Jim King is worried about the lack of progress young Black people are making in school and on college campuses of higher education.

Many of the Black people graduating from college today haven’t graduated much in the last 15 or so years,” says King, district manager for Southern California Gas Co. and one of 12 Blacks recently bailed out as most influential in the local Black community. “This, despite their being, they have a duty to get education today.”

It was this concern that caused King to become a catalyst in the formation last year of the Black Future Leaders (BFL) program. The program, he hopes, will pick between 30 and 50 young Blacks from San Bernardino and Riverside counties each year to participate in a highly successful week-long project. Through a “mentorship” program involving local Black leaders, the project will try to foster respect for academic excellence and instill self-worth. The program is paying special tribute to Dr. Carlton Goodlett, publisher of the Black Press of America.

Dr. Carlton Goodlett

“Since 1962, the Black Press of America, the membership of which includes the California Black Press Convention, provides the national and international Black News publication; assists with papers’ print and distribution; and represents its members in national affairs, as the Church and Family, Cultural and Educational Institutions,” he said.

The theme for this year’s WCBA convention is “What Makes the Black Press Powerful?” and will cover the relationship of the press with such entities as the Church and Family, Academy, University, Educational Institutions.

The dinner tribute to Dr. Goodlett for his pioneering work in journalism and the role of minority papers in the civil rights movement of the 60’s,” King said.

“President’s Citation for Outstanding Community Volunteer” to Assemblyman Jerry Eaves To Be Honored

The 66th Assembly District will be represented by the Riverside Chinese Pavilion, which is located at Seventh and Orange Streets near the Riverside Public Library. It was pure coincidence that the parade was scheduled for October 10, the day of the Chinese Revolution 10/10 Celebration. All of the dedications plans call to center around this date,” said Picolino committee project coordinator Karen McSpadden.

West Coast Black Publishers Association Honors

Dr. Carlton Goodlett

“Dedicated to the cause of the people. That so good shall lack a champion and we shall not be unaware of the deceased words of Dr. Carlton Goodlett and is precisely what the West Coast Black Publishers Association is paying special tribute to him as a pioneer publisher and leader in the cause of social justice and world peace,” stated Hildred Hampt, president, West Coast Black Publishers Association. Dr. Goodlett will be honored at a banquet on Thursday, October 22 at the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco, beginning at 6 p.m. The banquet is held in conjunction with the WCBA 40th Annual Convention.

“The West Coast Black Publishers Convention provides a forum for the Black press to discuss relevant issues and offer ways to enhance viability in the community. In this respect Dr. Goodlett has published his works, his books have all been a lack of books that have truly been the voice of the Black community,” stated Hampt.

Dr. Carlton Goodlett, publisher of the newspaper business since 1948 as Publisher and Editor of the Sun Reporter. In 1972 he
There are wild cries for welfare reform in this country amid the hysteria of the so-called new conservative movement. Everyone talks of welfare cheat but no one sees the real estate industry, the clothing industry, the food industry or the medical industry attacking the welfare system because they gain most of the money. Welfare is as much a subsidy to these industries as it is to the men, women and children who are the focal beneficiaries of the system.

Those who benefit most from welfare are the professionals.

Hollywood's welfare system of its own inherent red tape gets a signed for work that is mostly nonproductive. Though a major part of Hollywood's welfare system manifests itself in featherbedding jobs, the most glaring existence of welfare in the film world is in the skewed system known as development.

Development is a broadly based term which includes development stories, scripts, productions and the like sponsored or bought by studios and production companies as a means of nurturing the point of being a financed movie ready for distribution and making money. The major studios each spend between $75 and $150 million dollars a year for development. During that time money has been dispensed which is both a subsidy to those in need and a tax on anyone who has the money. Even when a film does do well it never appears on the screen. Even the few that do have a 78 percent failure rate for the first year released in Hollywood big money.

The normal time it takes between the presentation of a story or idea to producing a film is 18 months. During that time money has been dispensed and people have been paid.

Annually studios carry 100 to 200 projects in development month after month. A holding fast of a major studio was quoted in an article in the L.A. Times last September on thelabelling of Hollywood's development glut. He said, "If by for the least efficient part of the movie businesses. It is simply indefensible." He added.

A chart accompanying the above mentioned article listed projects in development as of September 25, of last year for studios. The projects ranged from Warner Bros., with a high of $200 to $200 million with a low of 17. Warner Bros. had 30 projects beginning with the letter "M". That figure equals the full development function for The Cannon Group, second lowest in development projects. Collectively, 90 studios had 907 projects at various stages of development. They had ultimately released 156 pictures and of those pictures only 103 were pictures developed in houses. Twenty-five of the pictures were picked up from other sources.

Using figures from the major studios the chart has divided a released a development ratio of 15.3 percent based on the facts of the moment. The Cannon Group which has developed 21 of its 26 releases in houses and who have only 36 projects in development has the highest ratio, 70 percent.

Stories which has developed 8 of its releases in houses and who has 72 projects in development was a distant second with 47 percent.

From that is a big drop down to 11 percent with Columbia, Paramount and Universal lumped together at that ratio. Hollywood is in next with a figure followed by Tri-Star (7 percent), MCA-UA (6 percent) and 20th Century Fox with a bow of 4 percent.

I cite these figures to show the low percentage of fruition of those projects started in the first place. This leads to the real point. Less than 30 of the projects in development are Black projects. Warren Bees, has more projects that start with the letter "M" than all these studios combined have in Black movies. Another major point is that less than 50 of the projects have a major Black character. Considering the low state of development to production, the studios are saying to Black Americans that they don't intend to make Black movies or movies with major Black characters in them.

As America asks Blacks to look at movies with all White casts, why can't we ask Whites to look at movies with all Black casts?

To be fair, development does serve a planning and development function for the industry. It does serve to develop relationships with new and emerging talent with potential future relationships.

DOE Issues Guide on Cancellations Non-Renewals And Premium Misquotes

Ever had an insurance policy canceled or not renewed? What can you do to prevent such a premium misquote? What can you do if this happens?

The Department of Insurance thinks it's important for consumers to know all about these situations. And it has outlined several new guides, "What Are Your Rights?", specifically dealing with cancellations, non-renewals and premium misquotes.

"We want to get the word out on this topic. We've been concerned about protecting the privacy and legal rights of consumers," says Insurance Commissioner Kenneth Glover.

This 12-page guide contains valuable, basic information on a question-and-answer format to inform and alert policyholders.

The guide applies to all personal insurance policies (excluding life and health). It answers such questions as: What kind of evidence is collected when I apply for insurance? What can I do if I have a complaint?

Why So Many Different Translations Of The Bible?

Questions: Dear Pastor, Words and language. I spend a lot of time reading the Bible to learn more about God. I am a talkative person. I was given a Living Bible as a present, so I read it. At church most people use various translations. I would like to know why there are other versions. Which one is correct? Why are there so many translations of the Bible?

C.J., San Bernardino, CA

Answer: Unless you are a Hebrew or Greek speaker, you would have difficulty understanding the Bible in its original form. The use of God who inspired it to speak in the Bible did not speak God's Word to men (the Bible) did not speak Greek or Latin. The Old Testament writers wrote in Hebrew. The New Testament writers wrote primarily in Greek and some Aramaic. Because we try to convey the living word of God, it has been translated into our language—English.

The first complete English translation of the Bible was made by John Wycliffe and a few others somewhere between 1378 and 1456. The first complete English translation of the Bible that was printed from the press came in 1535. The King James Version or Authorized Version was the last and best known English translation of the Reformation period. At the direction of King James I, fifty scholars translated the Bible into English. We today do not talk with "Thee's and Thou's".

In which version have you examined the Bible? I recommend that you obtain a King James Version Bible and at the same time, read various translations. I would urge you to study the Testimony writers wrote in the New Testament for the reasons why it is so difficult to translate the New Testament. Many are translated into modern language. People enjoy the original meaning of their message in their own language. I pray God is giving you the Bible in English!

agent for Miller's brewery in Fulton, N.Y., said the purchasing staff like to be involved in doing business with Johnson. "After Mike shipped his first coal order, it was like our utilities people advised me that the Johnson product was some of the best coal Fulton has ever received," he said.

Bennett said, "Mike keeps us happy because he supplies a good quality product at a competitive price, and meets delivery schedules." Also, Mike is very professional.

Johnson encourages other small or minority business owners to approach major companies for business. "Be prepared, you do your homework on the company before you approach them and try to build a relationship with the company," Johnson advised.

Bennett said Miller also has minority vendors supplying such goods and services as fuel, chemicals, office supplies, industrial supplies, painting, safety supplies, and promotional products. "An area where we have a great need for minority businesses is in raw materials, which include raw materials, bottles, boxes, grades and packaging materials," he said.

Miller is a widely owned subsidiary of Philip Morris Companies Inc. Principal beer brands include Miller High Life, Miller Lite, Lowenbrau, Genuwine Draft, Magnum, Kaiser Brau, and Miller's specialty beers.

Health Hazards Of Dental Fillings To Be Discussed

A free public lecture titled "The Health Hazards of Silver-Mercury Fillings, Fact or Fiction?" will be presented Thursday evening, October 15, 1987, at 7:30 p.m., on the campus of Cypress College located at 9200 Valley View, in the city of Cypress.

The two-hour presentation, sponsored by the International Academy of Oral Medicine and Toxicology (IAOMT) and North Orange County Community College District's Community Services, will address the controversy over the safety of silver dental fillings and will be presented at Lecture Hall 216 on the Cypress campus. Featured speakers will include Murray Vimmy, D.M.D., David Kennedy, D.D.S. and John Collins, D.C., members of the International Academy of Oral Medicine and Toxicology.

Those who would like further information regarding the presentation can call the college district at (714) 471-4800 and ask for community services.

The IAOMT is a Canadian based non-profit organization composed of dentists, medical doctors, researchers and other concerned health care professionals who regard the use of mercury in silver dental fillings as a source of poison for millions of unsuspecting people. Doctors from around the world compose the IAOMT, and will be in the Southern California area for a three day symposium.

Since mercury is the main ingredient of silver fillings, and usually composes up to 50 percent of the filling formula, many dentists are refusing to use the material. Researchers have shown where the toxic element is released from the filling and causes the blood system. Many doctors are now convinced that the constant release of mercury into the body, suppresses the immune system and is therefore responsible for causing a host of disease.

The debate over silver fillings dates back to when the material was first introduced to this country over 130 years ago. The argument lay dormant for several years until new research showed where the toxic element was leaching out from fillings. Over the past few years, many dentists have encouraged patients to have their silver fillings removed. Such action has drawn criticism from the American Dental Association (ADA) who claims that silver fillings are safe and that doctors who tell patients to have them removed, are just doing so to promote new business.

The ADA does admit that an estimated one percent of the population has a problem with silver (amalgam) fillings. In 1976 they figure was estimated at five percent, but when it was pointed out that five percent was considered an epidemic, the ADA lowered their estimate to "under one percent."

Members of the IAOMT claim that there is no published scientific evidence for the safety of silver dental fillings.
