Blind RN Pursues Degree

Pat La France of Alta Loma is a 38-year-old registered nurse, wife and mother of two, who has gone back to college at Cal State, San Bernardino to pursue a new career in human services.

While this may not seem different from what many other mature women are doing, for Mrs. La France it is no small accomplishment. She is blind.

For 11 years, she worked in the nursing profession in Ohio before losing her "right" to diabetes. Because she is a nurse, she was aware of the possibilities. Three years ago her sight began to fail. Laser treatment temporarily halted the hemorrhaging blood vessels, but further complications eventually led to blindness.

Though "right" and "left" circumstances have dealt her a negative blow, she has retained a cheery disposition and a positive attitude.

A display of historical photos showing San Bernardino and surrounding communities as they appeared in the mid 1800s through early 1920s will be on exhibit in the library beginning Jan. 23.

The exhibit depicts the development of the city, from its early days as Fort San Bernardo, a Mormon settlement, through the turn-of-the-century affluence of the Upland Hot Springs Park, where area residents bathed on a lake in what was later to become the Inland Center parking lot.

Some of the pictures document the evolution of San Bernardino, showing certain locales from the same point of view over a period of years.

The communities of Colton, Arrowhead Springs, Yucaipa, and the Barstow Depot are also represented in the display, which closes March 2.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

IN DEFENSE OF THE PAWPRINT BUDGET, WHEREVER IT MAY BE

Seeing signs posted on campus saying, "Jobs Available at the PawPrint," I broke the land speed record getting to the office, because I am a former staff writer with experience in everything from hard news to typesetting and good spots. Entering the PawPrint office, I encountered Karen, who was very warm and personable considering she was near collapse from juggling Budget, Managerial, Editorial Production duties.

I explained my purpose there and we both were very happy to see each other, for it appeared to me that I was a useful member of supply and demand, a consummation to be devoutly desired. But one phone call later (Hello,Hello) Karen Enterprise found that not only could she not hire me or anyone else, but her salary hung suspended somewhere in the mysterious land of fiscal imbalance.

I hope the necessary funds can be directed to the PawPrint budget, not only because I'd like jobs, but because, as Karen said, you can't run a newspaper with three people. The services provided by this newspaper are considerable, and a student staff could derive much benefit from exposure to disciplined writing skills. Besides, important principles are at stake: Long Live Freedom of Speech, Freedom of the Press, and Lou Grant.

My best wishes to everyone at the PawPrint; may your tribe increase along with your budget, and may you receive all the support you desire.

Sincerely,

Sandy Del George

The Opinions expressed in the following are those of the author, Brett Wyatt, and are not necessarily shared by the PawPrint. Wyatt is the founder and organizer of the Peace Reaction Club, a recognized campus organization advocating an anti-draft viewpoint. Responses will appear under the PawPrint office in the Student Union.

As of this writing it has already been ten days into the draft registration process and 18 year old men have complacently performed their duty at the Past Office. It has also been a month since the first version of the newly proposed draft laws came out and very few of the people that will be affected by them have taken notice. The proposed draft laws are serious business for they severely curtail the rights of persons conscripted into military service.

The most striking change is the new laws is the time sequence for deferment. Unless the laws are changed before their final drafting, a person will have only ten days to submit a claim for deferment or exemption to the Selective Service after receiving an induction notice. After this time all rights for deferment are waived and 1-A status is assumed. However, the list of deferments and exemptions is growing shorter and more difficult to obtain. There are probably no students currently enrolled at Cal State that will be deferred for scholastic reasons. The only college deferments are for fraternities, sororities, and seminary students. The Armed Forces want a college student, just down to any recruiter, the scores that you will earn on a battery exam would allow the recruiter to sign up four flunkies if he can get you in!

Some other changes have been made concerning hardship cases. Don't count on being married or pregnant to avoid induction. Unless your parents' financial records could not support the draft, all on the aid of your military pay then you can forget this one.

There is still a deferment to take notice of, that is a conscientious objection. You may be the kind of person who does not want to kill people that you have never met, or maybe your loyalty extends to serving your government just so long as there is a non-combatant position. Great! But, the Selective Service will only give you ten days to submit a claim. What if you were married with children, the two weeks and came back to an induction notice. It is too late! That is right, you are out of luck and not even Canada will help you anymore. Even if you do submit a claim, the Selective Service will give you a questionnaire to complete verifying the sincerity of your claim. You will have ten days to write the equivalent of a fifteen page term paper complete with supporting literature, and return to the Selective Service and boy are they tough graders. In 1967 the New York Selective Service published a booklet specifically designed to instruct conscientious objectors on how to go about a draft.

The most mind altering fact of all about a draft. President Reagan will not allow you to turn off the machine. Not that the wheels are turning, the tensions of the world, or that it would be good to stay aware of the actual military-industrial complex long forgotten message President Dwight D. Eisenhower. From expert, should we even ignore it?

The three week program will examine the historical and contemporary Arab World and will draw extensively on the faculty and staff of the American University in Cairo. Trips will be made to Alexandria, Upper Egypt, Luxor, Aswan, and Abu Simbel.

Lectures will deal primarily with the history, politics, literature, religion, and the arts of the Arab World. Special field programs have been arranged for the participants, and meetings with spokespersons in the arts, government, and social services and education are scheduled. If enrollment is sufficient, Arabic language classes will also be offered as part of the program.

Participants will be housed at a tourist class hotel near the American University. A continental breakfast will be served each day. Double occupancy with private baths will be provided.

The cost of the program is $2,680. This includes train transportation from Mexican border to Mazatlan; lodging (four room hotels); free breakfast and dinner; free cocktail parties each night in Mazatlan; a free T-shirt; and other benefits as detailed in the itinerary.
