EOP/Financial Aid — Everyone has heard of them, but what are they and what do they mean? These questions weighing heavily on my mind, I wandered up to the Student Services building to ask someone. That someone came in the person of Laura Gomez, Outreach Counselor for the Educational Opportunity Program (EOP), who patiently explained the machinations of the program.

Published by:

Issue No. 7

November 13, 1979

First, EOP is not Financial Aid. They aren't even in the same office. What they are, basically, is a means for special admissions standards for "Disadvantaged" students. They are also a possible source of financial aid for EOP qualified people.

Once in the program, the EOP student receives one hour of tutoring per class, per week. Additionally the student meets with a counsellor a minimum of twice per quarter. There is a special workshop on writing papers and orientation is provided for new students. Ms. Gomez stresses that EOP is run on an individual evaluation of financial and academic background.

Armed with this basic information, I wandered further down the hall to the Financial Aid office. Nick Pencoff, an Advisor, was kind enough to sit down and talk with me, in spite of my no-notice intrusion.

Here the interrelationship between EOP and Financial Aid begins to unfold. The first step in this admittedly somewhat involved process (they are giving away money, remember) is to fill out and send a College Scholarship Service (CSS) form off to Resume Speed, Iowa.

Several months and many corrections later, after you have finally remembered to sign the back of the form, you'll get a Student Eligibility Report (SER). Take this, posthaste, to your friendly, local Financial Aid office, they can tell you how much, if any, you're good for.

If you are lucky, you will get a Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG) of up to $862. Then, if you are on EOP, they'll figure out how much you can get from them, up to $1000. If you still fall short of your financial need, you'll be considered for either College Work Study (CWS) or National Direct Student Loan (NDSL). They are, respectively, up to 20 hours per week $3.28 per-hour jobs that people are doing all over campus and the low-interest Federal loans that people used to love to default on. I say used to because Uncle Sugar has lost his sense of humor and is now going after those nasty non-repayers. Finally, you could be considered for a Secondary Educational Opportunity Grant (SEOG), also of up to $862, if there are any funds left over from the Christmas rush.

The following sample Financial Aid Package is given for a single, full-time EOP, qualified student, living alone, off campus.

Total Estimated Need	$3350.
Student Contribution (summer job)	$750.
BEOG	$862
EOP	$1000
CWS or NDSL	$400.
SEOG (if available)	$550

If your math is sharp, you probably noticed that this leaves you with an apparent surplus of $12., which I deduce falls under Money that Fell From the Sky (MFFS).

Mr. Pencoff also noted that there is currently legislation before the U.S. House of Representatives to overhaul the BEOG system. Named the Higher Education Reauthorization, this is Bill H.R. 5192. If approved, this could mean more bucks for us overworked and underpaid financial aid types. We encourage you to contact your Congressman to let them know your feelings on this proposal.

Beginning in January, Financial Aid applications will be accepted for the 1980-81 school year. The office strongly suggests that everyone get theirs sent in as soon as possible. For further information on EOP, call 887-7395; for Financial Aid info call 887-7741. Better still, break out your roller skates and buzz on up there in person. They can always use a good laugh.

Questions Raised Over PFM Contract

by Tim Hamre

Inquiries into the Foundation Board's decision to allow Professional Food Management (PFM) to pay its student employees minimum wage (see PawPrint, Nov. 6), raised a series of questions about the Foundation and its contract with PFM.

These questions concern student wages, contract provisions, contract enforcement, dorm students' willingness to pay more for better food service, the confidentiality of certain documents and procedures used in awarding the contract to PFM.

In an interview last Thursday, College Business Manager Leonard Farwell answered some of these questions. Time limitations ended the interview before all of the questions could be covered.

On the student wage issue, questions were raised over the fact that PFM paid its students employees minimum wages from the start of the school in September although the full Foundation Board did not vote to release PFM from that requirement until October 25.

Farwell stated that he and the Foundation were aware that PFM was paying minimum wage from the start. Farwell explained that he gave PFM tentative approval to pay minimum wage in September.

On October 5, the issue was dealt with by the Foundation's Executive Committee. (The Executive Committee consists of President Pfau, Vice President Sherba, Dean Monroe and Farwell) Minutes from that meeting show that the Executive Committee decided to recommend to the full Board that PFM be exempted from the student assistant wage requirement.

Confusion arose over exactly what the Foundation Board decided. Farwell states the Board gave retroactive approval of the contract exemption. However, AS Vice President Bruce Jeter, the lone student on the Board, insists that the Board's approval was not retroactive. (Executive Committee minutes made no mention of retroactive action.)

Questions were also raised on whether or not all students employed by PFM in the past have been paid at the proper scale. Farwell stated that all student employees in the past have been paid student assistant wages. He was not personally positive that all students were paid at their proper scale. (One student employee source indicated that PFM only paid student assistant wage scale rates the first year of its previous three year contract.)

On contract provisions, Farwell was asked why the meal plan list received by dorm students made no mention of dinner. He replied that there was no need for it since dinner had unlimited seconds and that no student ever expressed an interest in having that information. (Last year's food committee raised that question and ended up constructing a menu to ensure that they would at least know what they were supposed to have).

Farwell did provide the PawPrint with a copy of the contract sections stipulating what PFM must provide. (see page 3)

When asked what the Foundation did to ensure PFM compliance with the contract, Farwell replied that he was in almost daily contact with the PFM Manager, that the Housing Office has a copy of the contract specifications and that he eats in the Commons periodically. Farwell went on to explain that when there was a problem with contract compliance that he has resolved it with the manager.

If students have questions or complaints about PFM's contract compliance, Farwell says that should go to the manager and if still not satisfied, they should come to him.

Farwell has the clear impression that dorm students do not want to pay any more than necessary for food service. When asked if, at a meeting he had with about twenty students in the spring of 1978, there was a consensus that students were willing to pay more, he replied, "No, absolutely not." He went on to state that "never, at any meeting has there

Cambodian Relief Drive Starts Tomorrow

by Tim Hamre

A Cambodian Relief Drive will be launched on campus tomorrow by the International Club to collect foods and medicine to be shipped to Cambodia in December. The drive will continue until the end of the quarter.

Officials estimate that as many as 2.25 million Cambodians may die of starvation and disease by Christmas unless massive aid is received.

The club will collect canned foods (no freeze dried foods) and is especially interested in collecting canned milk. They also want high protein formula, baby formula, vitamins, (multi-vitamin and B-1 complexes) and common medicines such as aspirin.

Collection boxes will be in the Student Union lounge area, the South Entrance to the Library and entrance to Student Services.

The items collected will be taken to Operation California in Santa Ana. Operation California is a private organization accepting donations of food and goods. Most other organizations accept money only.

The International Club also plans a T-shirt sale for later in the quarter to raise money for cash contributions.

The Club is also working with the United Cambodian Community, Inc. in Los Angeles to obtain informational materials about "The Cambodian Tragedy".

SAVE THE CAMBODIANS

The above is the top part of a flyer which will be posted around campus, along with other posters, to publicize the Cambodian Relief Drive.

The Club decided to undertake the drive at a meeting held on November 1, and finalized its plans at a meeting last Friday.

Club members provided the following description of the Cambodian tragedy.

"Like the Cham people who once inhabited parts of what is now Vietnam and Kampuchea (Cambodia), but who disap-

The famine situation in Cambodia threatens to reach tragic dimensions if aid is not received immediately.

Already, over a thousand people die every day from lack of food and medical attention.

Unless massive aid is sent, AS MANY AS 2,250,000 WILL STARVE TO DEATH BY CHRISTMAS.

Some help is already on the way but it is merely a drop in the bucket.

You can do something to change this situation.

Send your tax-deductible contributions directly to any of these already involved agencies:

FRANKLY SPEAKING... by phil frank

'I ASK YOU... IS RADICAL ACTIVISM DEAD?... WELL, IS IT?'

© COLLEGE MEDIA SERVICES-BOX 9411-BERKELEY, CA 94709

When the Ohio National Guard demonstrated their inept marksmanship at Kent State, I was sitting in a jungle clearing with a hundred other Marines, relieved at the Cambodian incursion. Our area had become a hot bed of activity until the Cambodian incident, indicating to us, that it did have some beneficial effect. The first reports of the Guard firing on students and killing some of them was met with feelings of horror as we wondered how many Guardsmen had been killed. As time went on and we found that no Guardsmen were hurt, our eyebrows went up. In the middle of a war, in free fire zones, we still could not shoot at anyone or anything without cause and we wondered what had happened at Kent State. Over time, I have never altered my belief that the Guardsmen were wrong and should have been prosecuted. A few years ago, you could not talk to college students about Kent State without getting into a violent argument as to how wrong the Guard had been.

In the Commons last year, I was talking to a group of eight students, male and female, between the ages of eighteen a twenty-one. Kent State came up in the conversation and I mentioned that I thought they had been wrong in firing on the students. The eight students at the table with me uniformly "jumped" all over my case telling me that the Guard should have shot more students. No matter what I said, or how I explained what happened, the eight students held to their belief, beyond reason, that the Guard was correct and the three students killed (who were not participating in the demonstration) were wrong, simply for being anywhere near the action in the course of going to and from classes.

This revelation in the change in attitudes of the current college student has always shaken me somewhat. The new students have the awareness of the sixties (with some of its cynicism) coupled to the conservatism (and a return to patriotism) of the fifties. The new students have more in common with the fifties than with the sixties.

At the moment this phenomenon is merely interesting. In ten years it will probably mean something on college campuses. The current college administrators have grown up in the hectic sixties of student activism. They have gotten used to walking softly with students and give them more freedom now than the students actually seem to want. By the time the administrators get used to the new complacency among students, activism will probably resurrect itself and we'll have confrontations on campus once more. Perhaps the reason for this is that all administrations and bureaucracies are reactionary but inertia bound. By the time they get moving, its hard to stop them and there is always a time lag and delay in their response to changes in the student environment.

So, I look toward a future where activism will grow among students and the administration will fund itself once more in conflict with the students. Can this be avoided? Probably, but only if the administrators look ahead and prepare themselves for the first indications of the coming change. If they don't, campuses will be having demonstrations and violence once more. The administrators stay, while the students come and go and it is therefore important for the staff to prepare for change.

Survey Results

Nine survey forms were returned. A few even appeared legitimate. An overwhelming majority like the new Format, Front Page and Approach. People wanted to see more news and less poetry but a majority did ask for fiction. Other items favored were pictures, essays, commentaries, and editorials. Fifty-fifty responses went to cartoons, jokes, humor and "wise sayings".

The most read sections of the paper were Activities, Boo-Boos by Bozos and Intramurals although there was a uniform dislike to the writing. The next category included Cartoons, Classifieds, Drama and News with the majority disliking the writing. The third category included Calendar, Commentary, Dear Uncle Wally, Music, Off the Walrus, Photo Essay and Politics which held uniform high marks for writing. The last group contained KOMD, Tumbleweed Tech and Wally's World (which has never been run). These three received the highest scores for writing.

One of the more amusing returns included the one which stated they always read Boo-Boos by Bozos and Dear Uncle Wally but couldn't stand them (?).

Tim Hamre was the favorite writer with Wally next.

Other comments made, "No special favorites, just keep trying new ideas."; "I really enjoy the creativity (of Tumbleweed Tech)"; (classifieds) "excellent"; (Tumbleweed Tech) "boring but boring" (the same person also rated Wally's World - never run - as always read and fair adding "tell Wally to stick it up his axis".

Aside from the personal attacks on the editorial staff, it seems that the PawPrint is generally well accepted.

And They Wonder Why We're Upset?

Last Wednesday night, I went to the Commons for dinner between 6:05 and 6:10 p.m. like a good dormie.

After passing up the bin of what some people optimistically termed lettuce, I came to a stop with several people waiting in front of me. It seemed they were waiting for a new entree to be brought out, since the old one was gone (nothing new). The line started breaking up about 5 minutes later as people realized a new entree was not forthcoming.

At the steam table I got a choice between chow mein noodles (no chow mein, just noodles), something which looked like cold beef sliced in a hurry, mashed potatoes, gravy and corn. I figured the "beef" was an "entree choice" but I couldn't see a second "entree choice". (I guess I was just incapable of stretching the definition of "entree" far enough to include chow mein noodles.)

Still in search of a suitable entree, I wandered over to the grill and realized, I didn't want a hamburger for dinner since I had one for lunch (there being a lack of choices at lunch also).

That was when I decided to eat in the Pub.

Last Friday, I had a choice between fish with french fries or fish with mashed potatoes (Maybe they thought french fries and mashed potatoes were the entrees, and fish was a starch item.)

When I go to brunch on weekends, I feel privileged to have a choice of one fruit let alone the two promised. If I'm lucky, I can even find something other than raisin bread to make toast with.

Dinner on the weekends isn't even worth mentioning, much less eating.

Well, I suppose I could go to the Food Committee.

I went to a Food Committee meeting once. It seemed the only complaints which weren't ignored were the ones that could be pinned on an individual employee.

It is sometimes hard to find students to serve on the Food Committee. Is there any wonder why? Most of the students can find better ways to waste their time.

I could always take my complaints directly to the management. Yet, I would feel silly complaining about something that seems to be part of every day life.

Besides, I shouldn't have to complain to begin with. A lot of people are being paid to make sure I'm provided with what I pay for. They certainly count my drinks. Where are they when entrees are missing?

And the Administration wonders why students are upset over the food service.

Our administrators like to boast about how we have the lowest cost food service plan in the system. Having the lowest cost plan, however, does not necessarily mean we spend the least amount of money on food. If you figure in how much a student feels compelled to spend to eat in the Pub or at a fast service food place, I doubt we would be the lowest for total food cost.

Having said enough about PFM, I would like to talk about the people that brought PFM here, the Foundation.

Now, the Foundation actually makes the Food Committee look good. The Food Committee is at least some form of student input.

I almost went into shock when I found out that not one single student reviewed the four different proposals which were received. After all, students are the ones who have to live with the decision (and I literally mean, "live with it").

My shock was compounded when I discovered that most of the Foundation Board, the ones who made the decision, did not even review the different proposals.

When I came to school here, it also was PFM's first year on this campus. I used to hear all these stories of how much better the preceding company was. I never really paid that much attention to the stories until now.

For us to have had that same company back this year, it would only have cost us pennies a day extra (about $34 for the year). I wonder how many Foundation Board members knew that?

I wonder how many times the Foundation went against what the Administration wanted? One member, Dr. Gibbs, is at least to be commended for her lone vote against the student pay cut.

My overall impression of the Foundation Board is that it is a rubber stamp of approval for whatever some of our top administrators decide.

Sometimes I have trouble believing that the Foundation exists to serve the students. With the way their decisions are made, I sometimes wonder why they even exist.

AS Endorses Students On Personnel Committees

by Tim Hamre

The AS Board of Directors "heartily" endorsed the concept of student participation in faculty Retention, Promotion and Tenure Committees during its meeting held on November 6 in the Student Union.

The Board adopted a resolution, presented by AS President Kathy Fortner, that urged the CSUC Board of Trustees to adopt a resolution which calls for having students as full voting members of faculty personnel committees. The resolution, authored by the California State Student Association, is agendized for action at the Trustee's Nov. 27 and 28 meeting.

Reasons cited in the AS Board's resolution for endorsing student participation in RPT are that "students are the direct consumers of the educational product . . . students are one of the best groups to judge the effectiveness and quality of teaching, and . . . students are of an increasingly mature age

In other action, the AS Board approved the appointments of Patrick Sieben, Al Abidin and Susan Rich to the Instructionally Related Programs Board. (The IRP Board allocates about $50,000 to various instructionally related programs.)

A request to establish a scholarship for the Review Board Chair (chief justice) was sent to the Appropriations Committee.

Consideration of the appointment of a Legislative Coordinator was postponed after questions were raised over the job description for the position.

Also postponed was an allocation request for $200 by the Health Center for an open house, and a resolution on social responsibility in investments.

In a previous meeting, held October 29, the Board confirmed the appointments of Angela Lavin and Christine Coppinger to the AS Review Board, appointed Fred Cole to its Rules Committee, and agreed to co-sponsor the Rape Awareness Program being held tomorrow.

The next meeting, scheduled for today (Nov. 13) at 5 p.m. in the Student Union Senate Chambers, has several items agendized concerning the Foundation — PFM contract. Three separate resolutions will be considered. The first calls for students employed by PFM to be paid student assistant wages, and promises to take action if they are not. The second raises concerns about the contract between PFM and the Foundation. The third resolution pledges AS support of reasonable and peaceful protests which may be made by dormitory residents over PFM.

The Board will also consider an allocation request of $500 for a lawyer consultation account.

The PawPrint will be requesting $1,635 for darkroom and photo equipment.

Fortner will be presenting a resolution supporting the concept of tuition free higher education, and pledging support for the Coalition for Tuition Free Higher Education.

Approval of the appointment of Meg Greene as Secretary to the Board is also agendized for action.

In addition all previously postponed items are slated for action.

CFA Proposes Two Statewide Faculty Bargaining Units

The Congress of Faculty Associations (CFA) has requested establishment of two statewide bargaining units for representation of the CSUC faculty under collective bargaining. In a filing of authorization cards October 10, 1979, CFA advocated one unit for all full-time academic employees and a separate unit for all academics employed less than full time.

"Our two-unit proposal is the best route to effective bargaining for our entire membership, both full-time and part-time," said CFA President Bill Crist. "Both part-time and full-time faculty have separate and unique employment problems which should be at the top of their respective priority lists when they go to the bargaining table."

The CFA filing advocated two units but committed CFA to compete for a single unit including both full-time and part-time faculty should the Public Employment Relations Board (PERC) determine that to be an appropriate unit.

that people take this problem into consideration and try to find a solution to save a human race in progress of disappearing from the face of the earth."

Cash contributions for Cambodian Relief can be sent to any of the following agencies: UNICEF, Asian Refugee Relief, c/o U.S. Committee for UNICEF, 337 East 38th St., New York, N.Y. 10016.

The American Red Cross, 1200 S. Vermont Ave., Los Angeles, Ca. 90006
OXFAM/America, 302 Columbus Ave., Boston, MA 02116
United Cambodian Community, Inc., 1851 South Westmoreland Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90006

Checks or money orders should be made payable to the particular agency and specified Cambodian Relief.

The International Club will be meeting this Thursday at 3 p.m. in the Student Union.

been a clear impression that students wanted to pay more money."

Two persons who attended the 1978 meeting however, have said that there was a general consensus that student's were willing to pay more, provided of course, that they got better food service.

During the course of its investigations, The PawPrint requested the release of PFM's contract and related documents. Farwell allowed a reporter to review the contract and bid specifications. He would not allow them to be copied, however, because that information was "not generally released" and the documents were the property of the Foundation which he did not have the authority to release.

When questioned about the procedures used in the awarding of the contract to PFM, Farwell explained that the different proposals (there were four) were reviewed by the Executive Committee (Pfau, Scherber, Monroe, Farwell) which recommended to the Foundation Board that they contract with PFM.

When asked why the Board members were not supplied with copies of each proposal, Farwell explained that the proposals were 80-100 pages long and would have been too expensive to copy. He stated that the Board members were supplied a summary of the proposals "detailed enough" so they can make a good judgement."

However, AS Vice-President Jeter cannot recall ever seeing any such summary. All he remembers seeing is a list of the daily rates that each company would charge.

Farwell had to leave the interview while he was being asked why the chart of daily rates provided to Board Members was based on a dorm occupancy of 276-300 students when the actual dorm population is over 350.

Unasked, went the question about how much consideration was given to the second company whose bid was only pennies a day higher than PFM and was well liked when they were here before PFM.

The following section of the contract between the Foundation and PFM stipulates what PFM is obligated to provide to dorm students.

PFM Contract Provisions

enemies — hunger and disease. At least 2 million people are believed to be on the edge of death by starvation or disease.

"In 1975, the population of Kampuchea was 7 million; now, the government estimates that it is around 4 million. Among the adult population, only about 20-30 percent are men, and most of the women are widows. According to Sauoeun who is one of only 40 doctors in the country (in 1975 there were 500), there is now only one birth for every ten deaths. Unless emergency aid arrives, the existence of the Khmer race will be in peril.

"Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University and one of 40 religious leaders said that according to the latest reports from Cambodia 2,000 people are dying every day because of starvation and disease.

"Also witnesses to the tragedy were 3 American senators — Democrats James Sasser of Tennessee and Max Baucus of Montana and Republican John Danforth of Missouri — who became the first U.S. officials to visit Phnom-Penh since the fall of the Lon Nol government in 1975. At a press conference, Sasser said: "The living, the dying and the dead were all together." Danforth added: "What struck me was to spend hour after hour and see only starving children: babies so wrinkled they looked like wizened old men. There is no reason on earth why this dreadful situation must continue."

"It is true that human beings, especially young children, should not suffer from the result of a crime that they had never committed. Thus, in the name of humanity, we ask

At 5:50 pm, by the Commons' clock, I approached the tray stand. Two students were leaving and replacing their trays. Once student said, "They're out of food." I said, "What?" The student repeated her statement. I asked "Why?" She said that the cook was ill and they "hadn't made enough food." I asked a passing employee if there was any more food and was told "No." I left.

At 6:01, green salad, macaroni and potato salads, two colors of jello, strawberry ice cream and veal were available.

At 6:12 veal, scalloped potatoes, ham and the salads were on line.

At 6:30 the same items were still available.

PFM personnel confirmed the illness of the cook and that more students had appeared for dinner than predicted. She stated that several students were told that more food would be available. She further advanced the opinion that one of the reasons for the shortage was the large number of students returning for seconds.

Dinner on Saturday consisted of BLT's, veal, mashed potatoes, peas, macaroni and potato salads, green salad, jello, cake and two flavors of ice cream. . . . Wally.

The Village Idiot

by Tomy

Thanksgiving: The SVC would like to know if you are going to be in the Village for Thanksgiving dinner. The Commons is closed for Thanksgiving Thursday and Friday. The SVC is considering footing the bill for a Thanksgiving dinner for those who will be here for dinner. The culinary delights will be prepared by Chefs Phyllis Scala (Mojave) and Terry Calloway (Shandin). Please let the SVC know now if not sooner, by signing up on the list which should be posted in each dorm, or tell your R.A. by next Tuesday.

YULETIDE: Yes, Christmas is just around finals, I mean the corner. And, the SVC is checking its list to see who's been naughty and nice; and behold everyone's been nice and naughty. Better luck next quarter.

The SVC will consider the following proposed activities at today's meeting: Candy Cane Mail-O-Grams. For a nominal fee you can send anyone in the Village a candy cane delivered free to their door. Also to be considered is a dorm decorating contest.

The SVC has already planned to have Christmas caroling on November 30th which is the last Friday of the quarter. The carolers will go once around the Village singing in each of the house's living rooms.

Anyone and everyone who has been nice and naughty, I mean nice and not naughty is invited to take a break from the final dash to finals and met in Shandin's living room at 8:30 p.m. SHARP. Song sheets will be provided. To be a caroler all you need is to be full of Christmas cheer. No, strike that. Not full, you will need to be able to walk.

Carolers are invited after the caroling to share in some Yuletide goodies (gingerbread-persons, brownies, etc.). Elf Anthony Duncan is going to make homemade eggnog.

The Continuing Saga Of Tumbleweed Tech

Chapter IV

It was summertime, and very little was happening in the Province of Tumbleweed Tech. For, in the summertime, the air is too hot, and the brown haze too thick, to do very much. Up in the City of Sacraments, however, a great debate was taking place between the Prophet Jerry and the Makers of The Law.

The Makers of The Law wished to grant a pay raise to those who worked for the Government of the Land of Vision. However, the Prophet Jerry, having become a born-again miser, decreed that this was not to be. After much squabbling, the Makers of The Law won and a huge pay raise was granted.

In the province of Tumbleweed Tech, there was much rejoicing. Indeed, all the wisened and learned elders, and even the surfs who worked under them were happy, for they were among those who received a pay increase. There were also many peasants who toiled for the Land of Vision that also received pay increases. Also, those who worked for organizations associated with the Land of Vision eagerly anticipated the raises that they too would receive, for The Law required that they be paid the same as those who worked directly for the Land of Vision.

As summer gave way to fall, there was an increase in activity in the province of Tumbleweed Tech, and many peasants came seeking jobs.

"We're sorry," said the wisened elders. "While the Makers of The Law have increased your pay, they have given us less coppers to pay you with, so we can only employ a few of you."

Undaunted, the peasants sought work elsewhere in Tumbleweed Tech. Some were hired by the Perfectly Fouled-up Mess, a company under contract to operate the Building for Common Indigestion. And the peasants were happy. For while the Perfectly Fouled-up Mess was not bound by The Law to pay them the same as the other peasants, they were so bound by their contract with the Builders of Foundation, an organization associated with the Land of Vision that was bound by The Law.

And all was well.

Then, one day, the manager of the Perfectly Fouled-up Mess sought an audience with the Builders of Foundation.

"Our prices are among the lowest in the Land of Vision," he exclaimed, "so our costs must also be the lowest. If we must pay our peasants the same as the others it will leave us too few coppers for our treasure chest."

"This is so," replied several of the members. "we must let you have some coppers for your treasure chest. After all, we have an obligation to keep you happy."

"Wait one minute!" shouted the one lone peasant as he rose to his feet. "I, Sir Brewster of Carson, Leader of the Peasants' Parliament, have several questions to ask."

"First of all," Sir Brewster said, "is it not the intent of the Makers of The Law that all the peasants employed in the province of Tumbleweed Tech be paid on the same scale?"

"A private company is not bound by that law though," replied the Manager of the Treasury.

And a dozen pairs of shoulders shrugged in unison.

"Furthermore," Sir Brewster went on, "I have been informed that the Perfectly Fouled-up Mess has not been paying their peasant employees the proper amount of coppers to begin with. Is this not a violation of their contract with us, and are we not duty bound to enforce that contract?"

And a dozen pairs of shoulders shrugged in unison.

"It is time to vote," said the King of Tumbleweed Tech (who also leads the Builders of Foundation). "Those in favor of letting the Perfectly Fouled-up Mess pay less coppers to their peasants say aye."

And a dozen voices replied with "aye".

"Those against say nay."

One lone "nay" was heard from a learned elder who also sat as a Builder of Foundation.

"Those abstaining," said the King.

"I abstain," said Sir Brewster. "Why should I even bother to vote. It would only lend credence to this farce!"

"We have agreed then," said the King, "that the Perfectly Fouled-up Mess may continue to pay less coppers to their peasant employees as they are already doing."

After the meeting, Sir Brewster returned to his office in the Temple for Union. There, he encountered the Managing Scribe for the Tumbleweed Tracks.

"Did you know," he said to the Scribe, "that the peasants employed by the Perfectly Fouled-up Mess will now receive less coppers than the other peasants employed throughout Tumbleweed Tech."

"What?", asked the Scribe. "How is that possible?"

"The Builders of Foundation have ordained it so," replied Sir Brewster.

The Scribe, being one of those forced to eat at the Building for Common Indigestion and therefore concerned about the situation, started to ask questions. And for every question the Scribe had answered, or not answered for that matter, a host of other questions popped into his mind.

And the Scribe began to wonder about the strange and baffling deeds of the Builders of Foundation.

As the events began to unveil themselves to the Scribe, the scope of his questions expanded far beyond the mere issue of peasant employees. Indeed, the Scribe began to wonder how the Perfectly Fouled-up Mess even came to be the company to manage the Building for Common Indigestion.

And the Scribe asked many questions, and along with the Chief Scribe, sought many pieces of parchment from the Builders of Foundation.

While the Scribe was allowed to view some of the documents, he was not allowed to copy any of them. When he queried a wisened elder as to why he could not copy the mysterious documents contained "secrets" meant for the eyes of wisened elders only.

The Managing Scribe for the Tumbleweed Tracks can still be seen wandering around Tumbleweed Tech, seeking answers to his questions and enlightenment from his wisened elders.

And the peasants are still wondering about the strange and baffling deeds of the Builders of Foundation.

William Crutchfield Exhibition To Open At Arco Center For Visual Art

An exhibition of the paintings, prints and sculpture of nationally known California artist William Crutchfield will open at the ARCO Center for Visual Art today. There will be 41 pieces on display, including a 15-foot acrylic painting of a zeppelin, and a mahogany and cast metal number-and-alphabet sculpture.

Crutchfield is best known for his wryly humorous technological fantasies executed with meticulous technical precision. His images include a variety of machines — especially trains, planes and ships — lifted from the past. These modes of transport are displayed in unlikely or perilous situations, unable to perform their intended functions.

Crutchfield's comments on the machine age force the viewer to wrestle with taken-for-granted perceptions and face up to the idea that our technological world may be a pathetically flimsy illusion, subject to the whims of nature and fate. Crutchfield himself says of his compositions: "A lot of people have the idea things that are humorous are not deep. But that's not so. You can get many levels of meaning and be humorous, too."

Crutchfield was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, and studied in the U.S. and in Germany on a Fulbright scholarship. He has taught at both the Herron and Minneapolis Schools of Art, and has been guest lecturer at various art centers. Since 1967 he has made his home in San Pedro. The exhibition will run through Dec. 29.

Continuing in the North Gallery of the ARCO Center for Visual Art through Nov. 24 is "Alice Steinhardt: Painted Photographs."

The ARCO Center for Visual Art, located on B level of Atlantic Richfield Plaza, 505 South Flower Street, is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free and validated parking is available.

Railroad Station Photos Still On Exhibit At Library

A photo exhibit on loan from the Smithsonian Institute, depicting historical American railroad stations will remain on display on the first floor of the library through Dec. 3.

The display features color and black and white photographs of railroad depots, from the first railroad depot built in Baltimore in 1830 to those of the 1920's.

Historic railroad terminals are considered an "endangered species", as some of the finest have been demolished. The focus of the exhibit is not only on the architecture of the structures but also on the need to preserve these historic buildings.

The exhibit may be viewed during regular library hours.

Airbrush portrait by art major Greg Hernandez, in the Conference Room.

Painting on canvas, measuring eleven feet wide, by Professor of Art Don Woodford, recently installed in the Conference Room.

Revolving Exhibit Of Campus Art Opens

At the request of Dean Buchen, the new dean of Humanities, the Dept. of Visual Arts has begun providing the Humanities Conference Room and Dean Buchen's office with a revolving exhibit of student and faculty art.

Art works will remain on display for a quarter or two, then new works will be brought in. A committee of faculty art professors makes the selections.

Funeral Mass

Officers stand, imperially bored, while Sergeants limp tired men into weary segments of life.

We rustle toward a rambling semblance of straight and sag at the order "Rest" given by the Naval Padre who tells why so many of our friends have died. "God, Country and the Corps," but never a word that the order came from a man mad with heat.

A funeral toast of meaningless words, double talk and all insane. Deeply dead, and dying men, consigned to abysses of fear, listen asleep.

If the Lord is our shepherd, why didn't he keep the wolves away? And if the Lord is our Father, where is the paternal comfort to bind our wounded minds? And if the dead of our past hail us so, why can't we hear their cheering screams and yells?

When we are raised, on that unknown day, to stand by the rest of the dead, let God beware, and stand prepared to answer our questions "Why?"

Taps. Taps, melancholy and sad. More accustomed are we, to its soliloquy, when it lulls us to sleep and makes us all wonder how they can use it for death, and mix it with rest, when those two are not the same

Poetry Corner

A Note

How lonely it is to feel a love,
With no-one to feel it for,
And knowing this fact of emptiness
Feels loneliness even more.

Peace has forsaken my troubled heart.
Without it, I just can't give
My worthless life to this empty world,
A life that's not fit to live.

A smile here and a smile there,
Flowing tears beneath the eye,
A smile that turns into a sob,
Not getting the chance to die.

Shattered dreams, emptiness haunts my soul
And starves the weeping heart,
Forcing me into reality
Of Death's long, fatal dart.

An unspoken pain must reappear
And grow stronger every day.
I've begged for freedom and loneliness
And now my pleading must pay.

So many times I've cheated Death,
But this time I'll really try.
I've missed at love and I've missed at life—
But I won't miss my chance to die.

Ball Game

Playing ball with heads has moments
you could never know Unless you were there. And let them flip like a bowling ball form your hands in an effortless slide of ease from eye and ear sockets.

Subtle dangling grips from skulls aid the game and hide the fact that it is all a mocking of a Globetrotter trick of real throws guised in guile.

Satisfying thunks of unmitted hands fill the air with a leathery plunk relieving the fear of dropping the head and letting it splatter your legs

Someday, Oh God, make a more bendable skull,
so that I and my kind may enjoy it more when we are finished with the work of the day and dribble away the remaining peace before we fall off to sleep.

"Reardon": Successful Presentation Of Demanding Script

by Dawna Gregory

I attended the last dress rehearsal of "And Miss Reardon Drinks A Little", a CSCSB theatre production directed by Dr. William L. Slout and was truly fascinated with the performance set before me. I had completely forgotten my purpose for attending the play and caught myself totally involved in the action, but soon resituated myself and again found it difficult to concentrate on my review. Of my two choices, I decided to sit back and enjoy, because I could not pick out any details that drastically stuck out.

The stage direction worked very well in a theatre in the round style and I found it enticing and intimate. The natural unity within the set, lighting and costume designs were a whole, accented the moods, characteristics and supreme acting.

Most captivating were the performances given by Corinne Schnur and Vicki Smith. As Catherine, Corinne had a kind of suppressed, hidden power within her that took control of any out of hand argument that was taking place. She was very sly in her ways of poking at people and successful in bluntly revealing her thoughts. She held a special relationship between herself and Anna which (through excellent writing) beautifully blossomed in the third act. I find my mind blank trying to describe her, but am impressed by her consistent and wonderful performance.

Vicki, superbly portraying the role of Anna, revealed her quick changes of mood through innocent childishness and obsessed adult. As Anna, she was perceptive yet innocent and at times pitiful. There was true human emotion revealed though Anna and a response of empathy and understanding was required of her listeners' and observers.

Mary Kay Vincent, playing the part of Ceil Adams, appeared to have some difficulty in the beginning, but picked herself up once things got going. She revealed the hardness and arrogance of the typical school superintendent and had some good, touching moments.

Bob and Fleur Stein, played by Eugene Morse and Suzanne Kruk were truly delightful while Pamela Condos and Dell Yount were superb in their roles as interrupting the Reardon household.

Again, I am at a loss of words for a truly remarkable performance, but would like to congratulate the director, actors and technical staff on their excellent job of making "Reardon" a success.

"And Miss Reardon Drinks A Little", an adult dramatic comedy, is well worth anyone's time, and excellently reveals the funny, biting and touching relationship between the three Reardon sisters.

I urge one and all to attend this delightful interpretation of "Reardon" which will continue to run from November 13-17. Curtain is at 8:15 p.m. and tickets are $1.50 for students and Senior Citizens, and $3 for general admission.

Tickets Still Available For "Miss Reardon"

Good seats are still available for the second week performance of "And Miss Reardon Drinks A Little", Nov. 13-17.

All performances begin at 8:15 p.m. in the Theatre of the Creative Arts Building.

"And Miss Reardon Drinks A Little," a spirited adult drama about three sisters, is the second full-length work by playwright Paul Zindel who received the Pulitzer Prize in drama for his earlier off-Broadway show, "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds."

The play, directed by Dr. William Slout, opened Nov. 8.

reigning operatic lion, and both the music and somewhat racy story are typical of comic opera in France at the time.

A lascivious count is marauding around France, with designs on every maiden, wife or widow he sees. He sniffs bigger game when he learns that the beautiful countess Adele and her entourage have locked themselves into the castle of Formoutiers and have sworn to remain chaste until their menfolk return from the Crusades.

Ory is accompanied both by his young page Isolier, who genuinely loves Adele, and by his old tutor Raimaud, who attempts somewhat unsuccessfully to restrain his most unruly charge. There are mixups galore when Ory and his band of followers gain access to the castle disguised as nuns, raid the generously-stocked wine cellar, and eventually have to make their escape with split-second timing as the return of the crusaders is announced.

"Count Ory" is performed in English, and the Los Angeles cast is headed by two

Count Ory At Music Center

"County Ory," both musically and for its story, likely will become a favorite of the seven new productions to be brought to the Music Center's Pavilion in this 13th annual visit of the New York City Opera.

It's a royal battle of the sexes during the trying and unlikely times of the Crusades, and will be performed Dec. 5 and the matinee of Dec. 8.

"Count Ory" was Rossini's final comedy and it was only succeeded by one additional work, the grand opera "William Tell."

The comedy was written and first performed in 1828 in Paris, where Rossini was the

Pokers Stun Browns

by John Flathers

An impromptu crowd of around a hundred gathered to watch the thrilling rematch between the Cal State Browns and the Pokers.

The Browns, who walked over the Pokers 20-6 in game one, found themselves down 6-0 at halftime. The Browns, uncharacteristically behind on the scoreboard, just couldn't seem to get anything going in the first half. The Pokers looked very good though, and the breaks seemed to be going their way. An unrelenting rush on Brown quarterback Paul Lemire coupled with outstanding secondary protection was the main reason for the Brown's first scoreless half. The Brown's recovered somewhat and managed two touchdown strikes to Anthony Duncan and Ivan Glasco. But the Pokers' offense matched the Brown's with touchdowns by Richard and Steve Knowlton and one two point conversion by Bill Bair. The final score was 20-12. The loss dropped the Browns to 4-2 and a tie with the Pokers in the Blue Division.

In other Blue Division action, the Badger Bullets held off the Crusaders 16-6 in a battle to stay out of the cellar. The Crusaders amazingly scored their second touchdown of the year on a pass to Brian Johnson. The Bullets used a balanced attack to outdistance the Crusaders. Ron Lego led all scorers with 8 points; Jeff Adair had 6 and Alan Downie scored a two point conversion.

In the only rout of the day, the Tokay Goon Squad made the Red Brigade look pink by shutting them out 47-0. Tokay piled up a 19-0 cushion at halftime and then exploded for 28 second half points. The Brigade's beleaguered offense was never able to mount a serious threat. Seven players scored for Tokay including Duncan with 12, Savard and Holthe with 8, and Caber with 6. Final division standings are as follows:

Blue Division	Won	Lost	Brown Division	Won	Lost
Cal State Browns	4	1	Tokay Goon Squad	4	0
Pokers	4	1	Shandin Crazyhouse	3	1
Badger Bullets	2	3	Red Brigade	2	2
Crusaders	0	5	Frosh Commuters	0	4

The play-off pairings are as follows: Tokay vs. Crusaders, Red Brigade vs. Pokers, Shandin vs. Badger, and Who Cares? vs. Browns. Look for Tokay, Pokers, Shandin, and the Browns to win the the Browns and Tokay to play in the finals next week.

Village People Shut Out Tokay Shandin Wins With Five Players

by John Flathers

Sonya Jackson's two touchdowns led the Village People to a 14-0 Coed football victory over A-Tokay. The Village People scored their first touchdown and added a 2 point conversion by Nancy Ferretti to go into the second half with a 8-0 lead. One more touchdown and a tenacious defense was all the People needed to wrap up the victory Kathi Luster and Erv Caver put in outstanding efforts in a losing cause.

Shandin Crazyhouse, playing with only five players, outlasted Lethal Dose in an offensive aerial battle. John Flathers found Scott Burnett in the endzone for the first Shandin score. Shandin added another touchdown and conversion on the arm of John Bailey to take a 16-8 lead into halftime. Scott Charlesworth, of the Dose, led off the second half by throwing a touchdown strike to Glen Alberi to tie the score at 16 all. Then Shandin scored two more touchdowns, one to Lance Schweiter, and one of two 2 point conversions to Amy York to win the game 30-28.

In the Blue Division, Waterman Plumbers I completely dominated the Frosh Commuters in a 46-6 win. Richard Knowlton of the Plumbers topped all scorers with 18 points. Bill Bain was a close second with 14. The win upped the Plumbers record to 4-0 and clinched the division title for them. Troy Padgett had the lone touchdown for the Commuters.

The Mojave house championship was decided last week when the Moochers clobbered the M&M's 26-8. The M&M's were leading at half-time 8-6 but then the Moochers exploded for 20 second half points. Jeff Droessler had 3 touchdowns for the Moochers while Mike Oden added one of his own. Gary Harms scored the only touchdown for the M&M's. Nancy Stiller, Jim Ruffins, and Russ Castle Played hard but to no avail. The win clinched a second place finish for the Moochers in their division. Final division standings ended like this:

Blue Division	Won	Lost	Brown Division	Won	Lost
Waterman Plumbers I	4	0	Village People	4	0
Moochers	3	1	A-Tokay	3	1
M&M's	2	2	Shandin Crazyhouse	2	2
Frosh Commuters	1	3	Lethal Dose	1	3
			Badger Bullets	0	4

In the first round of the playoffs, Village People will play Frosh Commuters. Shandin-Moochers, A-Tokay-M&M's, Lethal Dose - Waterman Plumbers. Village People, Shandin, Tokay, and the Plumbers should all survive the first round. The championship game should pit the Plumbers against the Village People but Shandin has an outside chance to make the finals.

Earhart Defends Championship

by John Flathers

In Women's Basketball action, or inaction in this case, the Zip Ah Dee Doo Dahs forfeited to S.T.P. & N. The Why Nots? also forfeited to the Amelia Earharts and dropped out of the league altogether. Thus, the Doo Dahs will play S.T.P. & N. for the right to take the league crown away from the defending champs, the Earharts. S.T.P. & N. should beat the Doo Dahs and maybe, circumstances permitting, upset the Earharts. But I'm betting on Amelia Earhart to win their second title in a row. The championship game will be Nov. 21 at 3:00 p.m. in the gym.

Adria Klein Undefeated

by John Flathers

Adria Klein progressed through the regular season women's tennis play without a single defeat. Because of this record, Adria earned a bye through the first two rounds of play-off competition. Jan Moran, Donna Robinson, Susan Dziak, and Michelle Longo will have to fight it out for the privilege of playing Adria for the title. Any of the four has a good chance of making the grade with Michelle as a strong dark-horse. But whoever makes it will need a flawless game to take the title.
