Student Athletes Say "Thanks"

The Department of Athletics, the Student-Athlete Council and CSUSB's 10 intercollegiate teams took time to express their gratitude towards 23 staff and faculty on Feb. 29 in the Coussoulis Arena. The Second Annual "Faculty and Staff Appreciation Night" made it possible for all CSUSB faculty and staff and their guest to be admitted free to the game against Cal Poly Pomona. The honorees were commended for the impressions they made upon student athletes, the campus support they provided, and positive contributions to the pursuance of the students' degrees. Student athlete representatives escorted the honorees out onto the court and presented the awards in a short halftime ceremony.

Few Showed for Wings and King's

February 20 at 3:32 p.m., San Bernardino Fire Department and Campus Police were notified of this white Volkswagen Van burning in the parking lot near Jack Brown Hall and Student Housing. No evacuation was needed, and no injuries resulted, but students were kept at a safe distance for the 10 to 15 minutes necessary to extinguish the fire. The cause looked to be an electrical problem in the rear part of the van, where the engine and carburetor were located. The owner is a student at CSUSB.
School Spirit or Just a Phase?

School spirit seemed to ooze from the Coussoulis Arena on Homecoming night.

"I'm on the Board of Directors for the Student Union, and was also involved in the Minorities Association for Pre-Health Students.

Basically the environment is warm and the teachers are easy to interact with. There's a lot of opportunities concerning organizations, and we have a beautiful new facility that was just built. I take jazz classes there."

Kathleen Clark
Senior, English
"I do watch intermural sports such as soccer and baseball. I work at the women's resource center, I'm involved in the English Club, and I'm in a sorority, so I meet friends through there.

There's a certain lack of cohesiveness at (CSUSB), but it's a commuter school. I'd like to see more of a sense of student body unity.

Bill Franklin
Sophomore, Accounting
"I've attended men and women's basketball games. I come here to have fun, (to see) the women, and everything else that goes along with that."

Romeo Legrines

"I went to the pep rally. I come here to hang out with my friends in the Student Union, play basketball in the gym, and work at the Library."

"I've attended basketball and soccer games. I come here because it's close to my house. I'd like to see more organized tournaments like football."
There is Honor Among Pool Players

By Margaret Gholston
Coyote Chronicle Staff Writer

Members of an elite group gathered at CSUSB's arcade room to match talent against talent, skill against skill, luck against luck, man against man—er—women, too.

This all took place at the second Pool Tournament, part of the Career Center's Next Job Fair, the Part-Time Job Expo, sponsored by the Student Union Program Board on February 22 during the midday.

Sixteen players competed: 15 men and one woman: Ben Benjamin, Jonathan Chein, Kahlil Codoff, Danny Jones, Jamal Kabir, Jimmy Lam, Mike Mattes, Chris Pham, G-Van Se, Mac Seedi, Jay Sengdara, Kenyon Smith, Gal Thao, Gary West, Ray Wilson, and Monique Montana.

All of them played a good game, but only one was victorious. Montique Montana, who became the first woman to enter and win a pool tournament at Cal State.

Close calls made it seem as if Montana was not going to make it to the finals at all. She had some difficult shots to do. Once she even had to hit the eight ball into the right pocket, where she was shooting from.

In finals against Jonathan Chein, Montana was down by two games. She won the first, and then lost the next three. Then she made a comeback, winning games five and six. The seventh was a tie-breaker, and it seemed the odds were in favor of Chein, but as he sunk his final shot, the eight ball, he failed to call it correctly and Montana won the tournament.

Montana won two Laker tickets and a $25 gift certificate from Stater Brothers. Chein won a second place prize of two Kings' tickets and two AMC theater tickets, and Ray Wilson's third place trophy after playing a seven-game round against Jimmy Lam was a $25 Brothers certificate.

The pressure was on Montana from having people watching. She said it made her develop a stress headache. Still, she knew she would be O.K. because of her good luck, her friend Angelica "Champ" Yeves. Having played at pool halls on weekends for fun, Montana really got into pool when she came to Cal State. She said her secret was "winning depends on the break and how nervous you are... but I didn't win for myself, I did it for my dad so he could have the Laker tickets."

Montana's co-finalist Chein said that he encouraged Montana to play in the tournament and that though Gal "Rookie" Thao didn't advance to the second round, he was a good opponent.

"Everyone in the tournament played each other before and had beaten each other...but the most important thing in pool was that it was a game to be enjoyed amongst friends as a form of entertainment," Chein concluded.

Cal State Really Does Pay Off... Ask Billy Johnson

By Christopher Hoback
Special to The Coyote Chronicle

Billy Johnson Jr. said writing abilities and a strong work ethic landed the role of managing editor of the San Bernardino-based publication Rap Sheet when he visited Kevin Lamude’s public relations class in University Hall room 240 on Friday, March 1.

Johnson, a 1993 graduate of the Communication Studies Department at CSUSB, talked with students about his experiences in the field of journalism and public relations. He said he did a great deal of work early in his career at internships and “not so great” paying jobs to gain experience and contacts.

It’s not just what he knew or who he knew but the two combined that got him his current position.

Johnson began his collegiate career as a Computer Science major. Realizing, however, that math and science weren’t his favorite subjects, he decided to join the Comm Studies Department and pursue his dream of working in the media. He started getting experience almost immediately, hosting his own radio show on KSSB.

He was also hired to do off-campus work with a local publication called The Riverside Black Voice. “The paper allowed me to be the editor, which I thought would be cool for my resume,” said Johnson.

His first experience writing for a paying publication came in 1992 when a former dean of social sciences here at Cal State put him in contact with a former student of his who edited the teen rap magazine Rap Masters. He worked there for two years as a freelance writer. He also worked for Rap Pages in 1993 and 1994 until he landed a job with Rap Sheet.

Nine months later, the writing skills he had acquired and his hard work won him the position of managing editor. He realizes that he is very fortunate to have his job, as journalism is a highly competitive field.

His job at Rap Sheet provides him with a lot of fringe benefits. He gets to travel around the country frequently, and he enjoys listening to hip hop music, which is part of his job. But the best part of the job, Johnson confesses, is, “I haven’t bought music in 10 years and I don’t know how long.

He has also had the opportunity to meet some famous artists, such as Ice Cube, Chuck D and Queen Latifah. His favorite, though, was female rapper Yo-Yo. “She caught me blushing ‘during that interview,” said Johnson.

But the journalism business isn’t just about meeting famous people and listening to some cool tunes. Johnson typically works fifty to sixty hours a week, and sometimes through the weekend. He also conducts freelance assignments from other publications and does a Sunday morning radio show on KUCR, FM 88.3 from 7-10 AM.

In addition to reporting on current music news, Rap Sheet, the self-proclaimed “first hip hop newspaper,” also sponsors promotional events, such as the upcoming “Working Towards a Unified Hip Hop Nation.” The goal of this event is to gain acceptance of East and West Coast artists nationwide. It features performances by groups and individuals from both coasts.

The paper has a circulation of over 100,000 nation-wide and is also distributed abroad. This means that Johnson has to work very hard to ensure that Rap Sheet gets put out on time every month. Some of his duties include hiring and firing writers, giving out assignments and deadlines, and writing stories himself.

The class was very interested in what Johnson had to say, and had several interesting questions for him. He seemed very at ease and well-practiced in the art of public speaking, which can be attributed to his line of work, and, of course, the excellent training he received at the Comm Studies Department here at CSUSB.

He described several personal experiences about working in the field and applying for jobs. “It’s very important,” he advised, “to study the publication you want to work for.”

He referred to several faxes he had received that stated, “Dear Sir, I would be interested in the position with your newspaper.”

Rather than this kind of impersonal approach, Johnson recommends that those seeking a job in any publication actually read it first, find out who to contact, and then contact them and say why they would be interested in working with them. He likes to know that his writers actually know something about his newspaper.

Rap Sheet is always seeking talented new writers. Johnson urges those who are interested and have at least one year of experience and possibly a published writing sample to fax him a resume (310) 399-1722. The telephone number at Rap Sheet is (310) 399-1722.

With a job in a field he loves, doing what he loves to do, Billy Johnson has the kind of rapport that most Cal State students would love to have.

Speak Out on Diversity

By Donovan Rinker
Special to The Coyote Chronicle

Should cultural courses be taught at CSUSB? How should faculty and staff be hired? What policy should we have on affirmative action? What kinds of programs should the campus develop?

Planning is underway to answer questions like these about the future of CSUSB, but in the Strategic Planning Diversity Committee, one key element is missing: student input.

The committee will continue conducting a series of focus group sessions on Friday mornings at the Faculty Office Building, room 177, until the end of March. These meetings are open to the campus, and student input is critical for their success. Anyone with proposals, solutions to problems, concerns, or criticism about any aspect of diversity on campus is invited to participate.

So far, discussions have covered issues affecting black, white, latinos, and gay/lesbian/bi-sexual students, staff, faculty and parents. In each discussion, participants spoke about their impressions and experiences concerning diversity on this campus—what they liked and what they were outraged about. They shared hopes and criticisms, and in doing so, helped shape the focus for the Cal State of the 21st century.

“Diversity” is defined by dimensions like race, ethnicity, religious belief, sexual orientation, sex/gender, disability, socioeconomic status, cultural orientation, national origin, and age. Issues of diversity have been and will continue to be a source of strength for CSUSB. However, they have not been managed to the highest potential, and there is a need for improvement.

On this campus, as everywhere, there is space for misunderstanding and perhaps hostility any time there are differences between people. But only when these differences are perceived as cultural is there an opportunity to learn and grow, to become educated. The goal of diversity on this campus is to explore the variety of ways of living, to enable students to learn without cheap slogans or hollow propaganda—about each other.

Much work has been done, and will continue to be done, but when this stage of the planning process concludes in March, with it will close one excellent opportunity for any students with a voice to get involved and speak up about their concerns regarding diversity. Contact Billy Blair in the School of Education at 880-5000, ext. 3600 or Donovan Rinker at 880-7710.

Seismic Retrofits for Schools Put to March 26 Ballot

From News Services

The safety of public education facilities is central to two of the building projects here at CSUSB, which would be funded pending voter approval of the $3 billion Proposition 203 on the March 26 ballot.

Seismic retrofits of the Commons and new Visual Arts Center would be covered by the general obligation bond funding. A third, Proposition 203 on the March 26 ballot, would be covered by the general fund.

"We were aware during construction that changes were needed and we applied to the state for augmentation, but it was not granted," said David DeMauro, vice president of administration and finance.

The building is designed like a warehouse, in some sections with exposed and unfinished beams, the reinforcement work will be less disruptive than might be expected. In the classrooms, DeMauro explained, improvements will have to be made working around the occupants, who are expected to move into the building by this fall.

More than two-thirds of the Proposition 203 funding will go to K-12, which has been combined with public higher education funding needs for the first time in a bond initiative.

Support for the Proposition 203 ballot measure comes from a wide number of groups and opposition is being registered by the Libertarian Party.

Bargains at the Campus Pharmacy

By Neil Farber

Special to The Coyote Chronicle

One of the campus' little-known secrets is the existence of a retail pharmacy. Located inside the Student Health Center, the pharmacy provides services to any currently enrolled student. All medications are sold at cost.

In addition to filling prescriptions written by Health Center, the pharmacist also sells over-the-counter medications that do not require a prescription. These include generic Tylenol ($2 per 100), generic Robitussin ($1.14 per 4 oz bottle), generic Gyne-Lotrimin ($3.29 per 45 gm tube), and generic Tenum-M vitamin/mineral formula ($4.24 per 120).

It is usually less expensive to have prescriptions filled at the Health Center Pharmacy, because the state contracts with individual drug companies. A 10-day supply of amoxicillin, 250 mg, costs $2.80; for Ery-Tabs, 333 mg, the cost is $2.80; for amoxicillin, 500 mg, the cost is $4.70; for generic Sopr-KDS the cost is $3.

The pharmacist may fill prescriptions written by an outside physician if it is stocked in the pharmacy. Birth control, which are sold at most retail pharmacies for $25 to $30 per cycle, only cost between $3 and $4 per cycle.

The pharmacist will provide patient consultation and explain to the patient what the medication's use, method of consumption, storage, and possible side effects.

Questions should be directed to the pharmacy at ext. 2723.

Take A Lucky Peek at These Greeks

By Jason Armstrong

The Zeta Zeta chapter of Kappa Delta sorority, along with Kappa Delta chapters nationwide, is engaging in its sixth annual fundraising drive for the March Shamrock Project, which seeks money for the prevention of child abuse.

Twenty percent of the money that the chapter collects benefits the National Committee to Prevent Child Abuse, and 80 percent goes to support the Child Help USA Village for the Kids, located in Beaumont.

The CSUSB sorority raised over $4,000 toward the cause in 1995, and plans to raise at least $4,500 in 1996. "On a national level, we raised over $250,000 last year," said Jolie Balakoski, co-chairperson of the project.

The Shamrock Project is unique because it provides an opportunity for other Greek organizations and students at Cal State to get involved. They can take part in the Shamrock King contest, in which a gentleman from each fraternity is nominated by Kappa Delta, based on his involvement in the sorority.

Each fraternity has a specific costume. For example, the Kappa Delta showcase is the girl from the Kappa Delta, based on his involvement in the sorority.

The Greeks who raise the most money and receive the most support from our chapter will win the title of King for a year," said Balakoski.

Once the "coronation" occurs, the Shamrock King attends sorority events and receives royal treatment from the ladies of KD.

In addition to money raised by the Shamrock King contest, the sorority will host a raffle and Mexican style luncheon on Wednesday, March 6, near the grass area in front of the library. These proceeds will go toward the philanthropy.

Shamrock tickets for both the luncheon and raffle will be sold by members of Kappa Delta for $5. The meal of burritos, rice, beans, chips and salsa, and beverages is being donated by nearby restaurants such as Rosa Maria's and Taco Bell. "The ticket stubs will be entered into a raffle prizes include tickets to Disneyland, cash, and gift certificates to restaurants and other places of business," said Balakoski.

The tickets also serve as coupons for food discounts at businesses, such as Rosa Maria's and Taco Bell.

"We are raising money to support the March of Dimes," said Balakoski. "The tickets also serve as coupons for food discounts at businesses, such as Rosa Maria's and Taco Bell."

Naked Without the Name You've Known Your Whole Life

By Livier Martinez
Special to The Coyote Chronicle

Why is it that when women marry, they forfeit their identities by replacing their own last name with their husband’s? Your name is who you are, your identity and your history. Ironically, women have never truly had their own last names. They’ve always been assigned either their husband’s or father’s last name or both.

I bet I couldn’t retain part of my history and keep the identity that I have been familiar with my entire life, so I made a pact with myself. I vowed I was not going to change my last name, if I ever married. I would never be addressed as Mrs. (men are always called Mr., no matter what their marriage status is). I would never be addressed as Mrs. and Mr. Alberto Granillo, as if, as soon as I married my husband, I become his property. Furthermore, my name is not Albert, why would someone call me Mrs. Alberto Granillo?

It is appalling to me that women are expected to lose their identity by changing their last name after marriage, while men’s last names after marriage remain the same. Furthermore, the name changes imply that husbands acquire their wives as property.

I am writing this article as a plea for change and equality for women, by changing their last name after marriage remain the same. Moreover, my name is not Alberto, I become his property. Furthermore, my last name, if I ever married, I would never be addressed as Mrs. and Mr. would never be addressed as Mrs. and Mr. Alberto Granillo, as if, as soon as I married my husband, I become his property. Lions, Tigers, and Islam, Oh My!

To the Editor:

The article by Octavia Flores a couple of editions ago makes me wish people would stop writing things they're ignorant about. It is not a fact that Islam is against interracial relationships. However, I can't blame her too much. Most Americans are ignorant regarding the subject of Islam. The very word scares you, doesn't it? Lions, tigers, and Islam, oh my! And don't think of Saudi Arabia. It's just one facet of Islam and isn't a truly a Muslim country because it doesn't have a Muslim government.

I am a Muslim, follower of Islam. In Islam, we are taught that no race is superior to another and that all Muslims are the brothers and sisters of other Muslims. In fact, I know of many Muslim inter racial marriages. Louis Farrakhan may be against interracial relationships, but that's because he doesn't put being Muslim first, but being black. It's against Islam to do a lot of the things that Farrakhan is doing, like using Islam to promote racial hatred. Therefore it's doubtful whether Farrakhan is really even a Muslim or not. He represents only a small, though highly prolific, part of the Muslims in America.

The rest, the majority of Muslims in America, are Sunni Muslims. Sunni means following the practices of Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him), and that means being against racial prejudice and against evil in every shape or form. Take Malcolm X, for example. He thought the same way Farrakhan did, until he went to Mecca. Read what he said before he went to Mecca and afterward, and you'll notice a huge difference.

Islam is the second largest religion in the world. Scary isn't it, that a religion that tells people to believe in one God, to pray and give charity, to believe in all the prophets before the last prophet Muhammad (pbuh), Jesus (pbuh) included, and in all the books that came before the Koran, the Bible included, is the fastest growing religion in America. I challenge people to read about Islam, and not simply rely on what they see in the media, which basically reports on the bad things over the good. Terrorists, for example. Islam is evil because a few that call themselves Muslims, such as terrorists, commit evil deeds? Where is the logic in that reasoning? Hmm. Wasn't there a King Henry who was both a Christian and a murderer? Therefore... Questions, any one?

The movie “Unforgettable” is a murder-mystery with a new technological edge. The viewer gets the chance to be in the place of the victim and experience the act of being murdered through an experiment of memory transfer.

Ray Liotta, the psycho cop in “Unlawful Entry,” is Dr. David Krane, a medical examiner for the Seattle coroner’s office. Although mistrial is declared for the murder of his wife, suspicion runs rampant in the community. Throughout the movie he is obsessed with finding the killer and proving his innocence.

While at dinner with other medical professionals, Krane intensely watches one of the speakers, Dr. Martha Briggs (Linda Fiorentino), who has a close resemblance and mannerisms that pattern those of Sandra Bullock, discuss the research project of memory transfer between lab rats. The chemical is retained from DNA in spinal fluid and a catalyst drug that can be injected into another rat and bring the memory with it.

Visiting Briggs, Krane volunteers to be the first human to be involved in her research but Briggs refuses, due to the health risks involved. Determined to use the memory transfer, he steals the catalyst serum and a vial of his wife’s spinal fluid.

Sitting in the room in which his wife was murdered, he ties off his arm and painfully injects himself with the combined solutions. A few seconds later he opens his eyes and is reliving the crime through the eyes of his wife. As she comes in the door and sets her things down, a faceless man strangles her to unconsciousness.

After Krane is in his body again and left with a lot of unanswered questions, he does remember seeing a clue (a rolled matchbook) that he noticed at an earlier crime scene in a Chinatown drug store. He injects himself again but uses the fluid from one of the victims found dead in the drug store. Fortunately, he sees the killer’s face but has to experience a bloody and inhumane death—for the second time.

The stunts and memory transfers are the strongest points in this film. Seeing someone inject themselves made me squirm, and witnessing someone being killed can get even more scary. The viewer is easily drawn into Krane’s obsession with finding his wife’s murderer, but towards the end you have either guessed who it is or just want the damn thing to get over with. For this reason, “Unforgettable” is likely a movie you will soon forget.

Whose Dream Is It?

Real and imagined worlds come together in Shakespeare’s production of “A Midsummer Night’s Dream” opening March 8 at Cal State. In the “real” world, Theseus, Duke of Athens, and Hippolyta, Queen of the Amazons, decide to marry to end the conflict between their two lands. However, after the Duke advises Hermia to marry her father’s choice, Demetrius, she flees to the fairy world with her true passion, Lysande.

Confusion overcomes them when the attendant Puck touches Lysande’s eyes with a magic love potion that prompts him to fall in love with the first person he sees when he awakens. In this magical romance playgoers encounter not only the famous fantasy character Puck but also Bottom, Titania and Oberon. “Midsummer Night’s Dream” is continually fascinating because of the fantasy, and fantasy has great flexibility,” says Ron Barnes, director of the play.

Imagination today is in shorter supply than it was in the late 16th and early 17th centuries when Shakespeare wrote. Computers are enhancing the world of special effects with films such as “Babe” where animals talk, but at the same time, says Barnes, they leave less to the viewers’ imagination. “This play is one of Shakespeare’s many explorations of dream, and the title of the play itself raises the question, “whose dream is it?””

Performances run March 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, 16 at 8:15 p.m., and March 10 and 17 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $4 for students, $10 for general admission, and $6 for senior citizens and alumni. Call the Theatre Arts Department to make reservations on weekdays, 909-880-5876.
"Waitin' for George" Proves Talent Does Run in the Family

By Melissa Pinion

Show me a blues song I haven't heard a similar version of, and I'll show you an astonished woman.
That's the nature of blues, though. It's like a universal house that we all can call home.

And the Freewheelers, with their first release from American Recordings, "Waitin' for George," the house of blues just may have room for a couple more family members. The album, which hits stores on Feb. 27 is the most recent joy to surface in the legacy of the Russell family. Singer Luther Russell, the Freewheeler's leader, has more claim to fame than the band's recent release.

His father was a hair stylist for the likes of the Eagles, The Dog Night, and Mick Jagger. And his grandfather and great-uncle were famous songwriters whose work appeared in the soundtrack for Woody Allen's "Hanna and Her Sisters" among other things.

"Waitin' for George" is proof that talent sometimes does run in the family.

The Portland-based quartet has a radiance that hits the listener from all angles with an endless variety of instrumental flavors.

"What's The Matter Ruth" crumps with fat organs and bluesy piano chords. Singer Russell belts with the similar throat of Joe Cocker back in the days of the Mad Dogs and Englishmen. More importantly, its probably the most balanced song on the CD.

More danceable is the funk and thick bass line in "My Little Friend". "Crime Pays" is another funk tune, but gets more into the style of the Sergeant Pepper era. This, of course, is where the band's hidden influences come out, and the Freewheeler's are heavily seasoned with influences.

Producer George Drakoulis' reputable hand comes out in the aforementioned tracks and it should be no surprise to the listener that some of his other protégés include the Jayhawks and the Black Crowes.

The band's influences, however, include the Beatles, Harry Nilsson, and Randy Newman according to Russell.

Traces of the Beatles can be seen in the likes of "Walkin' Funny" with a moderate beat and melodic church bells.

"Blame" brings the band back to what they excel at—good, slow blues. When Russell cries out, "You wish you were only, just another face in the crowd" one would swear that the singer has more pain inside his gut and soul than any other with that particular throaty style of singing.

Perfect in the presence of a cold one and good company, "Waitin' for George" has both the entertaining quality and the technical endurance that much older blues lacks.

Look for the Freewheeler's on their current U.S. tour.

Auditions, Auditions

An open call for dancers, children, principals, and chorus singers—all categories both genders and ethnic minorities strongly encouraged—occurs on March 10 for the San Bernardino Civic Light Opera Production's "Evita."

Dancers should come that Sunday to the stage door entrance of the California Theatre, 562 W. 4th St., at noon, children at 3 p.m., and principals and chorus singers at 6 p.m.

Rehearsals begin on April 8, and the production will open April 19 and close April 28.

Eva Peron, Che Guevara, Juan Peron, Augustin Magaldi, and Peron's mistress are the open principal roles. Singer-actors can be in their early 20s and up, all types.

Dancers must know ballet, jazz and have character training. Two men will be featured and so will one tango couple. Three boys and three girls, aged 8 through 12, are also needed.

For more information, call 909-386-7353.

All roles are open at another audition on Monday, March 11, at 7 p.m., for "The Secret Garden," which is being produced by the Riverside Civic Light Opera. The auditions take place in Landis Auditorium in Riverside.

The production runs from April 26 through May 5.

Auditioners—all minorities encouraged—should come prepared to sing 16 bars of their best and to do various stage movements.

Principal roles of Mary Lennox, a 12-year-old girl, and Colin Craven, a young boy the same age, are the central characters. Two Equity Guest Artist contracts will be used on the production, and all roles can be paid ones.

Ah, Sweet Mysteries of Life

By Jon Lyons

Life will equal the success of the founding duo's former partner Hatfield, or even their former band The Blake Babies, there is no reason why Keep A Secret should remain one. This type of pop rock has once again become popular and this is a shining example of why it should be. Not lacking in emotion or in good old-fashioned fun, The Mysteries of Life is a rare pop gem in the otherwise tepid pool of alternative music.

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pretax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on federal and, in most cases, state and local income taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

As the nation's largest retirement system, based on assets under management, we offer a wide range of allocation choices—from the TIAA Traditional Annuity, which guarantees principal and interest (backed by the company's claims-paying ability), to TIAA-CREF's diversified variable annuity accounts. And our expenses are very low,* which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.

To find out more, call 1 800 842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.

And the Party Began...

Party-goers get their fill of the delicious food displayed at the pre-game barbecue.

Faculty, students, and alumni packed the old gym. (Even President Evans can be seen hoopin’ it up in the lower right corner.)

Students enjoy the atmosphere on the dance floor provided by the live band.

As the night grew longer, the crowd grew louder.
