Janne Irvine an accomplished pianist

by Larry Fehrenbach

Recently I was given the wonderful opportunity of meeting Janne Irvine. Before the interview she played some very beautiful pieces for me and I was very impressed by the way this artist flows with her music. At the age of 14, Janne, having experienced deteriorating vision all her life, turned to music as she could no longer read. She immediately began to compose, and she credits her excellent teachers for recognizing her good ear and never making her feel inferior because she did not have to access to either print or braille sheet music. From the beginning Janne mastered the traditional method of training, to gain a better orientation and approach to the modern piano. Dr. Irvine received her Bachelors Degree from Sarah Lawrence College in New York, in 1971, and her Masters in Music from Yale University School of Music in 1974. She recently received her Doctorate of Musical Arts from the University of Arizona in Tucson.

Janne currently resides in Tucson, Arizona in a house where she teaches 20 students, mostly adults and mostly sighted, in her own home where they have access to all three instruments previously mentioned. Dr. Irvine advocates the study of music by ear over the Braille method, and states that the method is as applicable to the sighted student as it is to the blind student. Learning music through the understanding of theory allows the student to learn music from the inside out, and Janne feels she can guess at how the composer put the music together, but learning only from print is merely skimming the surface.

Dr. Irvine's method of learning has been proven to work for others as Janne currently has a student here in Southern California who now has access to her tape library in Tucson. Janne's interests aside from music include swimming, gardening, oriental cooking, knitting and communicating with new people. She combines teaching with performing, gives lectures and talks, private consultations and performs at private parties which allow her to play the Piano and the Harpsichord.

Dr. Irvine's recent visit was her second time on campus. She is currently hoping to attract funds to facilitate her travel throughout the California college system to promote her method of training, to gain greater exposure for her approach to music and to demonstrate to students and their teachers that there is an alternative way of learning really works.

Dr. Irvine will be back at Cal State next fall, so be sure to catch her next performance because she is a real amazing lady.

The 1982 Spring Festival will be celebrated the week of the 16th of May thru the 21st of May. The events have been designed so that all students and faculty can enjoy and participate in all activities in a relaxing environment.

The Calendar is as follows:
May 10, Game Night (Ping pong, chess, cards, etc.)
May 11, Tuesday, Talent Day (display of student performers, 7-9 p.m. SUMP)
Progressive-left movement underway

There is interest on campus to start a group of progressive-left people from the campus community which might organize symposia, form study groups, conduct collective research, and present "alternative" courses. Also, there is the potential opportunity to work with the local community and student groups on current social and political issues.

An initial organizational get-together, either in Crestline or on campus, will be held some Friday or Saturday in the near future. If you are interested contact Tom or Sue Meisenhelder in the Sociology Department.

The cost of leaving just went down.
