I became acquainted with Lorin Ward when we were in a Children's Lit class together last spring. Often when a new book was mentioned, Lorin would say, "Oh yeah, I've read that book to my kids." I was impressed that a father who was holding down a full-time job and a full college load would take time to read books to his children. One day he mentioned that he hadn't gotten all of his children's homework done because he had "two or three small children." I became acquainted with Lorin Jarvis, the blustery and brusque symbol of tax reform, co-author of Proposition 9.

I lost my composure for a moment, then recovered. "How does tuition help a poor family?" I asked. "How does it help their families?" Jarvis said, "That's why Proposition 9 is going to pass in California about 3-1." I couldn't believe he was saying that. Jarvis was a Physics major in his senior year at Brigham Young University where he realized that he was not going to be happy with his major. After he returned from a stint in Vietnam, he worked in the family business for several years. Then he decided to pursue the Bilingual Education major at CSUC. He is presently doing his student teaching and will have his credential in June.

Joyce was a junior at BYU when she married Lorin. While he was in Vietnam, she completed her degree and is now a registered nurse. When I realized that Joyce was the mother of nine children under the age of nine, I pictured a mother who could not afford to send its children to college.

Jarvis has campaigned for his latest initiative, Proposition 9, which would cut the average California's state income tax by 54 percent. Some have called this an ill-considered and blind swing of the ax at the state coffers. Jarvis calls it a swing for freedom — financial and political.

The interviews took place at the Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles office headquarters of the Tax Reduction Movement.

DAILY: What guarantees can you give me that I'll be able to finish my education if Proposition 9 passes?
JARVIS: I can't afford private education.
DAILY: Who do you want to pay? Have you got someone in mind that you would like to pay for your education? You know if you don't pay, everybody else like me has got to. You want me to pay for your tuition — I ain't going to do it.
DAILY: Do you think free education has served California well?
JARVIS: What we have in this school system is something but education — that we don't have. All the schools are in the business of manufacturing permanent welfare recipients. It's the biggest drag, the biggest boondoggle, the biggest corruption of public money in California.

DAILY: Why do you say that?
JARVIS: Because the records prove it. Sixty-three percent of the high schools (students) are functionally illiterate. In order for you to go to college, they have to redact the books to the eighth grade level because you can't read them. I believe in education, but if you pay all your tuition, I: as a taxpayer, still pay more than you do, bought the building and the ground that put the college there for you. I'm paying $2,000 so you can get in there for $1,200, and I'm not going to pay anymore.

DAILY: I've heard that part of Proposition 9's appeal is that it helps the little guy without much money. How does tuition help the poor who can't afford to send its children to college?
JARVIS: I was from a poor family. I worked my way through four years of college. I worked an afternoon shift at the Utah Copper Co., 365 days a year for four years. I rode an inter-urban train for 18 miles to college and I paid all my own way and I got straight A grades.

DAILY: How much does it help your campaign having the support of people like Senator Hallett and Republican leader in the state Assembly (Lt. Gov.) Mike Curb?
JARVIS: It helps because they're quite respectable people. We have some bright people, both Democrats and Republicans, and that's why Proposition 9 is going to pass in California about 3-1.

DAILY: Why does their public support help you, but having Gov. Brown against you not worry you?
JARVIS: Brown doesn't count for anything. He's a dead duck politically because he hooked up with (Tomm) Hayden and (Jane) Fonda and the public thinks they're gurus.

I don't give a damn what Brown does, no. He said he's going to vote against it — well, I'm going to vote for it, so I'm going to cancel out his vote. Of course, he may vote absentee because he hasn't been the state much in the last 200 days.

DAILY: While campaigning for Proposition 13, you made much of the support of the Nobel prize-winning conservative economist Milton Friedman. I read in the newspaper that he's coming out against Proposition 9 . . .

The only difference between the school system and the Mafia is that the schools steal more money.

Jarvis

Jarvis: He has not. You can read in the damn newspaper continued on page 2
Jarvis Swings His Tax Cutting Ax

JARVIS: It is better to let Proposition 9 pass in November 7, putting a ceiling on property taxes, while we move further to use the initiative process on specific taxes. At the same time, I will not raise Proposition 9 taxes.

DAILY: How about waiting for other laws already passed by the Legislature to take effect first? (The state Legislature has repealed the business taxes it passed last year and enacted cost-saving indexing so that Californians will not be pushed into higher brackets by pay increase -- two provisions Proposition 9 hopes to seal into the state constitution.)

JARVIS: The legislature never passed them until I filed Proposition 9. They passed them to try and dilute Proposition 9, and each of them has a clause in it that can repeal it at any time. So that is a big fat fraud. They're thieves up there.

DAILY: Do you think Proposition 9 really will result in cuts in government spending? or will taxes that can be cut (businesses and sales taxes) be increased?

JARVIS: No, it won't cut it a nickel (Proposition 13) didn't cut it any either, because your school has gone up by 50 percent and each of them has a clause in it that can repeal it at any time.

DAILY: But if you only earn $10,000 to $12,000, you only get about a 70 percent reduction in property tax (San Francisco Tax Board Figures).

JARVIS: That's not correct. I just told you what a tax of $15,000, you pay very little in income tax. We've never paid anything except the interest on it. That's the kind of a government you've got in San Francisco.

DAILY: During the Proposition 13 campaign, you were playing on people's fears.

JARVIS: Horsehockey. The only people who got caught in it were politicians, and I was playing on their fears. But the people, I wasn't playing on their fears at all. That's a real big fat fraud, and we believe a politician's dream after he's been smoking marijuana.

DAILY: I mean the fears of losing your house because of high property taxes.

JARVIS: I didn't have to play on their fears -- they were going to lose their houses. The only lies played on were the politicians, because he thinks he's got to get out of the marinated political grease and he thinks, "This guy's going to get himself and God, they're right -- this guy is going to get their job. They're going to go back to work shining shoes, where they belong." And that goes for a lot of professions too.

DAILY: What about the Tax Simplicity Act?

JARVIS: It's a fraud. It says we're going to put all the tax on business and none on people. When you raise taxes on business, it raises all prices.

DAILY: You say you won't pay any taxes of any kind to anybody anyway. They don't tell you that at that stupid college of yours because they don't want you to know that.

JARVIS: If you go to the May Company and buy a pair of shoes, do you think they tax the shoes on the pay? No way. What do you think Exxon does with the gas tax you pay. Every week they send it to the government? Do you drive a car?

DAILY: Yes... DASH! Jarvis, you're contributing to the unemployment in the United States, right? General Motors just laid off a lot of people, so you helped them. Is that what they teach you at Cal Poly? Why the hell don't you go to school over there (Japan)? You're buying their goddamned mainstream products. Tokyo ought to pay your tuition!

DAILY: Shouldn't I buy the best thing available to me? Why should I buy an American car?

JARVIS: Because it's the best thing available to you. You're a jackass to buy a Datsun. Anybody that has any brains don't buy a foreign car. You lose your ass and you'd deserve it -- you ought to know better. You need some education, maybe. I'd like to debate it with you.

DAILY: I'd appreciate it. After Proposition 13 passes, the spirit caught on around the state. Do you think this will happen with the income tax?

JARVIS: Yes, because the people are gradually getting intelligent -- especially the ones that don't go to school.

DAILY: A lot of the states have half the property tax we have. (Texas) has no income tax and they have better education and less crime. And they're making money. The only states that are doing better are the goddamned big Rolls Royce out there, a Mercedes-Benz, and call it education.

DAILY: Well, gas tax going up fast... because of the environmentists hurts the country prevent us from having oil and gas.

Ground Broke For New Child Care Center

Profile
by Tim Hamre

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the new Child Care Center were held last Friday at 9:30 a.m. in front of the Student Services building.

About 75 people attended the ceremonies, including the children of the center's present location at Kendall Elementary School.

Child Care Center Director Mary Ongaro opened the ceremonies by taking of how nice it would be to finally be on campus after a four year struggle to get funding for the center. She also introduced people who would be responsible for running the new center, each.

These included: President John M. Plau, Vice-President for Administration Joe Thomas, Dean of Student Kenton Monroe, Associate Dean of Student Services Bob Hammock, and Jack Causer, the architect of the building.

Plau also addressed the group about the time and effort that went into the project, and talked of the youngest group in the CSCSB family.

Plau thanked everyone involved for giving him a chance to prove that the city and county would work together. (Hammock was instrumental in getting the city and county to jointly fund the construction of the center.)

The speeches were followed by the groundbreaking ceremonies. Plau implanted the college's ceremonial shovel aided by Hammock, Causer, and several of the children.

Noted Writer To Speak On The Wonders Of The Universe

Leroy Tennison of Campus Crusade for Christ will be the guest speaker on this week's "Cults" on Tuesday, May 13 at 8:30 p.m. in the John S. Changing Room.

Tennison has studied this topic extensively and will share some of his insights on the psychological, social and spiritual implications behind the recent cult movement that has taken place in our country and abroad.

Some specific areas that Mr. Tennison will discuss are: beliefs and techniques regarding members, the "Moonie" church, the Guyana catastrophe, and a contrast between cults and Christian beliefs.

This should prove to be a very thought provoking evening. Both on-campus and off-campus students and their families are encouraged and welcome to attend this Housing Office sponsored program.

Soviet-American Relations Speaker

Mr. David W. MacDonald, Senior Strategic Forces Analyst in the Department of State's Bureau of Politico-Military Affairs, will visit our campus on Wednesday, May 14, 1980. He will conduct a seminar on Soviet-American relations and SALT II in Dr. Ackley's International Security and Defense Strategy class in LC-5 from 1-3 p.m.

The Village Idiot

by Shari Mills

Having not written an article in two weeks, I figured it was time to give an update on what is happening in Serrano Village.

First, the 4th annual Serrano Village Track Meet took place last Saturday. Since I am writing this before the event took place (this is last week, you do know), I am writing this before the event took place (this is last week, you do know). I do know, however, that Dennis Mondonca will receive special recognition and thanks for all of the time he puts in to these track meets each year. Without Dennis, Serrano Village would never have had the 1st annual Track Meet. Thank you, Dennis, and congratulations to this year's winners.

The second order of business is to remind everyone to attend the Spring Dinner Dance this Saturday, your time, at the Chili Pepper. The dinner dance, co-sponsored by SVC and A.S. will start at 7 p.m. with dinner, followed by outside dancing until 1 a.m. The Oreos, alias Ivan Glasco, Robin Bullington, and Anthony Duncan will also be there to entertain.

There are a limited number of tickets, so be sure to buy them, soon as possible during dinner at the commons, or see Shari Mills in Badger. Tickets are $6 each.

Yearbooks will be going on sale very soon. The yearbook committee will be putting it together this week. Anyone with pictures to be submitted should turn them into the housing office by Wednesday. Flyers will be posted in the residents halls with more information about the yearbooks.

Badger residents plan to hold the 1st annual (we hope) Spring Fest for Serrano Village on May 31st from 1:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Chairman Greg Bourgeois and his committee have planned such events as a 5 kilometer run, mud wrestling, 3 legged race, scavenger hunt, egg toss, plus many other activities to take place in and around Serrano Village. Dinner will be served for everyone interested in being in Badger.

Go back in time, for a moment, to the mid-19th century. When men wore coats with tails, carried canes, and were gentlemen in the strictest sense; women wore corset-to the mid-19th century. When "spells". This is the scene for the Spring quarter production of She Loves Me! She Said So! by Eugene Scribe.

Directed by Dr. Ronald Barnes of the Theatre Arts department, and translated by Dr. Helene Koon of the English department.

Pancakes In The Evening... Has AK Psi Flipped?

No. No really. The only thing flipping is flapjacks, says Tim Thompson, President of the fraternity. This Thursday evening, during the dance, we will be selling pancake dinners from 9 p.m. to 12 a.m. in the SUMP room.

Prices are moderate and include pancakes, eggs, sausage and milk flips is flapjacks, says Tim

So come out and have a bash at the AK Psi gasoline pump smash. For $1 you can bring in the most money at 10 cents a vote. For $1 you can have five bashes.

Casino Night

Alpha Kappa Psi is gambling that you won't want to miss their 2nd Annual Casino Night to be held on Friday, June 13, 1980 in the Student Union.

A Grand Prize of two nights free lodging in Las Vegas will be awarded to the highest bidder along with many other prizes.

Casino Night

Senior Music

The music of Bach, Stravinsky, Brahms and Weber will be presented in a recital given by senior Pat Sieben of San Jacinto on Friday evening, May 16. The program will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall of the Creative Arts Building. Students and community members are invited to attend at no charge.

Recital

A music education major, Sieben will graduate from Cal State this June with honors. He plans to return to the college in the fall to do graduate studies in his field.

Have A Bash On AKP

Alpha Kappa Psi is offering everyone their big chance to get even with the high price of gasoline, or at least a chance to release some frustrations. The chance will come this Thursday, during the Spring Festival at noon.

At the Festival, AK Psi will have a gasoline pump and a sledge hammer. For a cost of only 25 cents you can take a bash on the gasoline pump. For $1 you can have five bashes.

Prizes will be awarded in the following categories — "innies", "outies", "ugliest", "hairyest", and "sexiest". From the winners, a grand prize will be awarded to the "AKPsi Navel of the Year."

There is no charge to enter the contest. Voting will be by whoever brings in the most money at 10 cents a vote.

This week there are two intramural participants of the week due to the fact that none was so honored last week. Our first worthy recipient is the venerable and fanatical Jeff Frazier. Jeff injured his shoulder a few weeks back but was out the next day playing. Last week Jeff made a fantastic dive at a fly ball, fell on his shoulder and broke his clavicle. But would this slow Jeff down? No way! He left the emergency room and went to coach his high school team. That's dedication! Said Jeff: It's not so bad; I can still drink beer with the other arm! Get well and stay off that shoulder.

Our other lucky intramuralist this week is Jeff Fulton. Jeff was instrumental in Cretin Trucks 4-3 win over Powerline. Jeff played outstanding in the game coming to the plate twice and scoring twice. He led a very stingy truck defense playing superbly in the field.

Joe Long has your tickets, good for a sandwich and drink, in his office. Good show!

Frazier This Week!
