Serving the Cal State San Bernardino Community

Volume 18 Number 2 October 5, 1983

University by Linda Riddell
California State University, San Bernardino. Sounds terrific but what and where is it? It's a gift to be cherished by all Cal State students, and you are already where you need to be to get it! CSCSB students who plan to graduate as early as this winter or spring quarter of 1984 might be surprised to learn that they will be graduating from a university rather than the state college they are now attending. CSCSB has finally reached their goal of meeting four of the five criteria for becoming a university. According to Edna Steinman of the Public Affairs Office, she states now that they will be accredited programs in the faculty have their terminal degree, or the highest degree available in their field, which Ms. Steinman says is another of the qualifying elements. We also have the correct number of alumni, and the count for student enrollment for the 1983 fall quarter to date is 5,589, which is well over the qualifying 5,081. However, the true census will be obtained Oct. 12 when all the fall quarter drops can be tallied. At that time it can be determined which students have actually dropped from the college itself. This will of course, alter the final count for the total fall enrollment; but Ms. Steinman says not enough drops are anticipated to hamper Cal State's chance for the title of university.

New Guidelines For Fee Increases
A student sponsored bill which establishes a process for setting and adjusting Calif. State Univ. student fees has been signed into law by the Governor. Assembly Bill 1251, carried by Assemblywoman Gwen Moore, now Chapter 1014 says that if fee increases are necessary in CSU, that they be "gradual, moderate and predictable." Student charges at the CSU will be set between 10 and 20 percent of the State's average funding commitment over a three year period. "Finally the State of California has placed the student fees will be set and adjusted," said Curtis Richards, Legislative Director for the California State Student Association which sponsored the measure. "With the adoption of Ms. Moore's bill, students and their families can once again plan for the financing of a CSU education. AB 1251 should put an end to ad hocish, erratic fee increases like we have had in the last few years."
"This is a major victory for students and for higher education. We have a stable fee policy," Richards continued. "We were discouraged from moving this bill last Spring for political reasons. But, we needed protection against rising fees. AB 1251 is a reasonable approach to a State/student shared responsibility for funding a college education."

Forseeing an unlimited skyrocket direction for fees, the Calif. State Student Assoc. last year encouraged the Legislature to closely

Fountains Turned On
by Kellie Rayburn
Students who have had reason to visit the gym or the Administration buildings during this new school year may have noticed a change in the atmosphere. The sound which now accompanies the rustling of leaves and lunch bags in these areas is that of the long-silent fountains. In fact, the fountains have been shut down for such a long time that no one can seem to remember exactly when they were shut off. It is known that when a dry-spell and a nation-wide energy crisis occurred, it was thought best to turn the fountains off. The resulting cement holes were considered by many to be eyesores as well as potentially hazardous. In addition, the dry fountains were occasionally vandalized by dirt and rock throwers who broke many of the lights.

Late last year, at the request of the executive committee of the Faculty Senate, President Evans and Jim Urata, Director of Administrative Affairs, conducted a study to find out whether it was possible both financially and mechanically to use the fountains again. The study showed that, although several of the fountains would need extensive work, they could be made to run and be maintained for the cost of about $300 a year. This, according to President Evans, seemed like a nominal cost when compared to the benefits. Once the budgetary cycle was completed, and it was apparent that the money was available, it became a matter for the maintenance department. While the fountain at the south end of the Administration Building was made easily operable, there were considerable problems with the one on the west end. Parts for the motors were hard to find, so many were made here on campus by Hal Peterson of the maintenance department. Parts had to be ordered for the fountain outside the Biology Building and more work needs to be done before it will be running.

President Evans says that he is extremely pleased with the work that has been done as well as the overwhelming favorable reaction that he has received. The area outside of the Administration offices was one of the least attractive, yet carries some of the heaviest pedestrian traffic on campus. I think that this has really improved it."

Co-op Volume Can Increase

by Louise M. Connal

Most of us are only too aware of the increasing cost of attending college. This year many of us found it particularly hard to meet the steep increases in student fees. In order to help offset the pain of digging deeper into our pockets, many students turned to the Associated Students book co-op. This year 439 books were brought in to be sold on consignment. Out of these, 299 were sold. The number of students who sold books was 154. As of the morning of Sept. 26, 191 students had come in to buy books from the co-op.

This is a very small percentage of the college population, which is the registrar's office total as 5,625 students this fall. The main reason for this is the lack of awareness by the majority of students of the co-op's existence. Many students came in as the supply of books began dwindling, so were unable to buy their books. Other students could not find the books they needed. Perhaps more students need to be aware that they can sell their books at the co-op at a price they set themselves and still do a service for other students. But those students who used the co-op were grateful to find the books they needed at prices they could afford.

The co-op was first initiated at Cal State in the spring quarter of 1982 by then A.S. President Pauline Barbour. The service fits in well with the college tradition of students helping students. A.S. does not charge the students for managing the sales of the books. However, the costs of running the book co-op are increasing, and A.S. is contemplating a surcharge of 25¢ per book or a percentage fee on each sale to defray expenses.

Non registrants denied federal aid.

On Oct. 1, 1983, the Solomon Amendment denying Federal aid to non-registrant students will take effect as a result of a Supreme Court ruling. The Solomon Amendment requires students who are eligible for the registration to sign a statement stating that they have registered for the draft in order to receive Federal financial support.

A Federal District Court judge had found the Solomon Amendment unconstitutional on June 16, 1983, on the grounds that it punished against self-incrimination.

Eric Mesmerizes Audience

by Carol Leish

People were impressed with the performance by the "Wizard of Oz" in the Student Union on September 28th. Eric began by saying you "can create a sensation with your own imagination."

Eric demonstrated his talent by hypnotising volunteers. According to him, the "subconcious mind takes over in the hypnotic state and views reality." He told one volunteer: "Hold on to the pen then try to let go." That was difficult for the volunteer to do. Then to another volunteer he said in a smooth voice: "relax." After pressing the back of the volunteer's neck, he said: "take a deep breath, hold it and feel the tension." As he said: "sleep", the volunteer fell into his arms. The subject appeared to be in a deep serene state. Eric the hypnotist also displayed some memory exercises. He made a volunteer temporarily forget the number 6 by saying: "Forgetting, forgetting, gone." She could not answer the question: AVhat is three plus three? The subject even believed she had a parakeet on her fingers. In his finale, Eric transferred his feeling to others, a Mesmer act. He could see that people in the audience became relaxed.

The large crowd enjoyed the hypnotist's presentation. Eric's impressive skills made it possible for the volunteers to "create ideas with a robust sensation." He said that when a person becomes hypnotised he becomes more aware of his "free will." There was much applause after the demonstration that allowed the volunteers to "create and control" sensations within their imagination.

examine the impact of student charges on access to postsecondary education. Through Assembly Concurrent Resolution 81 (Hart), the Legislature directed the Calif. Postsecondary Education Commission to do such a study and make some policy recommendations regarding fees.

CPEC recommended that "the State should establish explicit policies for setting and adjusting student charges. Such policies should assume a continuing combination of State and student financing of public postsecondary education and should establish the basis on which adjustments in student charges will be made." CPEC further recommended that fees in the Univ. of Calif. and the Calif. State Univ. should be set and adjusted according to a regular process. "The index recommended would have

A.S. President's Right Hand Man: Chuck Marquez

"If anyone has any comments or praise for A.S., please contact me, but if you have any problems or complaints, then please contact my right hand man personally," states A.S. President, Rod Hendry. "My right hand man" refers to his executive assistant, Chuck "Chaz" Marquez.

Marquez, as Executive Assistant, is partially responsible for screening Hendry's appointments along with other duties, including advising Hendry, co-ordinating the administrative aspects of Associated Students, supervising the A.S. chairs and co-ordinating special projects.

One of Marquez's special projects is the Resident Fee Ticket Drawing. Pizza coupon tickets are purchased by students and are entered in a drawing for the amount of next quarter's residence fees. This A.S. fundraiser has just broken even according to Marquez.

As a management science major, Marquez has also been instrumental in trouble shooting structural and motivational problems in A.S. He hopes not only to make this a successful year, but also help future administrations be successful by trouble shooting.

A Moreno resident, Marquez works up to ten hours a day for A.S. along with working part-time as a security guard in Sunnymead. He will graduate in December, but is considering staying on as the Executive Assistant and taking assorted classes.

One of Marquez's pet projects is voter registration and participation in government. "A.S. provides a number of services, but I feel that our primary concern is with student representation in government."

Books For Casual Reading
by Rita Clark
The CSCSB Bookstore, under direction of Carol Dunlap, manager, is making some very exciting changes this year. These changes include greater selection in most departments, lower prices on many items and a remodelled clothing area.

One of the major new developments is Carol's decision to carry a large supply of books for the casual reader. To assist in the selection of books, the Cal State Marketing Association is currently working on a marketing survey for Carol, to be distributed during the first weeks of school. The survey has been designed by members of the CSMA to pinpoint reading preferences, as well as demographic information and purchasing habits of students. The survey will be conducted and collated by CSMA members, and results will be considered when ordering casual reading materials. The plan should be fully implemented by winter quarter.

Although the completed plan will not be available for several weeks, Carol is anxious to point out that the bookstore has a variety of books for casual reading in the store now, with new titles coming in all the time. In addition to these, desired books can also be special-ordered by the bookstore with delivery in one to one and one-half to two weeks. Students wishing this service should contact Ruth Moore, the textbook clerk.

Another major change is a remodeled clothing area. All the latest styles of campus casual wear are being carried. If students see apparel in other stores that they would like to see carried in the bookstore, they can talk to the clothing buyer, Phil Tamayo.

Also this quarter, the bookstore has lowered prices on nine major popular items. This includes supplies such as filler paper, index dividers.
Does Campus Food Turn Your Stomach?

by Susan Briggs and Donna Watkins

Looking for a place to eat on campus? There are a variety of options available. These include: The Student Union snack bar, the commons, and the vending machines. Overall the most popular choice seems to be the snack bar, the main reason being the social atmosphere. Students like to socialize in the snack bar. Eating there is a good place to meet old friends or to make new ones. Also, the Student Union has more convenient hours. It serves food from 10:30 a.m. to about 10:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday. On Thursdays, the area stays open until 1 a.m., depending on the number of students still in the S.U. On the other hand, the commons is basically open for meals. Breakfast is served from 7:15 - 8:30, lunch is served from 11:30 with dinner served from 5-6:30.

Although the selection at the commons is better than other places, the prices are generally considered too high. Though people tend to prefer the snack bar, one advantage of the commons is that they serve hot food. Even so it seems that most of the people who eat in the commons are campus residents. It does not appear that the commuters who comprise about 95% of the campus population, are aware of what the commons has to offer.

Another option is the vending machines which are located in the Student Services Building and the Library annex. These machines offer snacks, deli items, and beverages. Being close to classes is the main advantage of these machines; people like to buy snacks right before or after classes. Many of the people questioned in a questionnaire distributed about campus, bring food from home and buy drinks and desserts on campus.

by Susan Briggs and Donna Watkins

An informal campus survey reflected students’ feelings toward the commons food service. Questions were asked regarding the quality of food, the quality of service, and whether dorm students should be allowed to use their meal tags in the pub.

Of those questioned, 73% said that they felt students should be allowed to use their meal tags in The Pub.

Quality and service were rated on a scale that included poor, fair, good and excellent. Of these choices, all of the students rated the overall food quality as either fair or poor, with 76% rating the quality as fair. The service was considered slightly more acceptable, with 56% rating the service as good; the other remaining 44% thought the service was either fair or poor.

It is worth noting that none of the students questioned rated the quality or service at the commons to be excellent.

Quality and service were rated on a scale that included poor, fair, good and excellent. Of these choices, all of the students rated the overall food quality as either fair or poor, with 76% rating the quality as fair. The service was considered slightly more acceptable, with 56% rating the service as good; the other remaining 44% thought the service was either fair or poor.

It is worth noting that none of the students questioned rated the quality or service at the commons to be excellent.

Quality Survey

by Susan Briggs and Donna Watkins

An informal campus survey reflected students’ feelings toward the commons food service. Questions were asked regarding the quality of food, the quality of service, and whether dorm students should be allowed to use their meal tags in the pub.

Of those questioned, 73% said that they felt students should be allowed to use their meal tags in The Pub.

Were health services severely affected by the recent budget cuts? We have not received our budget allotment yet, but we are of the opinion that it will not be cut severely. I have some questions about different health problems, but I really don't want to bother a doctor. Is there anywhere I can get general information?

Yes, Trustworthy advice is as close as your phone, and it's free. Tel-Med is a non-profit organization that provides a library of over 400 health care and safety tips on cassette tape. These bilingual—both English and Spanish—tapes are generally only two to three minutes long and will give you information on subjects such as alcohol abuse, respiratory problems, child abuse, and venereal disease. The Tel-Med number for the San Bernardino/Colton area is 825-7000. They are in operation Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Brochures listing all the tapes in the library are available in the Student Health Center. Remember, Tel-Med is a free, private way to find out more about your health. No one will ask your name.

Will the Health Center Pharmacy fill prescriptions from my private physician?

Yes, with some restrictions. It must be a written prescription, and we will only fill it if we stock that particular medication. We cannot special order medications not in stock. We try to limit outside prescriptions to a maximum of a thirty-day supply. There are a few exceptions: for example oral contraceptives (birth control pills) and tetracycline.

Can I find out in advance if the Pharmacy has the medication my physician has ordered?

Yes, by simply calling 887-7641, we can tell you if we have it in stock. If you need you medication because you are scheduled for oral surgery (shaving tooth extraction), tonsillectomy, or any elective surgery, or if you need to know what, birth control pills we stock, we will be happy to assist you with the appropriate list.

How can the Health Center assist me if I have a simple cold, scratchy throat, headache, or indigestion, and I don't really need to see the physicians?

We have many over-the-counter remedies available at no cost to the student. Just drop by the Health Center, describe your problem, and pick up aspirin or whatever is suitable for your needs.

It was Thursday, September 22, 1983 at 6:30 p.m. I asked, "Go into my bedroom and on my desk is a book titled Contemporary Poetry. Look inside the front cover and there'll be a manila card that looks like it was shot through with square buckshot. Get it." And then, remembering the fragmented remains of my manners, "Please." I waited a minute on the line and told myself to relax. It was no big deal. This happens to a lot of new students, especially on the first day of classes. When she came back, I asked my patient mother to read all the numbers and letters across the top of the card and it was just as I thought. It said "ENG513, 4 p.m., TH" That was a "T" on the card Mom had back in Ontario. The cards I ha in my hand said "MW." That mean Monday and Wednesday that the class was to meet. Needless to say, I had neglected to realize that this certain day happened to be a Thursday.

"Are you alright?" mom asked. "You didn't happen to run across my head while you were in my room, did you?" I misplaced it. It's probably still somewhere in Wednesday." Thank goodness for patient mothers! At least now we supposed the class had been cancelled. I demanded to know why everyone, but the two of us, was notified of the cancellation. Boy, did I feel small. I didn't feel like playing "freshman" again but that's the one, small curse of being a transfer student.

I ended up in the wrong class at 6 p.m., too. I would have like nothing less than to disappear into thin air when one of the faculty called to my attention the "M's" and "W's" on my class tickets. "See this? This stands for Monday-Wednesday, dear. Today is Thursday." Did you ever try laughing when all your sense of humor just crawled under the table? It's not easy.

It's getting better, though, as the days go by. They say that practice makes perfect, right? At least I wasn't alone. When Monday finally came and everybody showed up for my big lecture class, I turned around in my seat and recognized the woman from the previous Thursday. We both laughed for a second and I had to ask, "When did you find out it was Thursday?" I asked above the loud voices. She lifted her hand and spread out her fingers to signify 5 o'clock. That wasn't much of a consolation. I didn't find out until 6:30.

Today, the toughest thing about going to college is finding the money to pay for it. But Army ROTC can help—two ways! First, you can apply for an Army ROTC scholarship. It covers tuition, books, and supplies, and pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect. But even if you're not a scholarship recipient, ROTC can still help with financial assistance—up to $1,000 a year for your last two years in the program.

“Killer Dips” Opens
by Carol Leish

“Killer Dips” opened on September 30 at the Creative Arts building. This show displays the modern work by artists Bob Hope Zaell and Gary Painter.

Bob Hope Zaell has been a commercial artist for quite a while. He said that he did work for his father, who is a printer. His past shows include “Stupid Art,” “Stupid Zole,” “Stupid China Club” and “Cume for Me.” His goal is to always produce good paintings, and he enjoys his “provocative” style of art. According to Bob, “somebody has to hope in order to succeed.”

Gary Painter has been a serious painter since high school. He enjoys many styles, but prefers figurative imagery over abstraction. He finds much delight in doing “dark edge” landscapes in order to portray an “eeriness.” He is into doing a lot of primal creation imagery, and has done album covers for Frank Zappa, Dave Mason and Chakakhon. Gary commented: “I insist on doing weird work.” He is presently doing his own album for Japan. However most of his exposure is from his comic drawings.

Dan Woodford, an art teacher, commented that the art work is “very fresh.” He said that the artists are good friends and that they influence one another. Mr. Woodford was impressed with the “assaulting and aggressive” style of painting. According to student opinion, the display was thoroughly enjoyable. Becky Anderson, an art major, was “impressed with the carefree imagery” conveyed in the art work. Karen Wood, also an art major, commented that the work was “very brilliant” and with Bob Hope Zaell portrayed a “satirical message to do whatever you want,” according to the opinion of Phillip Linger. He also said that Gary Painter portrayed his expressionistic values and thoughts.

The “Killer Dips” display will be in the art gallery until Oct. 26. By viewing the various paintings and the intricate sketches, one can imagine for themselves the messages that the artists want to convey. This exhibit portrays a unique quality, and is consistent with the artist’s own particular style.

New Requirements for
by Meech Campbell

During this past summer the theatre department has undergone a number of changes in its programming and scheduling. Previously the department’s programs only catered to those completely devoted, die-hard theatre majors who have already been in theatre and performing arts long before coming to Cal State. “Therefore, these revisions,” according to Dr. Ron Bams, department chairman, “are aimed to expose other students to the theatre program.” He hopes to make these students some of the die-hard. The department’s students and directors hope these new changes, combined with established programs, will nicely complement the department.

Theatre arts, first of all, has broadened its field of major study into three specific areas including, Acting, Technical design, and Dramatic Literature. They have also broken down the number of units, in some courses, to two or three units instead of the usual five. The final major change implemented was the increase in the number of units required to graduate from 75 to 85 units.

Some especially fine new editions to the list of programs already being offered are: Theatre Movement, which already has an enrollment of 17 students; Lower Division Acting, which has 15 students; and finally, Origins Through Medieval, which is a new sequence of theatre history.

Registration Procedure Flawed
by Lisa Beard

Classes have begun, and the frustration of registration have been momentarily forgotten. But ten weeks pass and the students will need to begin making course choices for the winter quarter.

When the winter schedule appears on campus, stomachs will develop knots, and the general attitude of the students will be helplessness.

Letters To The Editor

As a new student on this college campus I am not one who considers himself a non-conformist, but I must take exception to some of the selections and policies here at CSCSB.

In the short time I have spent on this campus, I have observed many things. Among the needed changes are the stereotyping of underclassmen (new students). This is something that is very noticeable. The days that new students needed someone to lead them around, or to help them fit into a different environment are, for the most part, gone. College students should be treated as adults, not children or helpless, wandering, confused, idiots.

Evidently Serrano Village Housing Office does not recognize this. When a new person checks in to housing, the only questions that need to be answered are those where an individual doesn’t know something and asks about it. At the very most the Housing Office could ask if there is anything wrong with the room. There is no reason to go over information that is printed in the housing book. Why else would there be a book to read in the first place?

The question brought up from this view was very important. Would students feel like they are not on their own, individual attention? I think this is a valid question, but to be admitted to CSCSB a student must have completed on the average, at least 12 years of education. The point is simply this: When students are in a classroom and don’t understand a question, they have the opportunity to ask about it. Although some people do need help, there is no reason to waste the time of other individuals. Students who need help should talk to either the Housing Office or with the Students Assisting Students (S.A.S.)

Another thing that needs to be changed involves the recently formed (in its second year) S.A.S. program. It may be a useful program, but a new student doesn’t always need someone to tell them where their classes are or how to find something on campus.

This boils down to pure and simple common sense. A campus map is listed on the back of the 1983 Fall Class Schedule and all incoming students must meet either the grade point average requirement, Scholastic Aptitude Test, or A.C.T. scores. So, catching on to new activities around the campus should be easily handled by intelligent people.

Another obstacle to overcome deals with activities that need to be kept at the college level. The mid-week on Monday, September 23, 1983 is a great example of this. Events held were reminiscent to high school pep rallies and although this may be great for people who feel they must conform to anything that is decided upon, it reminds me of people just following along like a flock of sheep; doing whatever they are told to do.

Some people do enjoy this but for people that have a higher level of individuality and refuse to be ordered around, this is above and beyond the tolerance level.

College activities should not be geared for the people who will accept the status quo. More acceptable would be activities that require college intelligence, so people won’t feel they have to lower themselves in order to participate.

Steve Race

FRANKLY SPEAKING... by phil frank

I APPRECIATE ALL YOUR HELP
GETTING ME SET FOR COLLEGE, MOM, BUT PLEASE TAKE THE FONZIE LUNCHBUCKET BACK WITH YOU.

Proposed Name Change

because their course possibilities are not as limited as those of juniors and seniors. In addition, limiting underclassmen to only lower division courses will make registering easier for those who are about to complete their education.

Students who are bothered by this problem, and those who have been adversely affected, realize that this situation is a true dilemma. There is no convenient solution; one which will make everyone happy. But about considering a change to do nothing is a situation that will eventually confront all students.
