CENTER FOR NEW DIRECTIONS OPENS

The housewife whose kids are in school all day, the breadwinner who feels trapped in a dead-end job, and others who interrupted their education for family, military service, work or other reasons are being offered a new choice. The College's Center for New Directions, recently established, will provide a special free counseling service to those who don't "think college" because of previous academic deficiencies or interruption in academic attendance.

The new center might just also be the cup of tea for those who are looking for a second career or advanced degree or mature persons who are wondering what to do with the rest of their lives.

Lorraine Beaman, coordinator of the program, states that the free counseling service provides an initial counseling interview, general information about types of programs, classes and scheduling of classes, referrals for academic vocational and personal-growth counseling; information on low cost child care, career information and many other student services.

Six ways to attend CSCSB are open to the returning students: through regular day or evening classes, extension classes, external degree programs, summer sessions, the Open College extension program (formal admission not required) or self-paced study outside the classroom. Ms. Beaman adds that a special admissions category may enable non-high school graduates to enroll. Probationary admission also may be possible in some instances.

Lois McAfee, Public Affairs Assistant, is also coordinating the program.

A one-man presentation by

LEO G. DOYLE

Exotic woods in new furniture forms will be on view in Leo Doyle's one-man show, Woodturnings, opening next Friday, November 12.

WOODTURNINGS

The College and public are invited to meet the artist in a reception at 8 p.m. opening day in the Art Gallery and see his display of new and experimental ways of turning on a wood lathe.

Mr. Doyle, Assoc. Prof., Art, stresses utility as well as artistry in his wood objects. The objects feature a wide range of sizes and uses, often with surprising characteristics. The artist is currently developing a lathe for woodturning which will allow him to turn even larger pieces.

Mr. Doyle earned a MFA from the School for American Craftsmen in New York. His work is in many private collections and several pieces were displayed in last spring's California Design Show in Los Angeles.

PSYCHOLOGY COLLOQUIUM
SERIES BEGINS NOV. 10

The Psychology Department will bring a Colloquium Series here this year. The first of four speakers scheduled for the season is Bonnie Burstein, UCLA clinical psychology graduate doing intern work at Cedar Sinai Hospital. Her topic is "Predicators of Sexual Behaviors and Satisfaction in College Women." The speech will be given in LC-500, 4-5 p.m., November 10, followed by an informal discussion with all interested persons at dinner at a local restaurant.

WHAT GOES ON IN THAT COURSE?

The second monthly noon luncheon discussion of an interesting course taught on campus will feature "Popular Culture: The Rock Generation," taught by Bruce Golden, Assoc. Prof., English.

Some questions which might be asked and answered are: What are the students learning in this course? What is the significance of this era for today? All faculty are invited to come, bring their questions, join the group for lunch, noon to 1, Tuesday, Nov. 9 in CO-219. The meeting is sponsored by the Faculty Development Center.
