University by Linda Riddell

California State University, San Bernardino. Sounds terrific but what and where is it? It's a gift to be cherished by all Cal State students, and you are already where you need to be to get it! CSCSB students who plan to graduate as early as this winter or spring quarter of 1984 might be surprised to learn that they will be graduating from a university rather than the state college they are now attending.

CSCSB has finally reached their goal of meeting four of the five criteria for becoming a university. According to Edna Steinman of the Public Affairs Office, she states now Cal State has the three accredited programs in chemistry, art and nursing and a certain percentage of the faculty have their terminal degree, or the highest degree available in their field, which Ms. Steinman says is another of the qualifying elements. We also have the correct number of alumni, and the count for student enrollment for the 1983 fall quarter to date is 5,588, which is well over the qualifying 5,081. However, the true census will be obtained Oct. 12 when all the fall quarter drops can be tallied. At that time it can be determined which students have actually dropped from the college itself. This will of course, alter the final count for the total fall enrollment, but Ms. Steinman says not enough drops are anticipated to hamper Cal State's chance for the title of university.

The details are finally smoothed out so all that remains to be done is that Cal State's application be sent to the Chancellor for designation as a university and then to the Board of Trustees sometime in October or November.

Ms. Steinman states that the three accredited programs acquired last year are what brings us 'a giant step closer.' She feels that the direct benefit of this change over to the students will be prestige. When students graduate and begin their intense search for that long-sought-after career, it will be a great advantage to write upon their resumes that they are a graduate of the California State University, San Bernardino.

This change however, will not affect the intimate size of the classes. This will remain the same as will the quality of education one now receives at this college. Future changes might include larger enrollment as traditionally, universities are considered large colleges and in view of this, gradually more departments may be added. For example, a Communications department is being developed as a major for Cal State students with the help of one of our new professors, Dr. Jandt. Perhaps the students attending school during the 1983-84 year will consider themselves very special and perhaps feel somewhat sentimental about being the first to graduate under the new prestigious title of university.

New Guidelines For Fee Increases

A student sponsored bill which establishes a process for setting and adjusting Calif. State Univ. student fees has been signed into law by the Governor.

Assembly Bill 1251, carried by Assemblywoman Gwen Moore, now Chapter 1014 says that if fee increases are necessary in CSU, that they be "gradual, moderate and predictable." Student charges at the CSU will be set between 10 and 20 percent of the State's average funding commitment over a three year period.

"Finally the State of California has produced student fees will be set and adjusted," said Curtis Richards, Legislative Director for the California State Student Association which sponsored the measure. "With the adoption of Ms. Moore's bill, students and their families can once again plan for the financing of a CSU education. AB 1251 should put an end to ad hocish, erratic fee increases like we have had in the last few years."

"This is a major victory for students and for higher education which came about with a stable fee policy," Richards continued. "We were discouraged from moving this bill last Spring for political reasons. But, we needed protection against rising fees. AB 1251 is a reasonable approach to a State/student shared responsibility for funding a college education."

Forseeing an unlimited skyrocket direction for fees, the Cal. State Student Assoc. last year encouraged the Legislature to closely continue on page 3

Fountains Turned On

by Kellie Rayburn

Students who have had reason to visit their gym or the Administration buildings during this new school year may have noticed a change in the atmosphere. The sound which now accompanies the rustling of leaves and lunch bags in these areas is that of the long-silent fountains. In fact, the fountains have been shut down for such a long time that no one can seem to remember exactly when they were shut off. It is known that when a dry-spell and a nation-wide energy crisis occurred, it was thought best to turn the fountains off. The resulting cement holes were considered by many to be eyesores as well as potentially hazardous. In addition, the dry fountains were occasionally vandalized by dirt and rock throwers who broke many of the lights.

Late last year, at the request of the executive committee of the Faculty Senate, President Evans and Jim Urata, Director of Administrative Affairs, conducted a study to find out whether it was possible both financially and mechanically to use the fountains again. The study showed that, although several of the fountains would need extensive work, they could be made to run and be maintained for the cost of about $300 a year. This, according to President Evans, seemed like a nominal cost when compared to the benefits. Once the budgetary cycle was completed, and it was apparent that the money was available, it became a matter for the maintenance department. While the fountain at the south end of the Administration Building was made easily operable, there were considerable problems with the one on the west end. Parts for the motors were hard to find, so many were made here on campus by Hal Peterson of the maintenance department. Parts had to be ordered for the fountain outside the Biology Building and more work needs to be done before it will be running.

President Evans says that he is extremely pleased with the work that has been done as well as the overwhelming favorable reaction that he has received. "The area outside of the Administration offices was one of the least attractive, yet carries some of the heaviest pedestrian traffic on campus. I think that this has really improved it."

well with the college tradition of students helping students. A.S. does not

This is a very small percentage of the college population, which the registrar's office total as 5,625 students this fall. The main reason for this is the lack of awareness by the majority of students of the co-op's existence. Many students came in as the supply of books began dwindling, so were unable to buy the books. Other students could not find the books they needed. Perhaps more students need to become aware that they can sell their textbooks at the co-op at a price they set themselves and still do a service for other students. But those students who used the co-op were grateful to find the books they needed at prices they could afford.

Non registrants denied federal aid
On Oct. 1, 1983, the Solomon Amendment denying Federal aid to non-registrant students will take effect as a result of a Supreme Court ruling. The Solomon Amendment requires students who are eligible for the registration to sign a statement stating that they wish to have their names withheld from Federal financial aid files.

AIDS PROJECT
To provide the latest information about AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) and to reduce unnecessary fears, the AIDS Project/Lo Angeles and the Central Los Angeles Unit of the American Cancer Society have scheduled a free public conference October 15.

"AIDS A Community Focus," will be held from 9-4 p.m. at the Bonaventure Hotel. During the morning session, health experts will give general presentations on AIDS. The afternoon will consist of small workshops on specific AIDS topics, including current research, the chances of getting AIDS, and how professionals can work with persons with AIDS.

"Everyone is invited to attend this conference," says Ed Slough, Executive Director of the AIDS Project. Specifically, the workshops include many individuals associated with the Project. Selected conference topics will be of particular interest to health professionals, service workers, and law enforcement personnel.

For more information, contact the Project (213) 671-1284 or the American Cancer Society (213) 386-6102.

These projects will be carried out during the summer of 1984. The application deadline is November 15, 1983.

Eric Mesmerizes Audience

by Carol Leish

People were impressed with the performance by the "Wizard of Oz" in the Student Union on September 28th. Eric began by saying you "can create a sensation with your own imagination." Eric demonstrated his talent by hypnotising volunteers. According to him, the "subconscious mind takes over in the hypnotic state and views reality." He told one volunteer: "Hold on to the pen then try to let go." That was difficult for the volunteer to do. Then to another volunteer he said in a smooth voice: "relax." After pressing the back of the volunteer's neck, he said: "take a deep breath, hold it and feel the tension." As he said: "sleep", the volunteer fell into his arms. The subject appeared to be in a deep serene state. Eric the hypnotist also displayed some memory exercises. He made a volunteer temporarily forget the number 6 by saying: "Forgetting, forgetting, gone." She could not answer the question: What is three plus three? The subject even believed she had a parakeet on her fingers. In his finale, Eric transferred his feelings to others, a Mesmer act. He could see that people in the audience became relaxed.

The large crowd enjoyed the hypnotist's presentation. Eric's impressive skills made it possible for the volunteers to "create ideas with a robust sensation." He said that when a person becomes hypnotised he becomes more aware of his "free will." There was much applause after the demonstration that allowed the volunteers to "create and control" sensations within their imagination.

Fee examine the impact of student charges on access to postsecondary education. Through Assembly Concurrent Resolution 81 (Hart), the Legislature directed the Calif. Postsecondary Education Commission to do such a study and make some policy recommendations regarding fees. CPEC recommended that "the State should establish explicit policies for setting and adjusting student charges. Such policies should assume a continuing combination of State and student financing of public postsecondary education and should establish the basis on which adjustments in student charges will be made." CPEC further recommended that fees in the Univ. of Calif. and the Calif. State Univ. should be set and adjusted according to a regular process. "The index recommended would have

A.S. President's Right Hand Man: Chuck Marquez

"If anyone has any comments or praise for A.S., please contact me, but if you have any problems or complaints, then please contact my right hand man personally," states A.S. President, Rod Hendry. "My right hand man" refers to his executive assistant, Chuck "Chaz" Marquez.

Marquez, as Executive Assistant, is partially responsible for screening Hendry's appointments along with other duties, including advising Hendry, co-ordinating the administrative aspects of Associated Students, supervising the A.S. chairs and co-ordinating special projects.

One of Marquez's special projects is the Resident Fee Ticket Drawing. Pizza coupon tickets are purchased by students and are entered in a drawing for the amount of next quarter's residence fees. This A.S. fundraiser has just broken even according to Marquez.

As a management science major, Marquez has also been instrumental in trouble shooting structural and motivational problems in A.S. He hopes not only to complete this a successful year, but also help future administrations be successful by trouble shooting.

A Moreno resident, Marquez works up to ten hours a day for A.S. along with working part-time as a security guard in Sunnymead. He will graduate in December, but is considering staying on as the Executive Assistant and taking assorted classes.

One of Marquez's pet projects is voter registration and participation in government. "A.S. provides a number of services, but I feel that our primary concern is with student representation in government."

Books For Casual Reading
by Rita Clark

The CSCSB Bookstore, under direction of Carol Dunlap, manager, is making some very exciting changes this year. These changes include greater selection in most departments, lower prices on many items and a remodelled clothing area.

One of the major new developments is Carol's decision to carry a large supply of books for the casual reader. To assist in the selection of books, the Cal State Marketing Association is currently working on a marketing survey for Carol, to be distributed during the first weeks of school. The survey has been designed by members of the CSMA to pinpoint reading preferences, as well as demographic information and purchasing habits of students. The survey will be conducted and collated by CSMA members, and results will be considered when ordering casual reading materials. The plan should be fully implemented by winter quarter.

Although the completed plan will not be available for several weeks, Carol is anxious to point out that the bookstore has a variety of books for casual reading in the store now, with new titles coming in all the time. In addition to these, desired books can also be special ordered by the bookstore with delivery in one and one-half to two weeks. Students wishing this service should contact Routh Moore, the textbook clerk.

Another major change is a remodelled clothing area. All the latest styles of campus casual wear are being carried. If students see apparel in other stores that they would like to see carried in the bookstore, they can talk to the clothing buyer, Phil Tamayo.

Also this quarter, the bookstore has lowered prices on nine major popular items. This includes supplies such as filler paper, index dividers, continued on page 10

Does Campus Food Turn Your Stomach?

by Susan Briggs and Donna Watkins

Looking for a place to eat on campus? There are a variety of options available. These include: The Student Union snack bar, the commons, and the vending machines. Overall the most popular choice seems to be the snack bar, the main reason being the social atmosphere.

Students like to socialize in the snack bar. Eating there is a good place to meet old friends or to make new ones. Also, the Student Union has more convenient hours. It serves food from 10:30 a.m. to about 10:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday. On Thursdays, the area stays open until 1 a.m., depending on the number of students still in the S.U. On the other hand, the commons is basically open for meals. Breakfast is served from 7:15-8:30, lunch is served from 11:30 with dinner served from 5-6:30.

Although the selection at the commons is better than other places, the prices are generally considered too high. Though people tend to prefer the snack bar, one advantage of the commons is that they serve hot food. Even so it seems that most of the people who eat in the commons are campus residents. It does not appear that the commuters who comprise about 95% of the campus population, are aware of what the commons has to offer.

Another option is the vending machines which are located in the Student Services Building and the Library annex. These machines offer snacks, deli items, and beverages. Being close to classes is the main advantage of these machines; people like to buy snacks right before or after classes. Many of the people questioned in a questionnaire distributed about campus, bring food from home and buy drinks and desserts on campus.

Quality Survey

by Susan Briggs and Donna Watkins

An informal campus survey reflected students' feelings toward the commons food service. Questions were asked regarding the quality of food, the quality of service, and whether dorm students should be allowed to use their meal tags in the pub.

Of those questioned, 73% said that they felt students should be allowed to use their meal tags in The Pub.

Quality and service were rated on a scale that included poor, fair, good and excellent. Of these choices, all of the students rated the overall food quality as either fair or poor, with 76% rating the quality as fair. The service was considered slightly more acceptable, with 56% rating the service as good; the other remaining 44% thought the service was either fair or poor.

It is worth noting that none of the students questioned rated the quality or service at the commons to be excellent.

Does Boy George Turn Your Stomach?

By Jeffrey Bauer

Does Boy George turn your stomach? Do you wish that a Puck of Seagulls would nose-dive into the ocean? Does your radio sound like an Aerobic class? Are you a true rock and roll fan who is tired of the excesses of the heavy-metal contingency? There is still some hope—here are a couple of suggestions; one new album and two from earlier this year.

Big Country's "The Crossing" is an early favorite among critics for one of the best albums of 1983. This British quartet features a massive wall-to-wall guitar sound, minus the synthesizers and the schmaltzy lyrics. Unlike the heavy-metal bands, Big Country makes use of two lead guitars in place of the usual power chord approach.

The album was produced by Steve Lillywhite of U-2 fame, and it's almost a sure bet that if you enjoy U-2's highly emotional, energetic music, you'll find a place in your collection for "The Crossing."

Big Country signs of storms and fires and perseverance. In "1000 Stars" the pending doom of nuclear war is addressed: "We lay the night in anguish/ Snakes drawn out by the tide/ The compass of decision/ Falls always on one side..." and in "Porrophman," we are reminded of extreme environmental suppression which leads to fear and hopelessness. "Laughter lies on faces/ Where the sun has never shone/ The fear of life is strong."

Some of the lyrics are excessively personal and vague, but this weakness doesn't alter the album's intensely evocative nature—a strong debut indeed.

Veteran Greg Landanyi mixed all but two of the songs, and Jeff Eyrich is responsible for the incredibly slick sounding production. Most of the album follows the theme of uncertain relationships. "Inch by Inch." "This night's a dream... Still we don't know what tomorrow will bring What will happen if we break/ Every promise that we make..." is representative of the general tone.

We are left with an uplifting feeling in the two closing numbers: "Even the doors are falling off the hinges/ They're still swinging..." and in the title track, "So we took a chance while the music was calling..."

These are three unique and intriguing recordings—a refreshing break from the synth-pop that is monopolizing the airwaves today.

Were health services severely affected by the recent budget cuts? We have not received our budget allotment yet, but we are of the opinion that it will not be cut severely.

I have some questions about different health problems, but I really don't want to bother a doctor. Is there anywhere I can get general information?

Yes. Trustworthy advice is as close as your phone, and it's free. Tel-Med is a non-profit organization that provides a library of over 400 health care and safety tips on cassette tapes. These bilingual—both English and Spanish—tapes are generally only two to three minutes long and will give you information on subjects such as alcohol abuse, respiratory problems, child abuse, and venereal disease. The Tel-Med number for the San Bernardino/Colton area is 825-7000. They are in operation Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 10-6 p.m. Brochures listing all the tapes in the library are available in the Student Health Center. Remember, Tel-Med is a free, private way to find out more about your health. No one will ask your name.

Will the Health Center Pharmacy fill prescriptions from my private physician?

Yes, with some restrictions. It must be a written prescription, and we will only fill it if we stock that particular medication. We cannot fill prescriptions for over-the-counter remedies available at no cost to the student. Just drop by the Health Center, describe your problem, and pick up aspirin or whatever is suitable for your needs.

Can I find out in advance if the Pharmacy has the medication my physician has ordered?

Yes, by simply calling 887-7641, we can tell you if we have it in stock. If you know you need medication because you are scheduled for oral surgery, tonsillectomy, or any elective surgery, or if you need to know what birth control pills we stock, we will be happy to assist you with the appropriate list.

How can the Health Center assist me if I have a simple cold, scratchy throat, headache or indigestion, and I don't really need to see the physicians?

We have many over-the-counter remedies available at no cost to the student. Just drop by the Health Center, describe your problem, and pick up aspirin or whatever is suitable for your needs.

Transfer Student Blues

"Please," I waited a minute on the line and told myself to relax. It was no big deal. This happens to a lot of new students, especially on the first day of classes. When she came back, I asked my patient mother to read all the numbers and letters across the top of the card and it was just as I thought. It said "ENG5134.4, TTH" That was a "T" on the card Mom had back in Ontario. The cards I ha in my hand said "MW." That mean Monday and Wednesday that the class was to meet. Needless to say, I had neglected to realize that this certain day happened to be a Thursday.

"Are you alright?" mom asked.

"You didn't happen to run across my head while you were in my room, did you? I misplaced it. It's probably still somewhere in Wednesday." Thank goodness for patient mothers! At least now I understood why only one other woman showed up to my 4 p.m. class instead of the expected two hundred plus.

We supposed the class had been cancelled. I demanded to know why everyone, but the two of us, was notified concerning the cancellation. Boy, did I feel small. I didn't feel like playing "freshman" again but that's the one, small curse of being a transfer student.

I ended up in the wrong class at 6 p.m., too. I would have like nothing less than to disappear into thin air when one of the faculty called to my attention the "M's" and "W's" on my class tickets. "See this! This stands for Monday-Wednesday, dear. Today is Thursday." Did you ever try laughing when all your sense of humor just crawled under the table? It's not easy. It's getting better, though, as the days go by. They say that practice makes perfect, right? At least I wasn't alone. When Monday finally came and everybody showed up for my big lecture class, I turned around in my seat and recognized the woman from the previous Thursday. We both laughed for a second and I had to ask, "When did you find out it was Thursday?" I asked above the loud voices. She lifted her hand and spread out her fingers to signify 5 o'clock. That wasn't much of a consolation. I didn't find out until 6:30.

EVEN STRAIGHT A'S CAN'T HELP IF YOU FLUNK TUITION.

Today, the toughest thing about going to college is finding the money to pay for it. But Army ROTC can help—two ways!

First, you can apply for an Army ROTC scholarship. It covers tuition, books, and supplies, and pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect.

But even if you're not a scholarship recipient, ROTC can still help with financial assistance—up to $1,000 a year for your last two years in the program.

 Transfer Student Blues

"Please," I waited a minute on the line and told myself to relax. It was no big deal. This happens to a lot of new students, especially on the first day of classes. When she came back, I asked my patient mother to read all the numbers and letters across the top of the card and it was just as I thought. It said "ENG5134.4, TTH" That was a "T" on the card Mom had back in Ontario. The cards I ha in my hand said "MW." That mean Monday and Wednesday that the class was to meet. Needless to say, I had neglected to realize that this certain day happened to be a Thursday.

"Are you alright?" mom asked.

"You didn't happen to run across my head while you were in my room, did you? I misplaced it. It's probably still somewhere in Wednesday." Thank goodness for patient mothers! At least now I understood why only one other woman showed up to my 4 p.m. class instead of the expected two hundred plus.

We supposed the class had been cancelled. I demanded to know why everyone, but the two of us, was notified concerning the cancellation. Boy, did I feel small. I didn't feel like playing "freshman" again but that's the one, small curse of being a transfer student.

“Killer Dips” Opens

by Carol Leish

“Killer Dips” opened on September 30 at the Creative Arts building. This show displays the modern work by artists Bob Hope Zaell and Gary Painter.

Bob Hope Zaell has been a commercial artist for quite a while. He said that he did work for his father, who is a printer. His past shows include “Stupid Art,” “Stupid Zole,” “Stupid China Club” and “Cume for Me.” His goal is to always produce good paintings, and he enjoys his “provocative” style of art. According to Bob, “somebody has to hope in order to succeed.”

Gary Painter has been a serious painter since high school. He enjoys many styles, but prefers figuritive imagery over abstraction. He finds much delight in doing “dark edge” landscapes in order to portray an “eeriness.” He is into doing a lot of primal creation imagery, and has done album covers for Frank Zappa, Dave Mason and Chakakhon. Gary commented: “I insist on doing weird work.” He is presently doing his own album for Japan. However most of his exposure is from his comic drawings.

Dan Woodford, an art teacher, commented that the art work is “very fresh.” He said that the artists are good friends and that they influence one another. Mr. Woodford was impressed with the “assaulting and aggressive” style of painting. According to student opinion, the display was thoroughly enjoyable. Becky Anderson, an art major, was “impressed with the carefree imagery” conveyed in the art work. Karen Wood, also an art major, commented that the work was “very brilliant” and with Bob Hope Zaell portrayed a “satirical message to do whatever you want”, according to the opinion of Phillip Linger. He also said that Gary Painter portrayed his expressionistic values and thoughts.

The “Killer Dips” display will be in the art gallery until Oct. 26. By viewing the various paintings and the intricate sketches, one can imagine for themselves the messages that the artists want to convey. This exhibit portrays a unique quality, and is consistent with the artist’s own particular style.

New Requirements for T.A. Majors

by Meech Campbell

During this past summer the theatre department has undergone a number of changes in its programming and scheduling. Previously the department’s programs only catered to those completely devoted, die-hard theatre majors who have already been in theatre and performing arts long before coming to Cal State. “Therefore, these revisions,” according to Dr. Ron Barns, department chairman, “are aimed to expose other students to the theatre program.” He hopes to make these students some or the die-hard. The department’s students and directors hope these new changes, combined with established programs, will nicely complement the department.

Theatre arts, first of all, has broadened its field of major study into three specific areas including, Acting, Technical design, and Dramatic Literature. They have also broken down the number of units, in some courses, to two or three units instead of the usual five. The final major change implemented was the increase in the number of units required to graduate from 75 to 85 units.

Some especially fine new editions to the list of programs already being offered are: Theatre Movement, which already has an enrollment of 17 students; Lower Division Acting, which has 15 students; and finally, Origins Through Medieval, which is a new sequence of theatre history.

Letters To The Editor

A reasonable solution to this pain-in-the-neck problem might be to consult your R.A., but he or she might remind you that you are an adult now and are the other 40 people in the house and perhaps you should try to settle it with them. O.K., that sounds fair enough, unless of course he is six foot two and you are five foot two. Now that does not seem very fair. But heck, you will give it a try anyway, huh? Of course, with any luck we may not have to confront the partiers. They might, just might, decide to take the hint from this article and take it from there instead.

Yes, I know, fat chance.

Proposed Name Change

Registration Procedure Flawed

by Lisa Beard

Classes have begun, and the frustration of registrating have been momentarily forgotten. But ten weeks pass quickly, and soon students will need to begin making course choices for the winter quarter.

When the winter schedule appears on campus, stomachs will develop knots, and the general attitude of the students will be helplessness.

This is especially true of juniors and seniors. They know that regardless of the available courses, their chances of getting the ones they need are slim if they do not have an early registration time. This feeling of foreboding is likely to become despair on the registration floor, when they discover the needed classes are full.

The master card in the registration packet gives the "priority" time slot. How can 3:30 p.m. on the second day be priority? It does not take long to realize that students with second-day registration find the majority of their choices full. They attempt to make the best of the situation by taking extra classes, petitioning for a class, or roaming from one department to another seeing if they might have missed something that is still available, and will fit into their schedule.

For juniors and seniors students are in a classroom and don't understand a question, they have the opportunity to ask about it. Although some people do need help, there is no reason to waste the time of other individuals. Students who need help should talk to the Housing Office or with the Students Assisting Students (S.A.S.)

Another thing that needs to be changed involves the recently formed (in its second year) S.A.S. program. It may be a useful program, but a new student doesn't always need someone to tell them where their classes are or how to find something on campus. This boils down to pure and simple common sense. A campus map is listed on the back of the 1983 Fall Class Schedule and all incoming students must meet either the grade point average requirement, Scholastic Aptitude Test, or A.C.T. scores. So, catching on to new activities around the campus should be easily handled by intelligent people.

Another obstacle to overcome deals with activities that need to be kept at the college level. The mid-week on Friday, September 23, 1983 is a great example of this. Events held were reminiscent to high school pep rallies and although this may be great for people who feel they must conform to anything that is decided upon, it reminds me of people just following along like a flock of sheep; doing whatever they are told to do. Some people do enjoy this but for people that have a higher level of individuality and refuse to be ordered around, this is above and beyond the tolerance level.

College activities should not be geared for the people who will accept anything. More acceptable would be activities that require college intelligence, so people won't feel they have to lower themselves in order to participate.
