Dumke Gives “Speech 23b”

Last month a conference was held with Glenn S. Dumke, Chancellor of the California State University and Colleges at the CSUC headquarters in Long Beach. As Chancellor, Dumke administers The California State University and Colleges: 19 campuses, 306,000 students, and 18,000 faculty. During the conference, the Chancellor jokingly referred to his opening statements as Speech 23b. The following is a condensed, edited version of his opening statements.

This is the 20th year of this State University system. It started in 1969 when the legislature decided that there was no real plan for the needs of the growing state. State College Presidents were rushing around the halls of the legislature asking for money and competing with each other, with the University of California system and others. It simply wasn’t working out too well. I was on the master plan survey team which has a representative from the University of California, the State Colleges, the Community Colleges, and the private higher institutions.

We worked for nearly a year and came up with a very simple solution to the problem. The idea was efficiency and economy through specialization by segment and not by institution. The system of higher education was divided into three segments: 1) post graduate, doctoral, M.A.; 2) undergraduate, B.A., B.S.; 3) Jr. College.

The University of California would concentrate on graduate specialization and research - doctoral and post-doctoral - but without a large undergraduate operation. The State Colleges (of which many later became Universities) would be the undergraduate and Masters level institutions. The community colleges would have two functions: that of preparing students for further education, and of applied vocational, semi-professional, occupational two-year programs.

With that specialization by segment, called “differentiation of function,” we are getting efficiency and economy and quality. The master plan has been very effective and has provided California with the ability to say that we have the very best public higher education system in the country. In our educational system, we provide a higher level of quality for more students than any other state.

This being the twentieth year of that master plan, we have

Pezdeke Awarded Research Grant

Contrary to popular opinion, children’s mental development is not necessarily harmed by moderate doses of television viewing, states Cal-State psychologist Dr. Kathy Pezdek.

In fact, upgrading the quality of children's programming offers substantial potential for improving children's development, feels Dr. Pezdek as a result of research she and a colleague have conducted.

The National Institute for Education has awarded Dr. Pezdek $122,000 to continue her investigation into the way children perceive what they see and hear on TV. Dr. Pezdek contends that, contrary to the view held by most critics of children’s TV, children’s minds are not simply atrophying while they watch TV.

What these findings do mean is that children are much more in control of their viewing of television than most people think. That indicates their minds are not simply atrophying while they watch TV.

The latest experiment conducted by Dr. Pezdek, which builds on similar work done by her and Dr. Dan Anderson of the University of Massachusetts, studied the behavior of children

Worst Wind Storm Yet Causes Major Damage

The worst wind storm ever to hit the campus blew out windows, flung exhaust fan covers from the roofs of buildings, ripped trees out and deposited huge amounts of dirt and sand inside and outside buildings Friday, February 20th.

The most severely damaged campus facility was the Student Union, where three plate glass windows were blown out between the patio and lounge and where a glass door was destroyed. The winds also ripped rain gutters off the Union roof.

Student Union Coordinator Richard Bennecke stated that no one was near the windows when they broke Friday evening. He also said that since the windows and door were made of tempered glass, the chance of someone getting hurt was very small.

The cost for repairs in the Union alone were estimated at $2,600 which came out of a reserve fund for repairs to the building. The building had to be closed for a day so the debris could be cleaned up and repairs made. Large exhaust fan covers were blown from the roofs of several other buildings.

Although dirt and sand driven by the winds infiltrated all campus buildings, perhaps the hardest hit was the Heating and Air Conditioning Plant where soil accumulation reached more than an inch on horizontal surfaces and where even vertical surfaces were encrusted. Large deposits of dirt were also left on lawns and at the recessed entrances to buildings.

Jim Urita, director of plant operations, called the wind storm the most destructive in campus history. The winds' velocity on campus was not recorded due to a malfunction of the anemometer, however.
Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Being a typical academic California student for the three years, and not really knowing nor caring about the controversy between the PawPrint Staff and HafPrint Staff, I would like to point out that although I have seen better student newspaper, you’re doing a pretty good job.

What I don’t understand is why don’t both staff just forces instead of continuing this rivalry, which is causing hurt feelings and I’m sure broken-up friendships. It seems to me that the combined effort would produce one good paper instead of two papers dedicated to taking cheap shots at each other. This rivalry thing was at first amusing; now it is rather boring and affecting the quality of our newspaper. I think it’s worth a try. What do you think the editors think?

Alexa Arabatzis

Thank you Alexa, as you can see from the letter below, the wind of change has been blowing steadily in our direction.

Dear Editor,

As you are aware, the number of people in attendance at the Pub Board meeting Thursday afternoon was rather large, in comparison to past meetings, with the majority of guests present being members of the A.S. BOD. Due to the nature of this emergency meeting, the agenda was limited to one item that was discussed and approved.

What impressed and encouraged me was that the meeting was advertised, discussion continued for approximately one hour. Members of the Pub Board, A.S. BOD and PawPrint took the time to share some of their concerns. Let us continue in this vein—we need this kind of constructive dialogue. Respectfully,

Pauline A. Barbour
Publications Board, Chair.

Thank you Pauline, it’s encouraging to see the problems on the road to being resolved. Now if there was only more time in the day...

UPC President Warns of Budget Cuts

The President of California’s largest professors union warned February 23rd that budget cuts demanded by President Reagan for higher education and research will drastically reduce educational opportunity in California and across the nation. Dr. Warren Kessler, President of the 4200 member United Professors of California, made his announcement following weekend meetings with Albert Shanker, National President of the 350,000 member American Federation of Teachers and a member of the national AFL-CIO Executive Council.

Shanker came to Los Angeles in the midst of a crucial session of the A.F.L.—CIO Executive Council to address a special meeting of the UPC State Council. He told the 85 state and local leaders from the California State College and University system, "In round figures, the cuts in support to higher education represent $5 billion. Since California receives 10 percent of all federal aid, you can project a loss to the students and institutions of higher education in California of half a billion dollars annually."

"We must again emphasize that education is a capital investment that results in increasing productivity, living standards and quality of life." Shanker continued. "Almost 30 percent of all productivity since World War II can be attributed to education, and federal estimates are that for every dollar spent in financing the GI Bill, the federal government received $1.50 back in increased tax revenue from the increased earning power that education produced."

"President Reagan wants to encourage investment, but apparently not in education and the nation’s universities," Shanker said. "Our union will be working through the national A.F.L.—CIO and throughout California to fight these drastic cuts in education and research."

He said California students and educators have to join with labor and community groups to avert what he termed "a severe blow to educational opportunity and the future of our nation.

The proposed Reagan cuts include:

*Phased elimination of $1.7 billion in social security tax credits for higher education programs.
*Cut of $1 billion in direct financial aid grants for college students.
*Elimination of $8 billion in food stamps for low income college students, most of whom work part-time to stay in school.
*$1 billion reduction in National Science Foundation research.
*Including a 75% cut in economics and social science research.
*A 50% cut in the national endowment for the humanities, which now only stimulates humanities and artistic creativity, but help bring it to the broadest of the public. "Shortchanging education opportunity for middle-income and low-income students and curtailing research may be politically expedient, but it will only hurt America in the long run."

Kessler warned "A modest tax break next year won’t look so good to parents who can’t afford college five years down the road."

Kessler also warned that a loss of federal funds for non-educational programs will pressure California to draw on the same money from its state universities, increasing the odds of tuition, employee pay cuts, layoffs and severe deterioration in quality options. UPC and organized labor vehemently oppose budget cuts.

Fire Breaks Out in Waterman Dorm

by Shari Mills

Students living in the senior residence halls were awakened by smoke detectors early Wednesday morning when a fire alarm was pulled in Waterman dormitory.

Kerry Boykins, a resident of Waterman set his alarm clock for 4:00 a.m. Wednesday morning to study and would be surprised to smell smoke. Thinking something could be burning in the kitchen, he began to investigate. When he got downstairs, he noticed the living area was filled with smoke and pulled the information flyers hanging on the glass doors were damaged. Then he noticed flames coming from one of the chairs in the living room.

Residence Assistant Colleen Robinson was awakened by Boykins, who then pulled the fire alarm to warn other residents. Unfamiliar with the mechanism, Boykins proceeded to get the fire extinguisher case open in the R.A.'s hallway, so he went to pound on doors while the R.A. was trying to find another fire extinguisher.

The fire was quickly extinguished by Robinson with the help of Russell Woolvertsoon, and the chair was dragged outside by Officer Al Sida of the College Police. The fire department was then notified and one truck arrived within minutes. Evacuation went smoothly and quickly according to Wayne Hutchins, Director of Housing, and nobody was hurt.

Although he could not confirm or deny there was arson involved, Robinson said the matter was being investigated by Campus Police. The fire apparently started burning underneath the seat cushion of the chair and burned through the top cushion. So far the assessment of damage has been $250 for the chair plus minor burn marks on the carpeting below. Little smoke damage was reported in the living room.

The city fire department sent out one truck with a team of 4 firefighters, but were not needed for that purpose. They inspected the area for safety and provided a large fan to clear some of the smoke. The residents were sent to the dorm next door, but were let back into Waterman within the hour.

According to Hutchins, the last known person aware that night had been using the phone around 3:30 a.m. The fire was set sometime between then and 4:00 a.m. Later Wednesday morning Deans Monroe and Stansel, along with Hutchins, Craig Henderson (Director of Housing), Pam Stewart (of the Campus Police), and an arson investigator from the City of San Bernardino were at Waterman to investigate the situation.

A news release from the Campus Police on Monday stated that the cause of the blaze is still under investigation.

In an unrelated incident, Monday, March 2nd residents of Badger were evacuated at 5:25 a.m. when an electrical shortage was caused by a fluorescent light on one of the downstairs suites bathrooms. Though some smoke escaped into the air conditioning system, causing residents to become alarmed, the fire department investigated the incident which caused minor damage. Residents were sent to Shandin Hall for the investigation, but were let back into Badger within the hour.

CSSE Concerned Over Budget Proposals

Proposals from the Reagan administration on the federal budget and proposals from the California State University and Colleges on how to balance the CSUC for next year were the chief items of discussion among the student representatives of the 19 campus CSUC system during the February meeting of the California State Student Association (CSSA). The regular monthly meeting was held February 21 and 22 at CSU, Fresno.

Discussion on actions of the Reagan administration centered on proposed cuts and budget problems in most federal financial aid and grants. Also discussed were proposals for subminimum wages, grants students, elimination of student benefits under the Social Security Program, and elimination of any student eligibility for food stamps. There was also concern over the fact that over 50 Tution Tax Credit bills have been introduced. Tuition Tax Credit is dangerous for the publicly supported, tuition free CSUC System. The CSSA's concern over these and other federal issues were geared personally to California's Congressmen and U.S. Senators by a ten member delegation visiting Washington, DC during the last week of February.

In an effort to balance the CSUC budget for the next year, a CSUC Chancellor's Office has proposed increasing non-resident tuition at least $600 next year. The CSSA will be working to obtain the impact of any such increase. One of its proposals will be tax decreases in non-resident tuition so that only new non-resident students will have to pay the increase.

Also discussed was the upcoming Lobbying Conference in Sacramento on March 22-23. Over $100,000 from the CSUC system will be on hand to lobby the state legislators. The primary issue will be support for the CSUC budget. (A tuition bill is introduced, however, that would become the primary issue.)

In other action at the meeting, the CSSA voted to raise its dues $25 to $25 per student per year. This money would primarily go toward funding a second lobbying position in Sacramento which was established two years ago and has been financed from donations from the campuses. The last dues increase, from $15 to $25, was put in 1977.

The next CSSA meeting will be held on March 21 & 22 at CSU, Fresno.

Pezdek Research Grant

Grant will fund new project to study children's TV watching

Watching television under two types of conditions. In the first setting, a younger is placed in a comfortably furnished room with no division except the TV. The other setting is almost identical except that the youngster has toys to play with. In addition to TV to watch. The second situation simulates a home environment where children usually have toys and other activities to pursue and their watch TV.

In each setting, the child is asked to watch a 20-minute presentation, and then answer questions about the show. The research is directed by Dr. Pezdek, "that children develop a facility for discrimination which produces a non-profit organization which produces Sesame Street for educational television.

In the meantime, youngsters are being sought as volunteer research subjects. Dr. Pezdek has been meeting on occasion with youngsters in north Rialto and San Bernardino schools explaining the project to parents and requesting their permission for their children participate. A research session takes approximately 30 minutes, about 20 minutes of which is spent watching TV with the remaining used for information retention testing. Each youngster is tested once.
Dept. of Forestry Fire Fighters

The lack of rain and the onset of warm weather means the fire season will be fast upon us. To help combat fires throughout California, the California Department of Forestry is accepting applications until March 15 for the position of seasonal firefighter.

Women and minorities are especially encouraged to apply for the job that might lead to a lifetime career, according to CDF Southern California Region Rex Griggs.

Applications are available at San Bernardino CDF and County Fire Department Headquarters, 3800 Sierra Way, San Bernardino or in the Riverside CDF and County Fire Department Headquarters, 2101 West San Jacinto St., Perris.

Seasonal firefighters are employed throughout California during fire season which usually lasts approximately six to eight months each year. Under close supervision by experienced personnel, the firefighters do heavy physical work involved in fire fighting as a member of a fire crew. They also assist in building, grounds and equipment maintenance and repair, and do other work as required.

Applicants must be 18 or older and requirements are knowledge of good physical work methods and an ability to do heavy physical work; exercise good judgement in hazardous fire suppression work, and to follow directions.

Seasonal firefighters must have a willingness to live and work in remote areas and on weekends and holidays and to remain on duty 24 hours a day. Seasonal firefighters live in a fire station during their on-duty time.

For areas such as San Bernardino and Riverside counties where structural firefighting is an integral part of the duty, the seasonal firefighter must possess color vision sufficient to discriminate between electrical cable and pipe color coding; and color vision sufficient to correctly identify vehicle color.

No physical agility test will be given and interviews will be performed and interviews will be performed.

No physical agility test will be given and interviews will be performed.

Party For Dorm Students

Serrano Village Council will be sponsoring a party for the dorm students Saturday night... March 7th, 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. Food will be served as well as free beer. Exhibits to Open at Library

Two new exhibits will open in the Library this week. A display of Dutch museum posters began Saturday and a collection of National Orange Show memorabilia opens on Friday, March 6th.

The Danish museum posters are considered representative of some of the best of the genre. Originally created to advertise exhibits at several Danish museums, they are now considered works of art. The posters were done by well-known Danish artists and range from high creative graphic artwork designs to type-only styles.

The Orange Show memorabilia display will cover the history of the show from its inception in 1911 to the 1960's. Materials will include postcards, pictures, banners, buttons and other materials. Historical excerpts will accompany the display, as will museum and newspaper articles. The show promotes the area's citrus economy.

The photos range all the way back to the show's earliest days and include some of the more elaborate sculptures created from the local citrus crop.

Keep Climbin' by Rick Ergang

Langston Hughes

Langston Hughes' poem contains the essence of this column. Our fellow disabled students, perhaps more so than the rest of us, have found that "Life ain't no crystal stair" and yet, so often and in many ways more than we who are not disabled, have made courageous choices. So often, in our challenges, the disabled face the disabling on this campus, and most important, we will focus on the abilities and accomplishments to human incapacity, but in climbing.

"Mr. Hulot's Holiday," Saturday's Foreign Film

A humorous French film, "Mr. Hulot's Holiday," will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 5th. It is the second in the series of showing foreign films at the Library as part of the continuing foreign film series at Cal State. The film, called a masterpiece of mime over dialogue, is a comedy about how people really "work" at having fun. Mr. Hulot, while he is the catalyst for the events that occur, is not a deliberate one. Rather he is sort of "everyman" who serves as a magnet for the sometimes disastrous events that happen when he is around. "Mr. Hulot" won the International Critics Prize at the 1963 Cannes Film Festival. It is 92 minutes long and has English subtitles.

All foreign films are shown at 7:30 p.m. Saturdays in the Library Hall of the Physical Sciences Building. They are free and open to the public.

At The Gallery

By Jeanne M. Lane

Paint brushes suspended on a pot, or in a coffee cup! Impossible, you say, but they can be seen at the Cal State Art Gallery, which is presently showing a body of work which consists of paintings and ceramic sculptures by artist David Middlebrook.

Middlebrook is the head of the Ceramics department at San Jose State University, where he has been teaching since 1974. He started his art career as a painter and worked as a medical illustrator while in college. He did not try his hand at ceramics until he went to Graduate school at the University of Iowa. According to Middlebrook, Surrealism, Dadism and American Indian art has influenced his work. Surrealism, with its dream-like imagery, is much easier to convey in two-dimensional form, but to create the illusion three-dimensionally is very difficult - but he has succeeded. Dadism, which combined unrelated images, and American Indian art, which is full of symbols, are represented in several pieces such as "Van Gone," "One Stroke Artist" and "Go Fly a Culture."

The return to painting was a result of a trip Middlebrook took to Australia. He spent six months in the southern hemisphere during 1980, lecturing and teaching at the request of the Australian Arts Council. While he was there, he decided to expand his sketches, previously used as notations for sculpture, into full size paintings. This is the first time the paintings and the sculptures have been shown together (the paintings were shown alone previously).

The paintings are done in acrylic and india ink on paper and they reflect Middlebrook's concern for clean lines. The images appear as soft geometric forms that spring to life through the use of bold, black lines on a white ground. Great swaths of color such as turquoise or pink enhance the futuristic black and white shapes.

The ceramic sculptures of white clay, like the two-dimensional works, use zig-zag shapes, curves and tubes, shots of color, which play an important role, serve as a relief to the earth-colored clay. The tube form serves as a base for several pieces that hang precariously in air. Massive blocks of clay, with their controlled cracks are mounted on pedestals. The surfaces of some pieces are highly polished while others are developed as realistically, that it is hard to believe that they are clay, not wood or cloth.

This show can be seen Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Hatchetman All Stars

A “hatchetman” is a basketball player known for constantly fouling his opponents. In addition to the number of fouls, the quality of each foul is significant, as is the manner in which it is delivered. Hatchetmen, therefore, are not necessarily ogres or thugs, rather they are accomplished perfectionists in the art of fouling.

Note: This is done in jest and involved individuals should realize as much.

Past Hatchetmen All Stars include John Finn, Bob Reilly, Bob Steim, Bob Semour, Jim Oliner, Terson Pave, Lute Kastillo, Brian Tudder — and the amazing Gordon Miller, who averaged four fouls per game.

Nominations for the 1981 Hatchetman All Stars should be written on a plain sheet of paper and placed in the succession box adjacent to the Intramural Bulletin Board in the P.E. Building.
