March 2nd 1994

CSUSB

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.lib.csusb.edu/coyote-chronicle

Recommended Citation
https://scholarworks.lib.csusb.edu/coyote-chronicle/347
Harrison denies charges of police racism

by Anthony Bruce Gilpin
editor in chief

Office of Public Safety director Edward Harrison denied a student's public allegations that the University Police practices a double standard of law enforcement.

Chief Harrison responded Friday to graduate student Liddell Potts, who accused Public Safety officers of harassing racial minorities accused of crimes while allowing white suspects to go with little or no official prosecution. Potts made his statements Feb. 17 at an open forum with an accreditation team from the Western Assn. of Schools and Colleges, who were touring the Cal State, San Bernardino campus.

In a Chronicle interview Harrison discussed each point in a document distributed by Potts, which cites specific incidents of alleged racial harassment of non-whites and preferential treatment of whites by the Public Safety Dept. There are significant discrepancies between the incidents as Potts reports them and Public Safety records, and Harrison said he discussed these issues with Potts before Potts spoke with the WASC panel.

"I don't know where Mr. Potts got his information," Harrison said.

INCIDENT I:

Potts' report claims that "on April 22, 1993, a white student stole $1000 worth of merchandise from the Bookstore and no charges were filed." Harrison replied that Public Safety investigated a theft of $1000 in cash, not merchandise, from the textbook buy-back department of the Coyote Bookstore.

At least five bookstore employees have accessed merchandise. A white student employee became the prime suspect because he had a prior conviction for theft; and had spoken to others before the theft of having money troubles. This student, who maintained his innocence, voluntarily submitted to a polygraph examination. Harrison said the polygraph interview cleared the student from suspicion. Public Safety had closed this unsolved case, pending the discovery of new evidence.

INCIDENT II:

Potts' report charges that an African American student was arrested May 21, 1993, for shoplifting a $30 textbook at Coyote Bookstore. Potts claimed that the student was arrested while browsing the store and was led away in handcuffs. Potts told the WASC committee that this student was the only person ever prosecuted for theft at the bookstore.

Harrison said that bookstore employees apprehended two black males, but outside the store, with $194 worth of textbooks hidden under their coats.

Bookstore employees called Public Safety, but the officers could not arrest the two men (one was a CSUSB student, one was a student of San Bernardino Valley College) because the stolen merchandise was worth less than $400, and was, therefore, a misdemeanor. Police officers cannot make arrests on misdemeanor offenses that they did not personally witness, Harrison said. Two bookstore employees who witnessed the theft agreed to make a citizen's arrest. The officers then took the students into custody, in handcuffs.

Public safety records indicate that the two men confessed to the thefts, saying they had no money. They were given citations, and released on their own recognizance. Harrison noted that the defendants were not fully prosecuted (as Potts claimed) because they failed to show up on their court date. A bench warrant was issued for their arrest.

INCIDENT III:

Potts' report claimed that on Nov. 12, 1993 a white student shoplifted books, was chased and captured by campus construction workers, and was released with no charges filed. "The Bookstore indicated that they only desired to recover the merchandise," wrote Potts.

Harrison said that he personally followed up on this incident on Dec. 10. He learned that the bookstore was willing to press charges, but the suspect (a non-student) was released through a misunderstanding.

Student fees go up, but where do the funds go?

by Brian Lees
Chronicle staff writer

Student fees are on the rise again and the California State University system has become increasingly dependent on student revenue in its annual budget.

While many students erroneously believe that student fees fund the construction of new buildings on the campus, they actually go toward general expenditures, including such items as the recently approved pay increase for CSUSB's president.

According to an official 1993-94 budget document, the main reason for student fee increases is to make up for the reduction in the state General Fund's support of education.

Since 1989, the state's general share of funding has shrunk from 83.8 percent to currently 68.4 percent. To compensate for this reduction, the share financed by student fees has nearly doubled, from 16.2 percent to 31.6 percent.

These increases reflect Gov. Pete Wilson's stated goal of shifting an increasing part of the financial burden of running the CSU system off the taxpayers and onto students. Wilson's ultimate aim is to have each student bear more of the actual cost of their educations.

According to David DeMauro, vice president of administration and finance, not one cent of revenue from student fees goes toward the construction of a single building on this campus. This construction is funded primarily through two types of state-issued bonds.

General obligation (voter-approved) bonds are loans to the state from investors who buy the bonds. These monies must eventually be paid off with state tax monies. Revenue (legislatively-approved) bonds work in a similar fashion to general obligation bonds, but proceeds are deducted from a campus' proposed budget before it is approved. These increases reflect Gov. Pete Wilson's stated goal of shifting an increasing part of the financial burden of running the CSU system off the taxpayers and onto students. Wilson's ultimate aim is to have each student bear more of the actual cost of their educations.

According to David DeMauro, vice president of administration and finance, not one cent of revenue from student fees goes toward the construction of a single building on this campus. This construction is funded primarily through two types of state-issued bonds.

General obligation (voter-approved) bonds are loans to the state from investors who buy the bonds. These monies must eventually be paid off with state tax monies. Revenue (legislatively-approved) bonds work in a similar fashion to general obligation bonds, but proceeds are deducted from a campus' proposed budget before it is approved.
The week of Wednesday, March 2 - Wednesday, March 9, 1994.

Wednesday, March 2

AFRIKAN STUDENT ALLIANCE: Regular meeting. Student Union Multicultural Center 3:30 - 4:30 p.m. All are welcome.

CIRCLE K INTERNATIONAL: Weekly Meeting. Student Union Senate Chambers. 8 - 10 p.m.

GAY, LESBIAN & BISEXUAL UNION: Weekly meeting. Pine Room, Lower Commons. 6 - 8 p.m. All are welcome.

LATINO BUSINESS STUDENTS ASSN: Regular Meeting. Student Union Senate Chambers. 4 - 6 p.m. All are welcome.

MECHA: Weekly Meeting. Student Union Senate Chambers. 1 - 3 p.m. All are welcome.

SOCIOLOGY CLUB: Regular meeting. Pine Room, Lower Commons. 4 p.m.

Thursday, March 3

Friday, March 4

GUEST SPEAKER: "THE NEW WORLD ORDER: The Role of Secret Societies" by Steve Cokely, Co-sponsored by ASI and the African Student Alliance, University Hall, Room 106. 6:30 p.m. $1 Donation.

Sunday, March 6

BASEBALL: "COYOTE CLASSIC" St. Francis of New York, U.S. Naval Academy, University of Pennsylvania, Kyung Hee University, CSUSB. Through March 12 at Fiscalini Field.

PUT YOUR EVENT IN THE CHRONICLE CALENDAR! (909) 880-5931 OR DROP IT OFF AT UH 201.9

Monday, March 7

GOLF: Open at Arrowhead Country Club.

LECTURE: "Consensual Relationships on Campus: Should they be prohibited?" Sponsored by the

California's Biggest and Best Country Party

320 South E Street, San Bernardino (North of Mill)

CAL STATE LUNCH SPECIAL

- Slice Sized Pizza $1.75
- Garlic Cheese Bread
- Large Soda

20% Off To Students W/ ID
(Not Valid W/ Advertised Specials)

SHAMROCK PROJECT FOOD SALE: Sponsored by Kappa Delta sorority. Mexican food, entertainment for children, raffle for a prize. Pflau Library courtyard. 11 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Letters to The Chronicle

Rude street preacher casts the first stone
Editor, The Chronicle: "God is love" (1 John 4:8), but there was no sign of God's love in Mr. Paul Stamm's message when he spoke recently on campus.

It is quite rare that I have the opportunity to meet a person who is as excited as I am to have God in my life. I commend Mr. Stamm for his zealously toward God; however, I can't understand why he did not choose to preach zealously about God's love. It seems odd that Mr. Stamm could overlook love when there are over 300 references to love in the Bible.

Instead, Mr. Stamm emphasized name calling and judging. I have to assume that our vigorous visitor has forgotten Matthew 7:1-2, and Luke 6:37-38. In Matthew, Jesus says, "Do not judge, or you too will be judged. For in the same way you judge others, you will be judged, and with the measure you use, it will be measured to you."

Aside from questioning the energetic preacher's agenda, I am outraged by the techniques used to deliver his message. His blatant rudeness and unquenchable desire to show people down can only be topped by his hostile treatment of those gathered around him. Mr. Stamm treated the crowd of onlookers as if they were worthless scraps of red meat that deserved to be devoured by wild dogs. I must remind Mr. Stamm again that it was Jesus Christ who sat down to eat with the "sinners" and tax collectors, because "it is not the healthy who need a doctor, but the sick" (Mark 2:15-17). The bi-terious, pontificating preacher's tactics of insult, put downs and finger pointing, fist waving condemnation serve only to anger, confuse, harass and further estrange people from God, while success in discrediting any kind of message that he is attempting to convey.

I have to wonder what Mr. Stamm hoped to accomplish by his witty, tactless ranting and raving. How many seeds did he believe he would be planting by hollering insolent remarks to people at will? I feel it necessary to question the rationality behind his reckless antics.

As a Christian and an active member of the Campus Crusade for Christ, I am disgusted with Mr. Stamm's agenda of valorizing and demonstrating mean spirited, insatiable passionateness. His interpretation and representation of God falls irretrievably short of the doctrine in which I have 100% faith and trust: that Jesus loves us whether we live our lives with him or outside of him. Yes, God wants us to repent for our sins and for us to believe and have faith in Him, but loving, gracious, merciful God. I hope that Mr. Stamm re-examined his understanding of God, as well as his objectives and tactics before he attempts to speak to another campus. If he chooses to continue on his current path, I fear that he will make himself too frustrating to struggling to know God and would succeed in dominating others further away from God. Peace be with you.

Scott Casto

Please recycle
Editor, The Chronicle: As I was walking to my class on Feb. 9, I noticed a large amount of the old issues of The Chronicle in the trash. This bothers me because I had always assumed that The Chronicle had always recycled their newspapers in the past.

Please help cut down on the amount of waste by recycling your newspaper in the future.

April Wedeman
Environmental Chair, A.S.I.
At The Chronicle, we believe in recycling in consonance with natural resources. In our office, we recycle white bond paper. We do not currently have a formal program to recycle newspapers, but if such a program is called for, we will adopt one.

Anthony Bruce Gilpin
editor in chief

The HECKLER’S CORNER

by Jeremy Heckler
sports editor

Okay everybody, it’s been two weeks since the last Heckler’s Corner and I’m sure there are cheers from the peanut gallery everywhere.

The one thing that being on hiatus has done is prove one point, we are not the Post Office. I really wouldn’t mind being in the Post Office except that you have to wear those uniforms similar to a blue Gunga Din, and wear a bulletproof vest on employee evaluation days.

No matter what the timeliness of the column, the point of it is still to hype and gripe the various people, places and things of Cal State, San Bernardino.

The Coyotes’ Den played host to its last basketball games Saturday night, and to say I’m sad to see the old gym go would be lying. The Coyotes’ Den housed Coyote athletics for ten years, which was ten years too many. The place is more suited for high school sports than college. If I had to spend one more game on those hard wooden benches and expect to someone else I would go insane. The only category in which the building was a leader among local sports venues was in earthquake risk factor. So goodbye Coyotes’ Den, hello Consortium Arena.

It was amusing to see the sign in the Coyote Cafe reading, “Sorry we cannot accept $50 or $100 bills.” Now, really! If I had a couple of C-notes burning a hole in my pocket I think I would have other places to have my breakfast on a bagel.

Here’s some hype and gripe for the Parking Services, with their banishment of knowledge, the parking monolith. The hype goes to their fixing of the sign in Lot D to making it easier to read in black. Considering that it took until last month to get it done is a real compliment to the parking services’ determination.

But lest we see what they could do to lot F, which had its sign tarmac-hawked off. Maybe it was done by someone dissatisfied with not being able to find a decent parking space and had to park in that rock field they call lot F. If CSUSB is a commuter school, its streets should follow the ways of the commuter. But here in wonderful San Bernardino, we have the biggest bottleneck this side of Coca-Cola. Everyday between 3 and 6 p.m., students who don’t live in San Bernardino drive approximately one mile off campus and then sit half an hour waiting to get on the freeway, which is about as much fun as watching paint dry. I know that Caltrans was just out here a few months ago working on the freeway, but maybe while they were out here they could have decided to put stoplights and insert more than a quick fix into the enormous potholes on University Parkway. Then again the motto of bureaucracy is, “If it makes sense, don’t do it.”

The WHiLEY CHRONICLE is published each Wednesday by the students of the CSUSB Department of Communication Studies, Communication Studies, 6600 University Parkway, San Bernardino, CA 92407.

The opinions expressed in the CHRONICLE are those of the writer and editor, and do not necessarily reflect the views of the university, its administration or faculty, or any other person or institution unless expressly noted.

The CHRONICLE welcomes your letters to the editor. Letters for publication must provide the legal name and mailing address of its author. Letters cannot be returned.

Letters to the editor must be received no later than four p.m. the day before publication.

Questions: "How was your experience with TRACS (telephone registration)?"

The system was slow, and I hated that computer voice with the southern accent!

Scott

Question: "It took awhile to sign in. Is there a limit on how many minutes to register? It’s an overall good system, (they) just need to work out the bugs.”

Kim

Question: "One problem with the system was that you couldn’t use campus phones.”

James

on the spot

Interviews by Monique Thomas photos by Todd Spencer

Scott

"Please recycle. One who badgers with questions, comments or gribes. Syn. see BAIT."
The event was sponsored by the Student Union Program Board. Featured performers included Professor Griff, and Don Bajema. The first performer, Don Bajema, was not an effective public speaker, but once he started reading his poems, he came alive!

Bajema had a very angry and depressed attitude as he read his poems. "Black Road" was about how the world is falling apart. His second reading, "Happy Birthday," was a bit more lively. Bajema's poems evoked his personal life stories with vivid realism.

"I felt like I was right there with the characters in his poems!" said CSUSB student Kathi Peterson.

During intermission, promoters threw t-shirts into the audience, and gave away cassette tape recordings of the featured performers' recordings. Coffee and donuts were served as refreshments.

The second featured performer was rap artist Professor Griff. The former member of Public Enemy set one ground rule before reciting his poetry.

If anything I say offends you, Griff said, "I ain't talking to you."

It's a good thing that Griff made that clear, because he said some harsh things that made the audience stir a little.

Griff encouraged audience participation in his performance, asking questions like "Am I right or wrong?" or "Is that cool?" He invited volunteers from the audience to join him on stage to display their musical talent — or lack thereof. One volunteer, a woman named Susan hummed "God Bless America" as accompaniment to Griff as he recited his original poem, "I Am a Poet."

Griff dedicated the poem "Sista, Sista" to women. This poem had a lot of harsh language in it, but Griff explained "These hard lyrics mean reality."

Griff asked the audience to close their eyes as he read his closing piece, "Imagine A Nation." This poem challenged the audience to consider a range of questions such as "what if Michael Jackson was president?" The message was that we are the ones in this world and we are the only ones that can change it.

The second featured performer was Don Bajema, telling an autobiographical story in "Spoken Word: Screaming From the Barrel," presented by the Student Union Program Board at the Event Center Feb. 24.

Young creative artists performed their poetry and prose before an eager and attentive audience at Cal State, San Bernardino's Event Center Feb. 24.

Spoken Word: Screaming from the Barrel transformed the Event Center into a cavernous coffee house. Professional writers and performers read from their own works, and members of the audience were allowed to express themselves in an "open mic" session.

Featured performers included Exene Cervenka from the band "X," Professor Griff, and Don Bajema. The event was sponsored by the Student Union Program Board.

The first performer, Don Bajema, was not an effective public speaker, but once he started reading his poems, he came alive!

Bajema had a very angry and depressed attitude as he read his poems. "Black Road" was about how the world is falling apart. His second reading, "Happy Birthday," was a bit more lively. Bajema's poems evoked his personal life stories with vivid realism.

"I felt like I was right there with the characters in his poems!" said CSUSB student Kathi Peterson.

During intermission, promoters threw t-shirts into the audience, and gave away cassette tapes of the featured performers' recordings. Coffee and donuts were served as refreshments.

The second featured performer was rap artist Professor Griff. The former member of Public Enemy set one ground rule before reciting his poetry.

If anything I say offends you, Griff said, "I ain't talking to you."

It's a good thing that Griff made that clear, because he said some harsh things that made the audience stir a little.

Griff encouraged audience participation in his performance, asking questions like "Am I right or wrong?" or "Is that cool?" He invited volunteers from the audience to join him on stage to display their musical talent — or lack thereof. One volunteer, a woman named Susan hummed "God Bless America" as accompaniment to Griff as he recited his original poem, "I Am a Poet."

Griff dedicated the poem "Sista, Sista" to women. This poem had a lot of harsh language in it, but Griff explained "These hard lyrics mean reality."

Griff asked the audience to close their eyes as he read his closing piece, "Imagine A Nation." This poem challenged the audience to consider a range of questions such as "what if Michael Jackson was president?" The message was that we are the ones in this world and we are the only ones that can change it.

CSUSB speech team competes

by Kara Rizzo managing editor

Two members of the CSUSB Forensics team placed third in their respective categories in competition at CSU Long Beach Feb. 18-19.

Doug Dalton, who took third place in Junior Poetry Interpretation, was also a finalist in Junior Prose Interpretation. Zelda Thomas placed third in Novice level Dramatic Interpretation.

Forensics coach Scott Rodriguez is impressed with the progress of his team. "We are beginning to get the kind of reputation for ourselves that suits the outstanding work our students do," Rodriguez said.

Seven team members competed in various individual events: Susan Gravel in senior Persuasion and Oral and Prose Interpretation and Ena Williams, Lenita Graves, Kim Williams and Stan Wilson performed in the Impromptu Speaking competition.

In speech tournaments, the novice category is for first-year competitors. Junior and Senior Open categories are for more experienced competitors.

Your Plasma Could Be Worth CASH!

Have You Had Hepatitis B Vaccine?

PYRAMID BIOLOGICAL CORPORATION

We urgently seek people to donate plasma. You'll receive:

• Free Blood Tests / Free Physicals
• Paid Cash For Every Visit
• Whole Blood • Mono • Lupus • HIV
• Chicken Pox • Chagas • Herpes

Your blood contribution could help save a life! Pyramid is a blood bank and plasma antibody center dedicated to serving our community and worldwide health related organizations. Call for an appointment.

909/422-1370
785 N. La Cadena Dr., # B, Colton, CA 92324

Delmy's

"Best Subs in Town"

Now Open 'til 10!

Any Regular 6" or 12" Sub

w/ coupon, not good w/ any other offer

1357 Kendall Dr. (909) 880-1605

"Best Subs in Town"

10% Student Discount

Walk-in, Excluding Advertised Specials

POLICE continued from page 1

continued from page 1

Potts said he was disappointed in the arrest, and the case was closed since no one else witnessed the theft.

"The allegation is that we let all the whites go," said Harrison, who is black. "The fact of the matter is that since none of the bookstore staff observed the theft, (Public Safety officers) couldn't make the arrest."

INCIDENT IV:

Harrison admitted that Potts' fourth cited incident is "is rather touchy." On Dec. 14, 1993, Coyote Bookstore informed Public Safety that Kenneth Norman Goddard IV, a white student employee stole $1600 worth of Jostens class rings from store. Goddard had confessed to stealing the rings, and pawning them at a local pawnshop for $143.

Potts alleged that Public Safety allowed the Goddard to redeem the stolen rings from the pawnshop and return them to the bookstore, after which he was released with no charges filed.

"That's not totally true," said Harrison. Harrison then explained that the bookstore could not press charges against Goddard because the stolen property was not bookstore property; the rings belonged to the manufacturer, Jostens. What to see POLICE page 5

PROF continued from page 1

ment exercises.

White did his undergraduate work at New York University, where he got his B.A. in English. He did his graduate work at Harvard University, where he received his Ph.D. in 1960.

From 1960-1965 he taught at Wellesley College in New York. In 1965 White was recruited by John Pfau to teach at CSUSB. "We wanted to put together a high quality university offering high quality education," explained White.
Living in hard times, on borrowed time

Thrown out by his family, rejected by friends, an HIV-positive teenager battles the streets and the system to survive. Against the odds, he finds hope.

by David Keith
Special to the Chronicle

For teenagers there isn’t much of anything that’s scarier than being ostracized by your family and friends and then getting thrown out of your house with nowhere to turn. If, at the same time you were to discover that you had contracted a fatal illness, such as HIV, you might consider giving up altogether. However, for some kids, these circumstances are becoming more and more common.

Approximately two years ago, at a conference for gay and lesbian youth held at UCLA, a sixteen year old boy who was acting as the speaker from a shelter for homeless teens with HIV dramatically illustrated this situation. We’ll call him “Mike.” “Mike” had curly, dark blond hair, he stood about five foot six inches tall and could aptly be described as “scrawny.” He had a touch of acne which was completely overshadowed by the bright open smile that continually highlighted his face. “Mike” told the gathering how he came to live at the shelter and what the benefits were. A year and-a-half earlier, his parents had discovered that he was gay. Upon learning this his step-father had then informed his friends’ parents of “Mike’s” HIV status, which effectively left him with nowhere to turn but the streets. For the next six to nine months, he survived by prostitution and begging for change.

Eventually, by word of mouth, he’d heard of Citrus House, a shelter for “displaced” youth that specialized in dealing with gay or HIV-positive kids.

After being accepted at Citrus House, Mike began to get his life back in order. The shelter helped him prepare for the GED exam, and even helped him get a part-time job.

The shelter had also been partially responsible for an emerging dialogue between “Mike” and his mother. At the time of the conference he was getting ready to move into his own place. He seemed to be quite pleased about that move into his own place. He seemed to be quite pleased about that.

If you take into account where “Mike” had been, only a year before, the change in Mike’s life appears dramatic. The shelter took a young person off the streets who would have become a burden to society and transformed him into a self-supporting, moderately educated young man with hopes and dreams of a worthwhile future.

Ostracized by his family and friends, Mike’s progress is impressive for any young man; for one who is HIV positive, it is remarkable.

However, organizations of the type that helped “Mike” have become essentially non-existent. The few shelters in operation currently that claim to assist kids like “Mike” have become overburdened with a well-entrenched bureaucracy that makes them virtually impossible to find.

Researching this article, this reporter tried, unsuccessfully, to find a shelter similar to the one that had helped “Mike.” “The idea was to interview the staff, and report on the operations of such an establishment. The task of just finding a place to start turned out to be harder than the public might think. After nearly three hours on the phone, and speaking with practically every major AIDS and homeless organization in Los Angeles, the standard response was, ‘We don’t deal with that here, but you might try....’

POLICE

continued from page 4

The bookstores could do, and did, was to fire Goddard.

Eric Perkowski, a representative of Jostens, did not want to prosecute Goddard; he only wanted his rings back. Perkowski and Goddard shook a “Gentleman’s Agreement” in which Goddard would recover and return the pawned rings, and Jostens would not press charges against Goddard. Goddard was released from Public Safety custody, but Harrison was unwilling to let the matter rest. Since the rings were worth more than $400, the theft was a felony, a crime against the state. Neither Jostens nor the bookstore had legal standing to stop an investigation or prosecution of a felony. At Harrison’s direction, Public Safety forwarded the case to the San Bernardino County District Attorney. Upon review of the case, the D.A. filed grand theft charges against Goddard.

Harrison acknowledged that some complaints of racism on campus are probably valid. “This campus is not perfect,” he said, “but we try. These are all very sensitive issues. Our Public Safety officers are trained to handle these sensitive matters in a professional manner at all times.”

---

FEES continued from page 1

Generous donations from the private sector have also contributed to this construction.

Where does the money from student fees go? According to DeMauro, these monies cannot be easily segregated from the general budget in order to determine the exact allocation.

It can be determined, however, that approximately 80 percent of the total budget goes toward personnel. Of that portion of the budget, approximately 42 percent goes toward faculty salaries and 7.4 percent pays the salaries of the management. It is the latter allocation that creates friction among students, faculty and administration.

According to Walter Oliver, chairman of the Faculty Senate, sixteen of the twenty CSU presidents (including CSUSB’s Dr. Anthony Evans) will receive an 8.5 percent pay increase and a variable increase in housing allowances this year. The average salary of a CSU president ranges from $120,000 to $145,000 per year.

Oliver indicated that the faculty sentiment about executive pay raises at a time when professors will finally receive the first 3 percent cost of living adjustment in the past three years is one of disgust. One faculty member from the psychology department who declined to be identified added the general feeling that faculty members aren’t heard or valued by the administration. The results of a survey reflecting these sentiments will be released by the California Faculty Association this spring.

Although it is not totally clear as to exactly where every dollar of student fees go, it can be assumed that the 8.5 percent presidential pay increase is being subsidized for the most part by student fees.
Phone registration system debuts to mixed reviews

by Tasha Swift
Chronicle staff writer

The long awaited new telephone registration system, TRACS (Telephone Ready Access System) has begun with a few glitches and mixed reviews from students.

The system is designed so that no longer will students have to wait months before knowing what classes they get into, go through hours of painful drop and add or look in their mailboxes for weeks to see if they passed a class. Grades will be available through TRACS for final quarter.

The purpose of the system is to save time for the students and the school.

It has taken a year to develop and program TRACS, said Lenora Venturina, the analyst and programmer of the system. Venturina has been programming for Cal State for 10 years.

Although the system was tested before registration began, all 62 of the 64 lines, two of which are used only for testing, were not running simultaneously before the first day of registration on Feb. 12.

Dr. Dolores Tanno, the voice of TRACS
Venturina spent the first couple days until late at night making changes and ironing out problems.

Some students experienced problems on the first day. Brenda Gazzar, Cal State sophomore, tried to call TRACS the first day from San Diego, but the system was down. When she tried back on Monday, she got all her classes.

"Once you get in, it's no problem," she said.

Another student, Chris Dejong, spent two hours trying to call when the lines were all busy. Once Dejong, a Cal State junior, got into TRACS he liked it, because the computer figured out all his financial aid for him.

The TRACS system, which is a Periphonics 7500, is able to figure out financial aid, student status, etc. because it calls the host of the mainframe system and accesses other systems, like administration and student records.

The computer puts students on hold while it accesses information. The more lines occupied, the longer the students are on hold. Each person on hold listens to the computer play the recorded message "Please hold on" so that students know that they are still on the line, said Venturina.

"I could tell that it (the TRACS voice) was a normal person instead of a computer," said Stephanie Hoggard, Cal State senior. "It was more human than I was used too."

And just who was the voice that talked to as many as 62 students at one time? Dr. Dolores Tanno, associate professor of communication studies, was chosen to be that voice by a subcommittee of the touchtone taskforce.

The subcommittee wanted a person with a pleasant voice who was on campus so that they could easily make changes if necessary, said Venturina.

Randi Harrell, who was on the subcommittee to find the voice, tapped Tanno two different times. The first time Tanno read in one sitting. However the voice quality was poor, so the second sitting, the one that is used for TRACS, was done in one-hour segments.

"You're voice gets very tired...You lose concentration," Tanno said. However, the one hour intervals were less tiring.

She read a list of phrases and word which the computer program pieces together. One list was the numbers one to 100. "After a while it feels like you're speaking nonsense words," she said.

"I've heard students express frustration about the process," said Tanno. Fortunately, only a couple have come to her with complaints although she is only involved with TRACS by voice.

"I get great joy out of doing things I've never done before," said Tanno. She decided to accept the job to experience something new.

"It's a way of staying mentally fresh," she said.

Smile, it's distance learning!
Video conference-call technology brings the classroom to a TV set near you

by Lori Wyman
Chronicle staff writer

Smile, you're on candid camera!

High tech education is scheduled to start at Cal State San Berndardino in the fall quarter of this year, using television to broadcast classes from the campus to classrooms off campus.

Students who live too far to commute, or who are unable to commute can take advantage of these distance learning classes.

Dr. Walter Oliver, president of the Faculty Senate, said, "Distance learning is an educational opportunity to distant sites such as Barstow and Needles. It will be used to completely serve the area."

A grant from Air Quality Management District has financed the purchase of equipment for three off-campus sites and will cover the cost of transmission lines. Two state-of-the-art television studios will be built in the basement of the library.

Teachers will conduct classes via television. Students at the other end will watch and listen to the instructor and call the phone with any questions. These video teleconferences will be made possible by using the data networks from the major telephone companies, such as GTE or Sprint.

Eventually, both students and teachers will be connected by a microphone. A monitor will watch the students as they take quizzes and tests which are faxed back and forth.

Dennis Hefner, vice president for academic affairs, explained, "Studies show that students can learn just as much from distant learning as those in a live classroom. The method is just as effective."

The cost for these classes will be the same amount as the regularly scheduled classes.

The technology that makes two-way video communication possible is known as "compressed video" and uses a device called CODEC. The system converts information, compresses pictures and sounds and sends picture information to provide educational programming to the various sites.

There are several advantages to distance learning, such as reducing commuting time and reducing smog from auto emissions. But Michael Clarke, president of the faculty union, warned, "The technology and production is costly. Where is the money for this going to come from?"

On Friday, March 4, from 2 to 5 p.m., the Faculty Senate and the California Faculty Association will sponsor a forum in the Creative Arts building for those interested in this issue. The program will offer information about distance learning and its advantages and disadvantages.

"We want to get our ducks all in a row," explained Oliver. A guest speaker from Chico State, Professor Rollie Hauser, has been invited to discuss distance learning.
Artist's rendering of the Student Union clock tower. Construction may begin as early as June, and should take about six months.

Classifieds

FUNDRAISERS Raise $500 in 5 days. Groups, clubs, motivated individuals 1-800-655-6935 EX. 101.

EXPERT WORD PROCESSING: Reports, thesis, resumes, manuscripts - Utilizing WordPerfect 6.0; laserjet printing. Call Pam, 864-8423.

INTERNATIONAL MOVING We ship almost anywhere. Free estimate. A-A TRANSFER 909-335-2628 or 1-800-889-MOVE.

Send your legible classified to The Chronicle, Attn: Todd, 5500 University Pkwy, SB, 92407; or drop it in our box, UH 201.09 on campus. $5 for the first 15 words; 25 cents per word thereafter.

4¢ COPIES White 8 1/2 X 11 Self-Service

1689 Kendall Dr. #H
(Corner of University Pkwy)
Expires 3/31/94
(909)880-0290
Fax (909)880-0292

HOME COMING SCRAPBOOK 1994

Photos courtesy of CSUSB Alumni Association

Many accidents are caused by car drivers who didn’t see the cyclists. Wear reflective gear and bright clothing. And keep your evening from being ruined.

MOTORCYCLE SAFETY FOUNDATION

World Famous KROQ 106.7 FM

Sunday Monday & Tuesday
MOST Drinks $1.25
Wednesday WET T-Shirt CONTEST
99-cent drinks 'til midnight
Thursday MALE EXOTIC DANCERS
Friday & Saturday Dance Dance Dance
4 dance floors open t// 4:00 a.m
909 682-3322
Information Line
EIGHTEEN & older

The Chronicle March 2, 1994 Page 7
Women slam Cal Poly SLO 111-58

by Jeremy Heckler
sports editor

The Cal State Women's Basketball team pounded Cal Poly San Luis Obispo Saturday night in a 111-58 blowout of the Mustangs. The team won with offense with six players in doubles figures led by 26 points each from Kim Young and Chenille Few.

The win sealed up the first conference title for the Coyotes who share the title with Cal Poly Pomona who finished in the CCAA with identical 8-1 records. The Broncos will host the opening round of the CCAA Tournament after winning the coin toss held after the game.

The two teams were even through the early minutes of the first half, but the Coyotes were able to capitalize on rebounds on the defensive end and pull out to a 57-26 halftime lead.

The second half was not better as the Coyotes at several times of the game led by 50 points and ended the game winning by 53.

The Coyotes outrebounded the Mustangs with 49 rebounds and shot over fifty percent from the field.

Beckleys on and off the court

Sisters give two point perspective on Csi State team

by James Trietsch
Chronicle staff writer

Luvina and Tamme Beckley are two sisters on campus that are both involved in Women's Basketball. The way each one is involved, however, is as different as night and day. Luvina Beckley is the coach of the CSUSB Women's Basketball team, while Tamme is a player.

Talking to the two sisters gives two different points of view on the team, but in many ways they overlap. Luvina is a little more involved with the statistical side of the team, while Tamme is in tune with what is happening on the court. Both sisters, however, know the team's strengths and weaknesses and the team's overall goals.

As of this writing, the Women's Basketball Freshman has rolled through Pomona and Dominguez Hills, both games ending in victory for CSUSB. This brings the team's record to 2-2, and they are tied for first place in the CCAA.

"I'll be happier when we're 2-0," commented Luvina, anticipating Saturday's game. Saturday will be the last stop for CSUSB before they roll into the NCAA Tournament.

When asked how the team might do in the tournament, Luvina replied, "I hope we can go the distance."

On the other side of the out-of-bounds line is Tamme. She has a different angle to the tournament. "We're nervous and excited. We've been waiting for this moment, and it came pretty quick."

According to both Tamme and Luvina, the team is playing well. Tamme mentions that their strength comes from all the team members working at their own job. She cites the examples of Kim Young running the ball back and Felice Logan nailing 3-point shots.

Weaknesses have a diverging view. "Any kinks better have been worked out by now," Luvina said with a smile. "We're working on finding the strengths of the other teams and dissing that." Tamme sees a weakness but finds it a mixed blessing. The CSUSB Women's Basketball team only has eight players. Tamme admits it is a weakness sometimes, but usually it gives the opposing team a false sense of confidence. "They see we're a small team."

On the court, the sisters are just another pair of people. Obviously it would be unfair to treat Tamme better than the other players, and Luvina knows this. She comments about having her sister on the team:

"It makes it easy because Tamme has done one heck of a job. She's a brat!"

On the court, the sisters are just another pair of people. Obviously it would be unfair to treat Tamme better than the other players, and Luvina knows this. She comments about having her sister on the team:

"It makes it easy because Tamme has done one heck of a job. She's a brat!"

Coyotes lose to Highlanders 88-83; end season 10-16

by Aaron Brady
Chronicle staff writer

The Cal State University San Bernardino men's basketball team needed some luck in their final game of the season on as 6 foot 11 inch senior center Bob Fife inside scoring led the University of California, Riverside Highlanders over the Coyotes 88-83. The win upped UCR's record to 19-6 overall and 10-2 in the CCAA while the Coyotes finished the season at 10-16, 3-9.

Fife controlled the inside game at both ends of the court converting several lob passes into easy lay-ups and forcing the Coyotes to change the trajectory of their shots whenever they came into the paint. The only Cal State player to have any success inside was 6-5 junior Ryan Mack who scored 14 points in the paint including two big dunks over Fife. Mack also grabbed eight rebounds to lead the Coyotes.

Without the existence of an inside game, the Coyotes were forced to shoot a lot of three-pointers to stay in the game which suits senior guard Eric Carpenter just fine. Carpenter was fine for twelve from behind the arc and finished with 28 points. As a team, the Coyotes were 10-26 from three-point range.

The Coyotes got into foul trouble in the second half as they tried to press the Highlanders to stay in the game. The referees were not going to let the Coyotes get away with anything. UCR didn't go to the free throw line in the first half, but went to the stripe a whopping forty times in the second. Fortunately for Cal State, the Highlanders only converted on 21 of them which allowed the Coyotes to stay in the game.

After being tied at 37 at the half, UCR jumped out to a nine point lead in the second half, but Cal State kept close as Carpenter buried a couple of threes and a fall away jumper from the baseline. Fife was just too tough down the stretch hitting six of ten free throws and two clutch buckets before leaving the game with an ankle injury with three minutes remaining.

The game was the final game at the Coyote Den. The Coyotes will move to the new 5000 seat Consolous Arena next season.

ALL NEW

Midnight Rodeo

50¢ THURSDAY

50¢ WELL, WINE, & DRAFT
$1.00 CALL & LONGNECKS
7-11 pm

FREE DANCE LESSONS FROM LINE DANCES TO THE 2-STEP
7 pm

21 & Over
295 East Caroline
San Bernardino, Ca
Just South of I-10 off Waterman
Behind Family Fitness
909-824-5444