Why Would Someone Run For Congress?
by Marilyn Heimbll
Why would a man voluntarily quit a good job, sustain himself and his family on a minimal income (like $600 or $700 per month), volunteer his services in various community organizations, and spend his spare time knocking on doors and getting to know the people in his community? There could be many reasons, but each would involve self-sacrifice and commitment to a purpose. In John Paul Stark's case, he has done all of these things because he is a man with a goal — to be a congressman.

In 1976 Stark's life was relatively normal. He was married, and he and his wife Donna had a daughter. Stark took a job as a representative for Campus Crusade for Christ allowed him to travel quite a bit. Then John states, "In August of 1976, I was watching the last night of the Republican National Convention. As I was watching it, I was really impressed for the need of Christians in government. For the first time in my life, I began to think of myself getting involved in politics."

During the following year, the Stark's spent a lot of time praying, thinking, and talking with others. Then they took the first big step. John Paul resigned his position with Campus Crusade, and he enrolled as a full-time student at CSUSB to finish the degree in Political Science which he had started previously at the University of Washington. He graduated in 1979 and is presently working on a Masters degree in Public Administration on this campus.

In 1978 Stark joined the campaign staff of Congressman Jerry Lewis to direct precinct activities and coordinate the efforts of several hundred volunteers. John Paul also became a legislative consultant for the San Bernardino Chamber of Commerce. In his spare time, he has tried to learn the needs and concerns of this community by knocking on doors and talking with people as well as getting involved in organizations such as the Mexican Chamber of Commerce, the

CSUC Trustees Oppose Jarvis II
Also Deal Setback To Students Seeking Seats
On RTP Committee
The Board of Trustees for the California State University and Colleges (CSUC) voted overwhelmingly to oppose the Jarvis II tax initiative at their meeting held in Sacramento on January 23. (See stories about Jarvis II on page 7.)

Citing the massive cuts in state budgets that would result if Jarvis II passed, Trustees talked of the irreparable harm such cuts would cause to the system. Projections are that the CSUC budget would be cut 20 to 30 percent if Jarvis II passes.

The Trustees will be setting up a committee to work with the Chancellor and others within and outside of the system to mount an educational program to inform the public of the implications of Jarvis II.

Teacher Shortage Coming
by Mark A. Kemenovich
English teachers currently head the growing list of personnel shortages in area school districts. A surge in teacher and teaching related job opportunities, is beginning now and is expected to continue for seven to eight more years, according to School of Education Dean Garcia.

The new competency examinations in English required for graduation from high school account for the unusual need for English teachers and the approaching retirement of a majority of local teachers and administrators accounts for the remainder of the projected vacancies.

For the first time in nearly eight years, Garcia said, his school was receiving requests for "single subject teaching credentials in English." Only one student teacher last year took an English position. The more stringent high school graduation requirements mandate more specific teacher educational background and preparation.

The wave of teachers and administrators beginning their careers in education, coinciding with the post-World War II baby boom, are nearing retirement. The average age of teacher and teaching related employees of the San Bernardino School District is given in the fifties. Many of these teachers were "imported" from the Midwest in the late forties and early fifties to make up for local staffing deficiencies.

The westward migration of many Americans to California in the last two decades also aggravated the shortages because of the unpredictable influx of newcomers.

Placement statistics for the School of Education have normally been good. Placement of graduates ranges from eighty percent for ECE to sixty three percent for secondary schools. All of these statistics include teachers and teaching related positions.

Another twenty to twenty-eight percent of the graduates accept positions as substitute teachers. The majority seem to move into permanent positions in the districts in which they work within one to two years of leaving college.

The figures given above only reflect percentages of graduates registering and seeking employment with the assistance of the college Placement Office.

Garcia indicated about seventy-five percent of students qualifying for credentials go through the placement office. Many of the other twenty-five percent have found jobs without assistance.

This unpredicted and projected boom in teacher positions will create a larger demand for admission to credential programs.

The once slow moving and tight teacher job market is thought to be ready to break open.

Garcia also mentioned increased interest in the School of Education's programs for administrators.

This is reminiscent of the situation five years ago when nearly forty percent of federal law enforcement personnel causing major disruptions in service and increased job opportunities in what had once been a very tight field.

CSSA Legislative Director Steve Glazer said that there is "a growing sentiment that students should be on RTP committees and the momentum is clearly with us."

The RTP issue is one of the most controversial to come before the Trustees in over three years. After November's vote faculty groups reacted violently. Throughout the state letters were written, resolutions were passed and the collective shout of faculty was voiced.

CSSA lobbying efforts were successful in getting a number of key votes and the attendance of Lieutenant Governor Mike Curb and Speaker Leo McCarthy — both of whom are constitutional members of the Board and supporters of the student position. The sudden appearance of McCarthy, who rarely attends Trustee meetings, came as a surprise to most of those on hand. McCarthy tore himself away from the speaker's stage to address the union in its entirety.

Garcia and the other CSSA leaders were unanimously in their praise of McCarthy, Devich and the other CSSA leaders.

"I know the people in my community? There could be many reasons, but each would in-
The World Situation

I don't think anyone really believes that there's no choice in the war. Every one wants one but everyone expects one. They're probably suffering from a lack of fear. But there is a chance that we might be looking at a real conflict. What happens if the current crisis with any sense of equality is a war? Is it a big war? Is it a small war? Is it a war that could go on for a year, or by closing campuses. (Guess who's on top of the hit list?)

I'm not going to tell you how to vote on Jarvis II, or give you a lot of reasons. I wish I only had to offer a simple observation.

War is supposed to be a simple solution to the problem. In this case, there were many predictions of doom. But all along, I think those who opposed it knew that they could live with it.

If the Jarvis II is voted on and government must live with the budget cuts, it is not the government. It is the Jarvis II who works in government and must live with the budget cuts is downhill. Not what I see. But the Jarvis II who works in government and must live with the budget cuts is downhill. Not what I see.
Writing Contest Near

The English Department again sponsors a Writing Contest. A list of rules follows for the 1980 competition. All entries currently enrolled at CSUMB are eligible to enter.

All entries must be typed, double spaced, on one side of white 8½x11 paper. The type must be clear and dark. Do not use erasable paper that smudges at the touch. Each entry must have a cover sheet giving the author's name, address and phone number as well as the title and first line of the work. The author's name or other identifying marks must not appear on the entry itself.

Cover sheets of term papers are to be countersigned by the professor to whom the paper was originally submitted to insure the paper will be submitted in a CSUMB course and not for credit.

On submission to the English Department, all entries will be numbered and separated from its cover sheet to allow anonymous evaluation.

An entrant may submit work in one or more of five categories: Single Poem, Sequence: Short Story, Essay, Term Paper. Entries may be in English, French, German, Spanish or other languages.

The contest closes March 1, 1980.

Seventy-five dollars in prizes are available to entrants of the best work. The committee will announce the winners on March 15.

College Lays Plans For Its Fifteenth Anniversary Observance

On Sunday, April 27, the college will officially observe its Fifteenth Anniversary. A day's activities to focus on this landmark in the growth of the College will be planned which will include an alumni banquet, arts and science demonstrations, children's fair and a musical and instrumental musical performances, drama productions, folk dancing, special library exhibits and much, much more.

On State: San Bernardino began its first year in September 1965. From less than 300 students sharing three buildings with 93 faculty and staff, the College has expanded to nearly 4,400 students and 23 buildings with over 700 faculty and staff.

Headed by Jeanne Hogendoorn who is serving as General Chairman, a central committee of 14 and its subcommittees are meeting on campus to lay plans for the many events which will be scheduled to run from 11 a.m. until early evening.

All College offices are encouraged to assist in publishing this official Fifteenth CSUMB Anniversary program and to use the anniversary emblem on communications and publications which are sent off-campus.

The central committee is comprised of Joseph Thomas, Irving Buchen, James Crum, Ernest Garcia, Johnnie Ralph, Edna Steiman, Mike Rose, Sheila McCellan, Lawrence Landis, Fred Newman, Loren Filbeck, Bob Lohnes, Mary Williams and Luella Cohen.

Wednesday's Dorm Programs

On Wednesday, February 6, 8 p.m. Dr. Judas Sanderson, a math professor at the University of Redlands, will be on hand in the Associated Students Housing Office to present a program called "Games of Chance." Dr. Sanderson will be discussing how the theory of probability can be applied to casino-type games such as craps, roulette, poker and blackjack. This program is intended to be a preliminary warm-up to the third Annual Casino Night to be held on Saturday, February 9, from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. in the SUMP room of the Student Union.

Also on Wednesday at 9 p.m. will be a topic presentation in the Arrowhead Residence Hall called "Relationships — Why Some Fall and Some Succeed." The guest speaker will be Judie Walker from the Counseling Center.

Weekend Activities

In addition to the activities planned by the Student Affairs offices, students are encouraged to attend the evening dance and the tradition of visiting various other campuses, their own included.

CSUMB Trustees Oppose Jarvis II

ed student input in the RTP committees but called the compromise "tokenism" and a "slap in the face to制度改革ers."

The Trustees also voted to urge the Governor and the Legislature to provide an 11 percent salary increase for all academic and nonacademic employees in the 1980-81 budget. The Governor's proposed budget calls for a 9 percent salary increase for state employees.

In other actions the Board of Trustees requested the Governor to issue a proclamation prior to March 1, 1980 declaring that the mandatory retirement age is voluntary retirement between March 27, 1980 and June 30, 1980 will receive an additional two years' service credit toward retirement. Further resolved that the Trustees have determined that there has been a curtailment of services within the CSUC and that an early retirement incentive program would serve the best interest of the state.

Approved an amendment to the 1980-81 Final Support Budget to include $400,000 for a Career Planning Program Chance Proposal which would provide a career counseling and career guidance program for 10 campuses. The remaining campuses would receive the system in 1981-82. State General Fund expenditures for this purpose would be reimbursed by an estimated $4 increase in the Student Services fee in the Student Services Fee beginning in spring 1980.

Resolved that the Standing Committee on M.A. in English

by Tim Hamre

The College has received approval from the California Post-Secondary Education Commission (CPEC) to offer a Master of Arts Degree in English Composition.

The degree will officially be available starting with the Fall, 1980 quarter. However, students are already being advised to contact the English Department which will apply towards the degree. There are currently about 10 students on campus interested in the M.A. program.

CSCSB will be the only campus in the CSUC system to offer an M.A. degree in Composition.

The program is designed for those interested in the teaching of composition, but may also benefit those who need expertise as government researchers, interpreters of public policy, editors or the like.

Cooperative offices have been pursuing approval for several years. Approval was granted by both the CSUMB Chancellor's Office and CPEC, the body charged with setting overall policy for higher education in the state.

Qualifications for admission to the program include a G.P.A. of 3.0 in all upper division English classes, and an undergraduate major in English or the completion of selected English courses.

The program consists of nine courses which are scheduled to be complete in the fall, 1980. A prerequisite for the class is that students have completed the course "Introduction to Approaches to Imaginative Writing" (Eng. 521). Theory of Rhetoric and Composition (611). Approaches to

Backpacking In The Grand Canyon

How does a backpacking trip into the Grand Canyon sound?

Continuing Education will offer a course that will take a small group of backpackers on a 5-day hike within the Grand Canyon region.

Enrollment is limited and pre-registration is required by Feb. 14.

The group will meet at the college Feb. 21 from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. in Room 129 of the Physical Education Building. The field trip will take place March 21-25.

Areas the backpackers will visit include; the Havasupai Indian Reservation, Havasu Creek, Supai Village, the Colorado River and three magnificent waterfalls.

While enjoying the scenery, participants will learn skills that include advanced techniques in backpacking, desert hiking and survival skills for "hard times," first aid, basic water safety and more.

The class will be lead by Chuck Reynolds, extension recreation instructor.

The Havasupai Indian Reservation is one of the most interesting outdoor locales within the Grand Canyon region of Arizona," explained Reynolds. "The spectacular scenery here includes breathtaking waterfalls, blooming cottonwood trees and the impressive red rock canyons. Perhaps the attraction that stands out most in visitors' minds is the limestone concentrated water."

"Another highlight of this 18-mile round-trip hike will be the beautiful confluence of the Colorado River and Havasu Creek," he added.

A prerequisite for the class is that students must have basic experience in backpacking and provide their own equipment and travel arrangements.

Further information is available by calling the Office of Continuing Education at 887-7527.

Administration Luncheon

More than 80 people attended the mid-year social for Administration majors, faculty, and staff last Wednesday. The buffet luncheon, held in the Student Union SUMP room from 12 to 2 p.m was paid for by Dean Hoverland and furnished by Vince's Peasant Palace. The luncheon gave students a chance to rub elbows with staff, faculty, and leaders of the business club. During lunch, Dean Hoverland introduced staff and faculty members, then spoke on the importance of an interpersonal relationship.

Interpersonal Attraction

Pete Chi meals at 12 noon in BI-101. Dr. Robert Cramer will speak on "The Contextual Issues in Interpersonal Attraction." The information discussed will focus on the role the social environment plays in developing an interpersonal relationship.
Spring was giving way to summer in the Land of Vision, and there was much activity in the City of Sacraments.

Many preparations were being made to receive a new savior for the Land of Vision. (The current savior, Prophet Jerry the Tightwad, had not been seen for the last six months.) The people of the Land of Vision had just spoken, and they had proclaimed a new prophet, Prophet Jarvis the Taxcutter. The Prophet Jarvis was very popular with the people, for he had just axed away a big chunk of their taxes.

I was in the City ofSacraments while preparations were being made to receive the new prophet.

I came across a worker who was busy hanging hundred-copper bills from a street light.

"What are you doing?" I asked him.

"We're decorating the streets to receive the Prophet Jarvis," he replied.

"Isn't hanging money from the lampposts a little excessive?"

"Well, we figured that if the Prophet Jarvis was not going to let us have enough coppers to really do some good for the people of the Land of Vision, we might as well Inter the streets with what little we do have. I mean, if we don't have enough to do a decent job, what's the point of trying to do the job at all?"

"I suppose you have a point," I replied as I moved on.

I came upon a group of peasants who seemed to be wandering around aimlessly.

"Are you lost?" I inquired.

"No," one of them replied. "We're just trying to figure out what to do with ourselves."

"What's the problem?"

"We came to the City of Sacraments to study the ways of government, so that in the future we may lead the people of the Land of Vision to greatness."

"And?"

"When we arrived we were told that the program we came here under has been eliminated due to budget cuts. Now we must return home to live out lives of mediocrity."

"So much for greatness," I replied, and moved on once again.

I walked into the high rent district and noticed a businessman hurrying along the sidewalk, carrying a suitcase. Hisurons were a mess and his face was burning open and many coppers fell out.

Having never seen that many coppers before, I hurried over to him with wide eyes.

"Can I help you?" I asked eagerly.

"No thanks," he replied, "I can do it myself."

"Well," I replied, "and just who are you?"

"I'm a vice-president for Axon Oil Co."

"What are you doing with a suitcase of coppers?"

"Are you kidding? Haven't you heard? A new prophet has been proclaimed, and he's going to dismantle many governmental programs. That will cause the economy of the Land of Vision to totally collapse."

"I'm taking my coppers and getting out of here before that happens!"

"But why don't you stay and use your wealth and power to help other people?"

"Other people? Who cares about other people?"

I came across an old man who was sitting on the curb weeping.

"Why are you crying old man?" I asked.

"What is a waste?"

"How's that?"

"I've spent my whole life working hard to give the Land of Vision one of the best systems of higher education that anyone ever saw. And what happens? That pompous new prophet has torn all that open and closed it for good."

"I'm sorry," I told the old man, "but I guess everyone else is just too greedy to worry about others the way you do."

I left him weeping there at the curb and moved on once again.

And then I saw him, Prophet Jarvis the Taxcutter.

Now, he wasn't riding on a white steed like most good prophets, instead, he was scurrying about the streets picking up all the coppers that the state worker had thrown there.

"What are you doing?" I asked him.

"Are you crazy? Look at all these coppers!" he replied as $3$ flashed in his eyes.

"But those coppers belong to the people of the Land of Vision!" I protested.

"Because it's all a waste! Just a waste!"

I came across an old man who was sitting on the curb weeping.

"Why are you crying old man?" I asked.

"What is a waste?"

"How's that?"

"I'm like the King of Id. I have no limitations anymore."

"What's your greatest asset?"

"I get offers."

"Do you like what you do?"

"I get offers."
Time To Apply For Student Aid

Planning for college in the 1980's, for a growing number of students, means wrestling with complex financial aid forms as well as following documents required by college admission officers.

"Don't wait until you have been admitted to the college of your choice," Arthur S. Marmaduke, director of the California Student Aid Commission, advises students. "Apply now if you think you will need assistance.

"With college costs high and still climbing, no student should be discouraged from applying for financial aid. The family's individual circumstances are taken into account in granting state aid," says Marmaduke.

Appointments for 1980-81 Cal Grants, the state student financial assistance program administered by the Student Aid Commission, must be submitted between January 1 and February 11. College aid deadlines vary.

"Too many students miss out on aid they would otherwise receive because they do not apply, or because they submit incomplete applications. It takes time and patience to complete the forms. Complete Cal Grants application properly," Marmaduke points out.

Again this year, students may apply for aid from a variety of sources — both federal and state by submitting the one common form, the Student Aid Application for California (SAAC). The SAAC is used in determining eligibility for Basic Grants, state Cal Grants, aid from California public colleges and universities, and from most independent postsecondary educational institutions. The SAAC's are now available at high school counseling and college financial aid offices.

A student must complete a Cal Grant A to attend a vocational school for the purpose of acquiring a specific job skill — as well as in the pursuit of a career. Cal Grant applications are awarded by the Student Aid Commission on the basis of financial need and academic ability.

Cal Grant B aids both low and middle income students with tuition costs; Cal Grant B gives additional assistance (a small living allowance) to high potential students from minority and low-income families; and Cal Grant C's are awarded to students who wish to attend vocational schools and need help with tuition, books, and supplies. To qualify for a Cal Grant, a student must be a California resident and enrolled (or planning to enroll) in a college or university at time of application. Foreign nationals studying in the United States on a student visa are not eligible to compete for Cal Grants.

The California Student Aid Commission directs the state's programs of financial aid for college and postsecondary vocational school students. These programs include Cal Grants, State Graduate Fellowships, Bilingual-Crosscultural Teacher Development Grants, and the California Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

Opportunity Of Choice

"Careers for Liberal Arts Students" was the topic of a seminar held in the SUNP Room, Wednesday, January 23. The message that was delivered to the approximately 25 students in attendance was that a Liberal Arts Degree will offer the college graduate a broad area of choice in selecting a vocation. John Morris, Special Representative Medical Centers, of the Burroughs Wellcome Company emphasized that in his company alone they employ 200-300 Liberal Arts Graduates. This statement emphasized that there are opportunities open in semi-technical fields to graduates who do not possess particular specialized training. Mr. Morris also pointed out that most employers want to train employees to do the "job's way" and in many cases prefer a graduate with a broad scope of experience.

The representatives from the San Bernardino County Personnel Department, Mr. Theodore Derany and Ms. Jean Austin, discussed the career opportunities available in county or state government service. Mr. Derany emphasized that a degree is important as an indication of a person's ability to handle different situations. Ms. Austin stressed the need for practical experience in looking for and selecting job opportunities.

She suggested that a person should practice by applying for jobs even though they don't feel they have the experience. This offers practical experience in job seeking and job interviewing which can be of real value to the applicant.

The moderator for this panel was Dr. Ward McAfee, Dean, School of Social and Behavioral Sciences. The program was sponsored by the Early Career Advising Committee and the Freshman Services Office.

OSU Professor To Give Lecture

Successful therapeutic techniques in psychology will be the topic of a lecture to be given by an Oregon State University professor of psychology on Tuesday, February 5. Dr. John Gills, professor and chairman of Oregon State's psychology department, will speak at 3 p.m. on the fifth floor of the Library.

Students and community members are invited to attend at no charge.

Volunteers Needed

The Department of Mental Health is seeking volunteers for a program assisting the families and victims of child abuse and neglect. Persons volunteering may call Frances Stanley, Volunteer Coordinator, 383-2297 for more information or to make an appointment for an interview. Training for volunteers will take place in February at the Department of Public Social Services, 670 E. Gilbert Street, San Bernardino.

When asked about the VICAN (Volunteers In Child Abuse and Neglect) Program, Ms. Stanley stated, "Victims of child abuse and neglect is a concern we all share. The number of reported cases in increasing at a steady rate and we have to be aware that something must be done to help these children and their parents. Past methods of punishing the parties have done little to change their abusive patterns. Most of these people are repeating the abuse that they themselves received as children, and are acting in the only way that they know how.

"In order to prevent this cycle from continuing, we have designed a program in which we prepare volunteers and train them to work with abusive parents in a one to one relationship. This volunteer will be a friend to a child who's experienced abuse and will offer the caring and parenting that abusive parents themselves were lacking." Ms. Stanley said the kind of volunteer she is looking for is likely to be a person who has been a parent or who has experienced a good family background and who is willing to spend a great deal of time working with a family over a long period of time. This volunteer will also be able to "give" without the need for immediate reward. Volunteers are slow in coming in these families but continued interaction does foster meaningful relationships.

The first volunteer in volunteering should contact Frances Stanley at 383-2297 for an interview.

HELPline

Riverside's crisis line has a crisis — not enough volunteers to take calls from people who are troubled and need someone to talk to.

The HELPline, operated by the Riverside Volunteer Center, is recruiting volunteers who can take calls in their home or at the HELPline office. Volunteers are trained to help give emotional support and help the caller to think about alternatives for finding a way out of the problem. Often the volunteer will put the caller in touch with community agencies which can provide specialized information or help with such problems as alcoholism, drug abuse, physical or sexual abuse, domestic violence or depression.

The next training class for volunteers starts February 21. Classes will be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings for nine weeks at a location to be announced. For application, interview and more information call Frances Stanley. 383-2297 between 2 and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Deadline for applications is February 18.

"This class may be taken as part of an internship program through psychology or sociology departments at colleges in the Riverside-San Bernardino area. Credits are also available through University of California Extension. The class may also be taken without credit for free charge. Those enrolled are required to commit themselves to one year of volunteer service on the HELPline. A minimum of 15 hours per month.

The Volunteer Center is also taking applications for Volunteer Information and Referral Specialists who will receive the specialized training for handling non-acute calls. The information and Referral Service answers questions about where to find help such as shelters, help with food, child care, transportation, alcohol, drug problems, the aged, the handicapped, counseling, or any other community service.

John Paul states, "I think that there's a constituency out there that is not being represented in Washington. That constituency I'm talking about is moral people who are concerned about all the things that they see happening — things that were viewed ten years ago as wrong but are readily accepted today." He cited the issue of abortion as an example "just recently the Federal District Court in New York ruled that the Hyde Amendment is unconstitutional. The Hyde Amendment is the one that restricted the government from paying for abortions. Now it seems as if the courts are telling us that as taxpayers we don't only have to accept abortion on demand, we also have to pay for it." Starks believes the moral majority would like to react to that decision, and he wants to help them by representing them in Washington.

While working on his Master's thesis, John Paul has been doing research at Job Corps. He feels the experience has given him an opportunity to help with counseling the community more effectively. Starks summarized, "The Republican party in the past has had the image of being white, rich, and being a bunch of hard-nosed people spending money for the poor. I want people to know that I am a Republican who is concerned about the next generation as well as the needs of the community at large."

John Paul's family supports him in his goal to become a congressman. His wife Donna has contributed to their limited income by legalizing legal abortions part-time. Stark notes that fact that Donna is conscientious about the fact that she's doing something I'm making all the difference in the world. I don't believe I could do it if she didn't really want me to." John Paul has to spend time with his daughters, Susan, 3, and Kelly, 9, months, in between his campaign appearances. "People who try to run for any major elected office, work full time, and run a campaign are rarely home, but the fact that I'm working full time on the campaign leaves a good bit of time for my family."

John Paul realizes that he will have an uphill battle to win the primary and the general elections for the representative from the 36th Congressional district. He states, "I'm going for broke. I have spent two years working on this campaign, and I believe I have a good chance to win. The theme of my campaign is that I am different, someone who will give 100% for what is right."

The Challenge of The '80's

an editorial by Herb Nickles

The educational process in the United States has been affected by changes in social values, political attitudes and technological advancements over the past 30 years. As we enter the decade of the 80's, educators are predicting a next wave of technology which will have a greater effect on education than any other development this century. Of course, they are referring to the computer.

Computers are rapidly becoming commonplace in our society. In 1979, Detroit offered new cars with on-board computers. Microwave ovens were controlled by microprocessors which read cooking information from magnetic recipe cards. The environment in our homes could be controlled by an inexpensive computer minimizing fuel usage, and Radio Shack reportedly sold 200,000 personal computers.

It is already estimated that 50 percent of the public high schools in the United States are teaching mathematics using a computer. Within the next five years every secondary school and most elementary schools will be using small computers in all segments of the curriculum.

The effect of microcomputers on business and industry will also be substantial. A 1975 survey conducted by the Chancellor's Office indicated that 41 percent of college graduates would be required to have computer training. This same survey projected that this figure would rise to 62 percent by 1980. That is this year's graduation class. By the end of the decade nearly all graduates will use computers in their jobs.

It is quite obvious what this means to us as educators. Within the next few years we will be getting new students who have had some exposure to computers and will expect to use the computer as a resource. Also more and more employers will demand computer experience as requisite for employment. It is imperative that we act now to meet the challenge of integrating the computer into the curriculum.

I urge every dean, department chair and faculty to begin immediately to enhance computer literacy requirements in each discipline and as a general education requirement. As a small college with substantial computer resources, I think we have a better chance of being able to meet this challenge than many institutions, but we must begin now.

Bilingual Teaching Grants Available

Graduate students and teachers who would like to become qualified to teach in a bilingual classroom, and need financial aid in order to do so, may apply for a California State Bilingual-Crosscultural Teacher Development Grant.

This year the application deadline is Feb. 11, according to Arthur S. Modular, director of the California Student Aid Commission. Students may obtain the general Student Aid application for California (SAAC) by date, along with a Bilingual-Crosscultural Teacher Development Grant application.

The State's bilingual grants range up to $3,000 per year for tuition, fees, books, and living expenses, depending on the applicant's financial need, and may be renewed for one additional year.

Winners are selected on the basis of financial need, oral bilingual skills, and the ability of the applicant to become a bilingual, authorized teacher within two years.

The competition for the grants is open to junior and seniors in college, graduate students, and certificated teachers who are seeking bilingual teaching skills.

Applications for the State Bilingual-Crosscultural Teacher Development Grants are available at any of the above schools, by writing directly to Heidi Lazzaratto, Program Supervisor, California Student Aid Commission, 1410 Fifth Street, Sacramento, CA 95814, or calling (916) 322-2807.

UPC's Kessler Opposes Jarvis II

The president of California's largest pro-teacher union called Governor Brown and legislative leaders to "stop playing political games and stand up to Howard Jarvis and his Corporate front group." Dr. Warren Kessler, president of the United Professors of California, said, "There is no reason for California citizens to choose between continued tax inequities and drastic reduction of services. It has gone too far. Jerry Brown should get the hell out of town and come back to support a serious progressive tax reform package including an increase in bank and corporation taxes and an elimination of income tax loopholes."

Kessler said he has advised Jarvis to debate his income tax cut initiative on all of the state university campuses, made his comments at a meeting of the CSUC Board of Directors. The Trustees of California meeting in Sacramento this week and are considering a response to the Jarvis II initiative.

"Corporate supporters are getting away with tax robbery while the Governor is campaigning for President and Assembly leaders are paralyzed by the speak easer context. I am sure the trustees will consider tuition if Jarvis II passes, but that would be a senseless tragedy]\n
Since 1959 business's share of state and local taxes has dropped from 57 percent to 37 percent in public expenditures, including quality universities can be sustained if business and the wealthy are asked to pay their fair share. Jarvis II will reduce Califor­nia's tax base by the level of Mississippi's. The Governor and the Legislature must stop playing political games, stand up to Howard Jarvis and enact a serious, progressive tax reform which increases the actual taxes paid by business and wealthier citizens.

Governor Brown has asked all state agen­cies, including higher education, to prepare a budget with 30 percent reductions for the continuing state budget.

Kessler said his union is flatly opposed to tuition and will probably support the Tax Simplification and burocracy Reduction propos­ed for the November '80 ballot, which would raise the minimum exemptions on the in­come tax, close loopholes, increase bank and corporate taxes and give an income tax cut of 90 percent to California taxpayers.

Bank of America Establishes Scholarship

Beginning with the 1980-81 school year, Bank of America, will establish a two million dollar fund. The earnings from this fund will be distributed as need-based aid in order to provide scholarship assistance to seniors in the California State College and University system, as well as California Independent universities and colleges.

Bank of America scholars start with two fold, first to recognize and encourage excellence in education and to express its gratitude to millions of the state's college and university students, by providing the state with so many productive and responsible citizens.

For the California State University system, it is estimated that four to seven $500 Bank of America scholarships will be distributed to each of the 19 campuses, depending on the size of the student body.

Independent California Colleges can expect the students for each school currently associated with Bank of America. The amount of the scholarship will be close to the yearly cost of tuition. CSCSB should receive four to seven scholarships, according to Ted Korn, Director of Financial Aid.

The scholarships will be limited to students in their senior year, California residents, and those with financial need. And two fold, banks the same full-time basis. There will be no restriction on course or majors.

Students for these scholarships will be based on merit, requiring an accumulative grade point average of 3.25 or better.

Students interested in applying for the Bank of America scholarship should contact the Financial Aid Office in SS 143 for application details.
Chancellor Dumke Speaks On Jarvis II

The following is the text of a statement presented to the CSUC Board of Trustees on February 5, 1980 by Chancellor G. Skye Dunke. It is a prelude to his statement on Jarvis II.

115,000 students have participated in this pioneering work. This New Approach did much to establish our stature as an education leader in the nation. We developed an international program, different from all the others, in that it was a solid academic experience, an integral part of our Extended Degree program, and in our Consortium, and we have constantly evolved and adapted and expanded our university. Anyone who has attended our University in the last thirty years will be somewhat familiar with our past, present, and future.

The following is the text of a statement presented to the CSUC Board of Trustees on February 5, 1980 by Chancellor G. Skye Dunke. It is a prelude to his statement on Jarvis II.

Clearly the baccalaureate degree, for the sake of both students and public. At present, the CSUC turns out 5 percent of the total number of baccalaureate degrees awarded in the state, and the majority of bachelor's degrees in California.

The CSUC has now graduated more than three million students since the Donohoe Act was passed. These graduates are now in positions of leadership and prominence in society, and others will follow. The importance of our contribution to the state's economy is repeatedly emphasized when, in response to our plans for curricular improvement, we indicate the likely need for increased staff and facilities.

The consequences of those tax cuts on California State University and Colleges, the University of California and the Community Colleges would be serious. The Board of Trustees, State Legislators, and the Governor's Staff on Jarvis II and the California Postsecondary Education Financing Act, have been kept informed of the possible impacts of Jarvis II on the California State University and Colleges.

On Jarvis II

As the President of The California State University and Colleges, I will make my fellow students how to vote on Jarvis II. I can relate comments made by the Chancellor's Office, the Board of Trustees, State Legislators, and the Governor's Staff on Jarvis II and the effect it will have on public higher education.

It is a foregone conclusion by all, it seems, that Jarvis II will pass there will be tuition and large budget cuts. The latest estimates, which are still preliminary, on the level of tuition would be somewhere between $300 and $1,000 a year. The Board of Trustees, State Legislators, and the Governor's Staff on Jarvis II and the California Postsecondary Education Financing Act, have been kept informed of the possible impacts of Jarvis II on the California State University and Colleges.

"California Fix", a large mixed-media work by Roger Lintault involves a variety of elements put together with the technical precision and the cerebral basis that characterize Lintault's work. One side of the work includes a clauded floor map of California, with the following: black-littered in graphite.

TO DAYS WEATHER REPORT CONSIDERABLE CLOUDINESS WITH LOWERED EXPECTATIONS AND UNENDING RHECTORIC EXPECTED TO PREVAIL UNTIL AT LEAST 1982.

Pressures such as "lowered expectation" are being used frequently in reference to the 1980's, for the beginning of a new decade has forced into sharper focus the rapid changes taking place today.

"California Fix" evokes not only such changes and issues, but the popular id phrases used in references to them.

Watercolor Exhibit Brings back "Bit Of The Past"

During the last few years, Orange County experienced extremely rapid growth. In the process, many of the county's famous old homes and historical sights lying in the path of modern industrial expansion have been destroyed.

Though no longer standing, a number of these famous homes and sights have been preserved in a collection of watercolor paintings by Charlotte White of Rialto.

Her exhibit of 34 paintings will be on display in the Library Feb. 11-29.

"In 1975 I began thinking about what I could do for the Bicentennial celebration the following year," she explained. "I decided I could use watercolor paintings to preserve some of the country's historical sights."

"Working with the Santa Ana Historical Preservation Society, I had to paint many of the homes no longer in existence from photographs," she added.

Among the paintings of buildings no longer standing are: several personal homes, the Santa Ana Public Library and St. Anne's Inn.

Her watercolor of a Wednesday evening band concert in Santa Ana's Birch Park pictures a scene which began in 1908 but has long since been discontinued. "This painting interested the city of Santa Ana so much that they bought a copy as reference in case they decide to rebuild." Another painting of particular interest is that of the Joseph E. Pena house, home of the late Santa Ana's Salldebok Inn.

Paintings of areas that can still be seen include: the Balboa Pavilion, San Juan Capistrano Mission, Santa Ana's first brick house and a number of older private homes, many of which have been preserved by the Historical Society.

Each painting in the show has been thoroughly researched and is accompanied by a historical bit of information.

Mrs. White, a former resident of Tustin and Santa Ana, has been involved in the arts all her life.

For many years she was active in music circles, composing her own work, teaching piano and organ, and singing for many southland radio stations and some of the big bands.

She studied commercial art at Mayer-Booth College of Commercial Art in Chicago and has worked as a costume designer and in a photography studio.

Most recently she has turned her interests to painting with watercolors and oils.

Ceramics from the Permanent Collection. Over 150 ceramic objects selected from the Museum's permanent collection are on exhibit in the Decorative Arts Gallery on the fourth floor of the Museum's Ahmanson Gallery through February 24. The exhibition illustrates the development of the ceramic art in pottery and porcelain from its Renaissance beginnings in the 16th century in Western Europe and America.

A highlight of the exhibition is a large charger, or platter, decorated with low-relief swans, from the famous Swan Service created for Count Bruhls of Saxony by the eminent sculptor Johann Joachim Kaendler. The platter, bearing the arms of Count Bruhl in enamel and gold, illustrates the sculptor's proficiency with "hard paste," or glass-based, porcelain baskets produced during the 1760's and considered to be two of the finest examples of this difficult medium.

Examples of the work of Gertrud and Otto Natzler are on view in the Decorative Arts Gallery on the fourth level of the Museum's Ahmanson Gallery.

The exhibition is the first West Coast showing of the wood engravings by Nast, one of the most influential individuals of his time.

The artist, who created the elephant and donkey symbols of the Republican and Democratic parties as well as the American dollar sign, is best known for his caricatures that contributed to the destruction of Boss Tweed's infamous Tammany Hall Ring in New York.

Recent Acquisitions: Prints and Drawings. The exhibition of twelve recent acquisitions dating from the 16th through 1970's includes a trial proof of his archetypal Pop icon "Standard Station" (1966). Prints and Drawings. The exhibition continues through Feb. 16. The Los Angeles County Museum of Art is located at 5905 Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles hours: Tues.-Fri. 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Sat. and Sun. 10 a.m.-6 p.m. (Closed Mondays.) Gallery hours are Mon.-Fri. 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 to 3 p.m.

"Downtown Los Angeles Underwater" At ARCO Center for Visual Art

A six-by-20 foot imaginative scene of downtown Los Angeles submerged in the Pacific Ocean is the central work in an exhibition of large-scale mural proposals by painter Terry Schoonhoven. The exhibition, at the ARCO Center for Visual Art, includes drawings, models and photographs of nine other murals by the artist.

Schoonhoven is best known for his association with the Los Angeles Arts Squad, a group which designed and executed outdoor murals in the Los Angeles area. His murals on Windward Avenue in Venice and Ile de Californie on Butler Avenue in Santa Monica are two of the most renowned works.

The Schoonhoven show runs through Feb. 16.

Soccer Scores 26 Points In Aches And Pains Win

Soccer scored 26 points to lead Aches and Pains to a 68-39 victory over Bare Aspirins in Wednesday's Co-ed Basketball game.

Bare Aspirins never seemed able to set up a defense in time. Pain's fast break would get the ball down the court, and in the ensuing chaos, make their play before Asporns could get organized.

The Aspirins had very balanced scoring with Ski Kemmerling bagging 9 for the team. High Mike Smith, Jack Amstrong, and Al Laragione all had 3 buckets apiece.

Hutchins and Jackson Dominate 2:2 Basketball

Hutchins and Jackson defeated Eru Wayne and Sonja in a close game.

Wayne and Sonja defeated Eru Tomlinson and Mary Bosley 7-1 and 7-4 to dominate the second week of the season.

Paul Lanfer and Julie Hoover defeated the team of Al Abidin and Rene Radzykewycz in games one, but dropped the next two to lose the best of three series. Julie was not quite up to form and she and Paul should be tough to beat in future games.

In the other scheduled game Steve Kavanagh and Nancy Stiller notched Hutchins and Jackson.

Paul and Julie scored over three points in one game.

All the teams, whether they win or not seem to have a lot of fun on the court. Third week action begins at 12 noon, Feb. 5th, in the Gym.

Olympics As A Weapon?

"Russia has invaded Afghanistan." Anyone who professes to have not heard about this situation or the resultant repercussions must be either a Russian, or has been away in deep space with Captain Kirk and the Starship Enterprise. This incident is stirring immense controversy in the sports world. Many say that the United States and the western world should boycott the games to teach the Russians a lesson.

It is a gross decapitation of the Olympic ideal to boycott the summer games. The games were organized as a non-political, peaceful arena for athletes from all countries to compete in. They were not meant to be a political weapon to pressure other countries. Granted, they are somewhat politicized, but that is no reason for us to make them more so. On the contrary, we should be endeavoring to make less political. We must not use a political weapon to pressure other countries. We must not use the political weapon to pressure other countries. We must not use the political weapon to pressure other countries. We should not use the Olympics to accomplish political goals.

What about athletes? They have trained and worked for three and a half years for the honor of representing their respective nations. If we now dash their hopes and dreams with a boycott, it might seem half-hearted and we should be in the vanguard of the movement. We should make every attempt to subscribe to the games' high ideals of peace and friendship.

The Soviet Union is wrong in their incendiary subjugation of Afghanistan. The United States and the rest of the world should apply pressure in other non-Olympic methods. We should make known our repudiation through normal diplomatic channels, economic sanctions, and public denunciation by the government and the press.

The issue should be resolved in the United Nations. The U.N. exists as an international body to settle world disputes; we should not use the Olympics to accomplish political goals.

The United States professes to stand for all that is considered right and good. We should make an attempt to subscribe to the game's high ideals of peace and friendship.

Charles Tickner, America's brightest hope for a medal in men's figure skating, will have to out-distance Russia's Vladimir Kovalyev, Britain's Robin Coatings, and Jan Hoffman of East Germany in order to win the Olympic gold.

Speed skating has traditionally been the top sport for the United States in the Winter Olympics and this should change in 1980. Eric and Beth Heiden, a brother-sister combo from Madison, Wisconsin, have a chance of winning nine gold medals between them. The Heidens, current world champions, will be supported by three medals of the 1976 Innsbruck games: Peter and Lisa (Pouline) Muller, and Dan Immerfall.

It has been 20 years since an American team has won Olympic gold in ice hockey. That was the last time the games were held in the United States at Squaw Valley, California. Now that they are back in the states, America, once again, has the top amateur team in the world after winning the pre-Olympic tournament.

Although they are young, our team is very quick and knows how to play both the European style skate well, use all of the ice, and lock for openings. The U.S. squad is led by Wisconsin's Mark Johnson, Mike Ramsey of Minnesota, and Boston University's Jim Craig. The home risk advantage should help the Americans skate to gold this year.

The Alpine skiing events are up for grabs at Lake Placid. The highest hopes for the U.S. men's team lay on the skis of Phil and Steve Mahre, who will try to bring the men's squad a medal. Something the men have not done since 1964.

The women's squad has a much better chance in Alpine skiing. This year should be no exception. Cindy Nelson, a medalist at Innsbruck, has a shot at gold in the downhill. A surprise for the women could be Irene Epke, the U.S. national champion.

An effort should be made to bring the games back to their roots and include those athletes who receive excessive amounts of money from corporations and those behind the Iron Curtain who are literally athlete workers.

I favor two permanent, neutral sites for the winter and summer games. Changing sites is only economically and politically expedient anyway. A possible site could be Greece, where it all started. A neutral site gives less chance for use as a political instrument. I would eliminate national uniforms, national anthems, and tightening rules on participation to exclude those athletes who receive excessive amounts of money from corporations and those behind the Iron Curtain who are literally athlete employees of their respective countries.

An effort should be made to bring the games back to their roots and extend, and we should be in the vanguard of the movement. If we boycott the games we will be using them as an idle political prop which will only lower their prestige further.

The United States should stand for all that is right and good. We should make an attempt to subscribe to the game's high ideals even if others do not.

To not do so is to go against the grain of our national conscience and honor. And a country without high principles, ideals, and honor is not really a country at all. It is just a place where people live.

Veteran's Office Survey

How Do You Feel About The Draft?

The Veteran Affairs Office, under the direction of Mr. Ray Sayre, is interested in the views of students in regard to the draft, the military and other subjects dealing with veterans and potential veterans.

This survey has been prepared to determine student views on the draft and other questions relating to it. This is not an official survey - it is designed to satisfy our curiosity and give us a larger base of information to base our decisions and stand on.

1. Do you see the need for registration for the draft?

2. Would you approve a plan for "alternative" national service, i.e. national health service, Peace Corps, Vista, etc. as an option to compulsory military service?

3. If registration for the draft or alternative national service is required, should both men and women be required to register?

4. If the law required you to register, would you?

5. If registered, would you accept or reject induction if drafted or called for alternative service?

Are you Male?________ Female________

How old are you?________

Are you a veteran?________

Please return completed questionnaires to the Veteran Affairs Office or The PawPrint. Leave them under the door if necessary. The PawPrint will publish the results.
