size flour tortilla.

The menu is simple, focusing on burritos, along with the usual a la carte items; tacos, enchiladas, rellenos, etc. Although the selections are basic, anything you order is sure to be hearty and fresh, from the thick homemade tortillas to the ripe tomatoes on the tacos and the whole, mouth-filling beans.

The place is clean (even the bathrooms) and tile-topped tables on the sidewalk add a hint of Mexican aura to your meal.

I couldn't help but notice the continuous flow of people at Rosa Maria's. "I like it socially, people are always interesting to watch," said CSUSB English professor Larry Kramer who, at the time, was hitting an XL garbage burrito with his best shot. "This'll do me for the rest of the day," he said.

In the opposite direction, Mi Cocina offers a menu that's a little more gourmet, with interesting entrees like chimichangas, machacas (shredded beef, bell peppers, tomatoes, onions and scrambled eggs), carnitas and carne asada. But the ultimate Mi Cocina specialty is fajitas, beef or chicken. For just a few cents more, you get the works; beans and cheese, rice, guacamole, and their own zippy, fresh salsa. Another plus for Mi Cocina is that they deliver.

Patron Joe Lease said he likes Mi Cocina because the food tastes "really Mexican, not like an American's attempt at Mexican food."

The place is small but cheery with bright red and yellow paint and Mexican music.

When a meal is well prepared, the cook knows it. Like the owner of Mi Cocina said, "Just try some and you'll see that it's good."

'Ethel' receives awards, but doesn't advance to nationals

By Larry Rippee
Staff Writer

"Ethel," the one-woman musical starring Val Limar as famed blues singer and Broadway actress, Ethel Waters, picked up several awards at the Western Regional American College Theatre Festival held in Santa Barbara Feb. 16 and 17 but will not go on to the national competition.

"Ethel" received the Kennedy Center-American College Theatre Festival's Meritorious Achievement Award.

Val Limar received the Meritorious Achievement Regional Acting Award and was honored as an Irene Ryan Semi-Finalist.

"Ethel" is the only one-person play to ever be selected for competition in the Western Regionals of the American College Theatre Festival.

Bill Slout, director and co-author of "Ethel," had high hopes for the play's success in Santa Barbara.

"We had a home run and tagged out at the plate," Slout said.

However, "Ethel" is not dead. By special request "Ethel" will be performed at CSU Sonoma on April 29.

Other students who were honored at the festival include Nathalie Jeglin who received a Meritorious Achievement Award for Property Design for "Lucy's Play" and Bill Adams who was given a Meritorious Achievement Award for Musical Competition also for "Lucy's Play."

Gina Brittain, Glen Hampton, Val Limar, James Skousen, Laura L. Vechlone, and Matt Webster were all Irene Ryan nominees.

'Dracula' tickets still available

The original, 1927 version of the play "Dracula," considered one of the most haunting and sensual, will be performed March 9, 10 and 14 -17 at 8:15 p.m., with a 2 p.m. Sunday matinee, March 18, at CSUSB.

All performances will be held in the University Theatre. Admission is $6 for adults and $3 for students with I.D. and senior citizens. For more information, call the CSUSB Theatre Arts Department at (714) 880-5876.

Tyrone Anthony band jazzes up Wiley's Pub

By Alonzo Ruvalcaba
Special to the Chronicle

The Tyrone Anthony Band brought their own blend of jazz and pop to the CSUSB pub last Friday night. The show featured renditions popular jazz tunes, such as "Songbird," in addition to cuts off of their debut album. The L.A.-area based band's album, of the same name, is not yet widely available, but can be purchased at Rhino Records in Claremont.

Special major trapped in red tape

By Kim Perkins
Staff Writer

The place is growing old. The grass, the walls, even the people look all too familiar. Years of hard work have begun to pay off, or have they? Why did this have to happen? School is nice, but there comes a time to graduate and move on.

These are just a few of the thoughts running through students' minds in regards to their special major program. CSUSB student A. Kirk McCarty sadly recalls his experience with red tape that delayed his graduation an extra two quarters.

McCarty first attended CSUSB in the fall quarter of 1981, right out of high school. He carried 10 to 15 units a quarter for four years and obtained senior status.

The following year, McCarty took a year off from school to work and save money. Thereafter, he carried only five units a quarter.

In June of 1989, he walked during Spring graduation with only nine units of special projects remaining to complete his degree. He planned to finish his degree in the Fall quarter of 1989.

Then it happened. The walls of hope began to crumble. The dreaded monster known as red tape moved in.

McCarty's major, Computer Music, is a special major. It's a combination between the Computer Science major and the Music major.

Special majors require an advisor to sit down with the student and come up with curriculum to fulfill course requirements. This can involve a lot of red tape.

McCarty explains his problem, "In the fall I took two dummy classes to register and pay my fees until I could talk with my advisors. Then I went to talk with the instructor for class I needed. He said that he already had a full quarter and the studio that I would need to use was already booked up. He did say that he would be willing to help me if I could get the okay to use the studio from the department chair."

"When I went to talk with the department chair, he said that he would have to have full knowledge of my major before he would give me the okay."

The department chair sent for the information he needed from other departments on campus, but by the time he and McCarty were able to get back together it was past the add/drop deadline. McCarty had dropped his so-called dummy classes beforehand

A. Kirk McCarty's graduation has been held up an extra six months.

but was unable to add the classes he needed or get a refund from registration.

Needless to say, McCarty was upset. He states, "the department chair basically said that I was out of luck. He was like a brick wall. All I wanted was to get studio time approved. He didn't want to do anything for me and did not seem to care that I had already paid my fees."

McCarty did what he could to get his money back, but to no avail. The school told him that unless the refund was due to a military transfer, medical reasons, or misinformation he couldn't get his money back. They told him that he was not misinformed because he was not told to register in the first place.

McCarty's advisor, Professor Loren Filbeck, is doing all that he can to get him the classes he needs, but as it stands, McCarty will not be able to complete his degree until Spring 1990, a whole six months longer than planned. After attending CSUSB for eight years, that's a long time.

Confused over scholarship information

Dear Editor

I find obtaining information on scholarships is an aggravating and frustrating experience. Being an English major, I constantly check with the English department, to see if any scholarships are available and no one ever knows. Unfortunately, Disabled Services does not receive much information anymore. At the Financial Aid office, you're told to check the library. At the library the run-around continues. The library staff is usually busy, directing you to a shelf containing rows and rows of books to look through. Who has the time? This takes forever looking at dates, qualifications, and specifications. Do I major in Scholarship research? We, the students, have a tremendous work load and study load to fulfill each quarter. We lose the value of achievement because of having to look for so much information. Why can't locating scholarship information be easier?

This is my proposal. The major department offices should provide solid information on local scholarships. And the Financial Aid office at the beginning of the school year, should know when the scholarship information packet will be available. This would be a great help for us, the students. And the student body as well as myself, would like to see a move toward changing into a more efficient system to obtain scholarship information.

centages, the decimals, the per-game averages as he shot up from the hardwood floor several feet to grab the ball and practically rip the rim off the backboard as he slammed the ball through.

It was on such a play that his time ran out.

It was a typical Gathers play. Pure finesse and poetry as he left the floor, sheer power and might as he slammed the ball, two handed, through the hoop. He hit the floor as the crowd exploded.

Gathers smiled at a teammate as the crowd rose to their feet. He knew the move was impressive and he knew the crowd liked it. He'd been bringing this crowd to their feet for four years, and he was good at it.

He gave the teammate a high-five as he glowed with accomplishment. His expression was that of total victory; the opposition had defended against him as best they could, but he not only scored, but he scored as he wanted to. He was unstoppable.

But it was then that what no team had been able to do to Gathers happened; Hank Gathers was stopped.

His expression didn't have the time to change before he hit the ground. He struggled to get back up, the look of victory gone, nothing but fear and confusion remained.

He made it to his knees, then fell back to the ground. The buzzer had sounded, the game was over.

Why does the death of such a person shock us so?

The death of a 34 year old executive of a heart attack, in rush hour traffic, slides right past us with barely a "that's too bad."

But for some reason, the death of such a finely tuned athlete, like Gathers, brings fear to us all.

It says something about our mortality. We've been told that physical fitness is a cure for premature death, and by the activity of a majority of Americans, we believe it.

But when we see an athletic god like Hank Gathers die, we get scared. All that extra work in the gym doesn't mean as much anymore; we may still die tomorrow. Gathers certainly was expecting to wake up Monday morning.

Maybe we should take a lesson from Gathers' misfortune and prepare for the inevitable now.

It's been said that the only thing definite about life is death. It's sad that our society spends more time preparing for retirement that it does for death, more time on IRA's and CD's than on eternity.

An old quote keeps coming to my mind as I watch the replays. "What does it profit a man if he gains the whole world, yet forfeits his own soul?" It may be an old saying, and some may feel that it's out of date, but the truth of saying like that are hard to refute.

For those that are banking on their future, look at the tape of Gathers' last shot and learn; "sudden death" isn't just an expression reserved solely for the field of sport, it's a term of life as well.

A means of finals survival

He lights a cigarette and exhales. The smoke clings to the contours of his young, ashen features like a fog. She watches, intrigued by his crazed visage, his lean body hunched over the keys of his PC, his fingers pounding away like some smouldering incarnation of Captain Nemo. She wonders how his eyes can endure the abrasive grey smoke. But his eyes are somewhere else; they do not see the weave of florescent letters against the green infinity of his monitor. His fingers strive to follow his mind; they pause, they sit expectantly over the keys, they rub his lips, his teeth. He throws his cigarette into a waste basket full of the origami of clenched fists.

The woman walks across the room and sits on the ottoman next to the computer stand. She looks at his dark wavy hair, his tired, discouraged features, the two day growth of beard. She sighs, shakes her head at the fact that he'd been driven to smoke again and whispers, "Baby, I think you should call 880-5083." He looks back at her, disheartened. "Who?" "You know," her voice is perky and irritating, "the Writing Center." He looks at her and rubs the smoke from his eyes. She sees the tension drain from his face. As he reaches for the phone, the trash can explodes into flames. For a moment they watch, transfixed, as the cleansing fire consumes all evidence of indecision.

the current year. However, the cost to merely maintain existing service levels for projected 1990-91 enrollment requires an increase of 10.8%," commented the Chancellor.

"While we anticipated a very sparse budget, (given reduced State revenues, the State Appropriations Limit and the uncertainty surrounding the pending SCA 1 resolution) the support level proposed in the Governor's Budget is wholly inadequate to accommodate the number of students who are projected to enroll," she continued. "Although the items funded include the CSU request for enrollment costs associated with a 2.7% growth in FTE students (7,120 FTEs), this increase is more than off-set by budget reductions to our normal funding base and a lack of funding for costs related to non-discretionary expenditures and increased workloads.

"In addition, the Governor's Budget contains significant anomalies that have to be rectified," said Reynolds. "Funding has been provided to staff adequately in the Instruction program, yet virtually no funds have been budgeted to satisfy Academic Support enrollment-related costs. The budget has been increased to provide the Student Services support required for enrollment growth, yet no funds have been budgeted to ensure the provision of adequate space, nor for the maintenance of existing facilities and services that provide Institutional Support to the total student population.

"We will be putting into service an additional 642,000 square feet of classroom and other building space," added the Chancellor. "However, no provision is made for staffing the new space or even providing funds for the utilities required. This is the first time in the history of the CSU that this has happened! Additional funds have been incorporated in the budget for financial aid and financial aid counseling, but funds have been denied for the counterpart of collection and disbursement.

"The Governor's Budget endorses the modest increase of 5 percent in student fees adopted by the Trustees. The increase was developed following the methodology set forth in statute.

"Should the Governor's Budget be enacted in July as presently submitted, the CSU support budget will require major cutbacks which will prevent delivery of the traditional, quality education CSU students deserve," concluded Reynolds. "While I am greatly distressed over the magnitude of the reductions reflected in the Governor's Budget, my staff, colleagues, the presidents and I, will all be working for passage of the Traffic Relief and Spending Limitation Act (SCA 1). I am confident that should revenue estimates improve, the Governor will provide for restoration of some of these reductions. We must be optimistic that significant amelioration of this debilitating budget will be provided by working with the executive and legislative branches."

Jock stereotype a hinderance to education

By Christopher Melton
Special to the Chronicle

They are revered on the courts and playing fields-the collegiate athlete.

Commentary

Most athletes are looked down upon when it comes to their performance in the classroom.

Granted, there are many cases where athletes are given preferential treatment because of their outstanding athletic ability. Their grades are changed and are given lighter work load because they are athletes.

I am not one of these so-called "pampered" jocks that gets to sit around all day playing Nintendo until it's time for practice. And there sure are times when I wish it could be so, especially around finals week.

My first year in junior college, my speech teacher resented me for being a member of the basketball team.

He expected that I would be like all the pervious hoopsters he'd had in his class, unattractive and uncaring.

He even had the audacity to ask me if I needed help in spelling some of the more lengthy words that he used in his lectures.

Another of my teachers, a professor of trigonometry, was taking role on the first day of class, when he paused after saying my name, raised his eyes from the computer printout and said, "Mr. Melton, your tutor's name is Andrea and. . ."

The thing is I never asked for a tutor and if the prof would have bothered to check my high school transcripts as closely as he checked on my being an athlete, he would have seen that I received A's and B's in high school trig. and calculus.

My English 101 teacher read a section out of Moby Dick and after she was done, she said, "The context of this passage. . ."

She stopped in the middle of her sentence and started another. "Now Chris, context has to do with what these paragraphs mean," she said. And all the while, I'm thinking "No kidding lady."

All of this because I play basketball.

I thought that things would be different when I came to a larger four year university, and because of the fact that there were so many more students, my professors would think of me as just another number.

This was true, until they found out I was a basketball player. Through our casual conversations they'd smile and ask how the team was doing, but I could see it in their eyes they're thinking, "I'm not going to let you get away with missing class and assignments, you lazy bum."

The prejudice that all athletes in college are delinquent when it comes to their students is present because of few cases of grade changing that are hyped up in the media.

With this pre-conceived notion that all "jocks" are dumb and party animals, it's difficult to be taken seriously by peers and professors when it comes ability to perform in the classroom.

Gathers' death touches us all

By Kevin R. Horney

Death.

It's not often you see a story beginning with that word on the sports page. If the word ever does appear, it deals with dreams, winning streaks, or overtime; not players.

Commentary

I can remember lounging in my living room couch on a lazy Saturday, cold drink in one hand, a sandwich in the other, watching a dream world on T.V. Fine tuned athletes defying gravity and physical limitations every time they crossed the length of the court.

Every game was a dream. I was on the court somewhere, somewhere with those gods of sport. Those men had pushed themselves well beyond the limitations of nature, the same limitations that hold the rest of us firmly on the ground.

Hank Gathers was a god of the gods. His style, his ability, his smile following a play that even he considered extraordinary, and his attitude towards the game were astounding.

When he walked out on the court people weren't cheering a physical being, they were cheering a past, a present, and a future. And what a future Hank Gathers had.

The 6-foot-7 Gathers had led the NCAA in both scoring (32.7) and rebounding (13.7); only the second player to have ever led the nation in both categories.

His team was ranked among the top ten in the nation, and a trip to the national championships was a definite possibility. It would be an excellent way to end an excellent collegiate career.

Every pro team had him on their list for this years draft. Most scouts didn't expect him to be left after the first round. He was destined for a high paying career in one of the most sought after arenas of sport in America.

He'd had it all in the past, and no one doubted that he would have it all in the future.

I didn't dwell on his statistics while I watched him play. I couldn't see the per-

Lady Coyotes drop game to St. Thomas, beats Colorado

By Jeff Zelenski
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team ended its hopes for a national championship last Friday night as they lost to second seed St. Thomas 78-49 in first round action of the Western Regionals in Moorehead, Minn.

The loss snapped a 22 game streak that started after the Lady Coyotes stumbled to a 1-3 start.

"We just lost to a physically gifted team, they (St. Thomas) had a lot of talent. They were a good team. They were very tall and our biggest player is only 5-10," said Head Coach Gary Schwartz. "Our girls have no reason to hang their heads. At the beginning of the season nobody thought that we would have made as far as we did. I'm very proud of all the girls."

On Saturday the Coyotes played in the consolation game of the Western Regionals as they handed fourth seed Colorado College a 64-53 loss.

"It was a great way to end the year. We ended it on a positive note, it's a good way to end it for the seniors. They all went out as winners, because that's what all of them are," Schwartz said. "I was proud of them with the way they came back from the loss against St. Thomas. They found it within themselves to come together with their backs against the wall, the way they did all season long."

Against Colorado, senior Teri Walsh scored a game-high 26 points to give her 2,015 in her career (18.8 per game in 107 games). At half time she was honored and given a standing ovation.

"She scored the basket to put her over the mark right before halftime, so the NCAA allowed us to honor her. The whole gym gave her a standing ovation, it was really nice," said Sports Information Director Dave Byer, who traveled with the team.

Also sophomore sensation Laura Beeman dished out four assists that put her over the 200 mark on the season, a new school record. Senior Lori Peters scored 10 points and sophomore Kris Ballesteros scored eight for the Coyotes in the season finale.

Walsh was named to the All-Western Regional team.

"Going 24-4 and winning 22 consecutive games was a great accomplishment. Hopefully after time passes we will be able to look back and reflect on this season as a whole, not just the St. Thomas game," added Schwartz. "With the odds against us, we showed that CSUSB women's basketball could make a stand. I'm sure we'll make a return trip (to the playoffs)."
