Martin Luther King to be Honored

by Miguel Gonzales
Chronicle Staff Writer

Martin Luther King Day will be celebrated at Cal State with an event to be held on campus at the Coussoulis Arena. King will be portrayed by actor Felix Justice, and actor Danny Glover will portray Langston Hughes, one of America's most respected writers and a literary leader in the Harlem Renaissance.

Justice's one-man show on Martin Luther King Jr premiered at the Hansberry Theater in San Francisco and has been seen all over the U.S. and Africa. In portraying King, Justice's performance spotlights the political and social leader's strengths as writer and orator.

Glover's performance in "Master Harold and the Boys" was the New York production that first brought him national attention. He later played Moze in the academy award-winning film, "Places In The Heart," and also starred in films like "The Color Purple," "Angels In The Outfield" and the "Lethal Weapon" series.

"An Evening With Langston and Martin" promises to be a unique look into the history of Martin Luther King. For more information call 880-7360

Grant Gives Campus Latest Technology 911, Campus Wide Emergency Telephone System Debuts.

by Mary Ellen Abblez
Executive Editor

A $200,000 grant submitted by Chief Dennis Kraus several years ago has finally flipped the switch on a state-of-the-art, 911 system scheduled to go online in January.

"Before, you would have to dial 5911, and Campus Police could tell what number you were calling from but not your location," stated Kraus, Director of Public Safety. "It's very exciting," he added.

The new, computer-aided dispatch will produce a location immediately anywhere on campus after receiving a 911 call. Conceivably, a person having a heart attack could manage to call, collapse, and be saved because of the new system.

The Card is in the Mail

by Carmina Ramirez
Chronicle Staff Writer

Winter quarter students opened their mail to discover that the Coyote One Card is arriving in March to Cal State San Bernardino. It is a much heralded, system wide program designed to provide greater access and customer service to student.

The new card is a multipurpose identification card that will replace the previous quarterly identification card and will allow access to campus computer labs, library check-outs, and gymnasium facilities. In addition, the One Card can also be used to make purchases at the Coyote bookstore, and food services.

Additional options include a 30% discount on qualifying domestic and international calls from AT&T, and other options and services will be announced as they come on board. Currently, negotiations are underway to add banking services, and an on-campus branch on campus in the Student Union.

Because the Coyote One Card will serve as the official campus identification for faculty, students, and staff, photos will be required to be on the card. Photos for the Coyote One Card will be taken from March 2-6 in Media Services.

Will the Benefits Outweigh the Costs?

By Petra Mueller &
Mary Ellen Abilez

The California and Technology Initiative, also known as CETI, promises to bring the latest technology to all CSU campuses, but will the benefits outweigh the costs? The agreement with Microsoft and three other major corporations is due to be signed this month.

Matthew Kennedy
Graduate Student,
National Security Studies

I'm against it. There should have been an exploratory committee with the Associated Students and allowed students to vote on it.

Dillon Wayne
Alumnus of CS San Louis
Obispo

It's good for any school in the system to have the latest technology. It will be useful to be able to process information faster.

Dwayne King
Junior,
Political Science

The latest technology is the cookie, but where's the milk? Where are the details? More people should have been informed before this.

Rosa Lopez
Graduate Student,
English Composition

It wouldn't be fair to students who don't use computers at school. Students won't support a fee increase of any kind, it's hard enough already.

THIS YEAR A LOT OF COLLEGE SENIORS WILL BE GRADUATING INTO DEBT.

Under the Army's Loan Repayment program, you could get out from under with a three-year enlistment.

Each year you serve on active duty reduces your indebtedness by one-third or $1,500, whichever amount is greater, up to a $65,000 limit. The offer applies to Perkins Loans, Stafford Loans, and certain other federally insured loans, which are not in default. And debt relief is just one of the many benefits you'll earn from the Army. Ask your Army Recruiter.

Dire Wolf Surfaces at Cal State

Bonnie Petry
Special To The Chronicle

A very special exhibit arrived this past quarter at Cal State. Under the supervision of Dr. Stuart Sumida, and in association with Dr. Elizabeth Rega and her students from the Joint Science Department of the Claremont College, CSUSB students have prepared and mounted the skeleton of a dire wolf, an extinct species of wolf, from the La Brea tar pits in Los Angeles.

The dire wolf, Canis dirus, was a common inhabitant of the Pleistocene Epoch (approximately 1,600,000-10,000 years ago). About the size of the modern gray wolf, the dire wolf had a much heavier build. These carnivores were probably hunters as well as scavengers. Specimens recovered from the La Brea tar pits were deposited approximately 15,000 to 40,000 years ago.

In Pleistocene La Brea, thirsty herbivores stopping for a drink at what appeared to be an ordinary pond actually stepped into a spring of crude oil and became hopelessly trapped in sticky tar. These helpless animals were a powerful and deadly lure for carnivores seeking an easy meal. Numerous scavengers also became trapped in the tar and perished alongside their intended meals. This sad scenario and its variations played itself out over and over again, resulting in the rich fossil beds at La Brea.

The dire wolf specimen is currently awaiting a permanent location on campus. Other examples of Dr. Sumida's discoveries from the early Permian era of eastern Germany are on display on the first and third floor of the Pfau Library. These fossils are between 280 and 300 million years old, and provide evidence that the European and North American continents were once united, forming a much larger continent known as Pangea. The Permian fossils, and other finds discovered by Dr. Sumida and his colleagues, were featured in the November 1997 issue of National Geographic.

Library hours are as follows: Monday-Thursday, 8am-11pm, Friday, 8am-5pm, Saturday, 9am-5pm, and Sunday, from 2pm-11pm.

Coyote Chronicle Holds Comic Strip Contest Open to all Majors

The Coyote Chronicle is offering a few minutes of fame and glory, and a plethora of prizes, to the lucky winners of our first annual Strip Contest. The rules are simple: contestants must be registered CSUSB students, must enter 5 strips, and must be funny and thought-provoking without violating good taste.

Winning strips will appear in future issues of the Chronicle, and a first and second runner-up winner will also be featured.

Strips must be received by the end of the Winter Quarter. Materials can be delivered to the Chronicle Office, UH 037, or the Chronicle Mailbox in the Communications Department. Be sure to include a phone number.

The prizes to be awarded to the lucky winner(s) will be announced in an upcoming issue.

From the Summit University Ambassador's Society

by Mary Ellen Abilez & John Acevedo

University Ambassador Society Coordinator Steve Whelan envisions a greater role for UAS on campus this year, bringing together student organizations through interclub communication, fellowship, and fundraising events.

Space permitting, the Coyote Chronicle will feature student organizational news, people, and events, as submitted by UAS. Chartered campus organizations are invited to submit short information bytes via email or hard copy to John Acevedo, tob515d@aol.com

Pedro Garberoglio, ASI Controller, is holding Club Allocation Budget meetings this week, if your group is chartered and needs funding, contact him in the ASI office and find out how to do it.

The Greeks will hold their second annual Greek Unity Benefit on January 20 at the Events Center. The proceeds will go towards scholarships.

Patricia Rodgers, Education, needs student leaders for New Student Orientation, apply now.

Chad Jackson reports that Apha Kappa Psi, the co-ed professional business fraternity, is holding their Winter Rush January 12 through 18th, call 880-5439.

Upcoming events for UAS include a reception for Gene Bigler, Press Attache and Spokesman for the U.S. Embassy, Rome, Italy.

Ambassadors will also be assisting at the reception for Danny Glover, Martin Luther King Day event to be held at the Coussoulis.

That's all for now. Submit early for publication of next issue.

Singing and Praying VS Ciubbing and Drinking How Germans should - and do - celebrate Christmas

by Petra Mueller
Managing Editor

Germans celebrate Christmas as a family event, and exchange gifts on the evening of the 24th of December. The ideal German family is supposed to start that day with an enjoyable breakfast. Many German families, however, start their Christmas in a hurry - the last Christmas gifts and food for the next two days are still to be bought. No store opens Dec. 25 and 26, and shops close as soon as 1 p.m. on Dec. 24. So people spend the morning hours waiting in line, listening unvoluntarily to the low-quality Christmas song cassette which plays in every shop again and again and again...

After breakfast, the ideal German children should open the last door of their Adventskalender, which consists of a candy box with one candy for each day of December until the 24th, or of 24 small parcels parents put in a box or on a poster. Most German children empty their calendars as soon as December 10, and then steal their siblings' goodies.

Later on, the family members decorate the living room, the Christmas tree, which Daddy bought the day before, and put the manger together. In many families, decorating is up to Mum, while the rest of the family prefers watching Christmas TV, which is packed with cartoons and classic movies. In addition, most families do not possess a manger. Some even abolished the Christmas tree, and many prefer plastic versions as those do not lose their needles. As for the smell, we have wonderful perfumes that smell like real trees.

The ideal German family spends the time before mass singing, playing family games, sometimes going out and taking a walk through the wonderful snow-white winter wonderland.

The average German family rather stays in and watches TV, as parents hate their children's comments on their singing. Mentioning snow, only few parts of Germany have a white Christmas regularly. For some reason, warm air from the south moves to Germany almost every year mid-December, so Christmas is usually a mild and often a rainy, grey day - not suitable for walks. Even the walk or ride to the next church is too much for many Germans. Churches in Germany lose more and more members. Though Christmas makes a comparatively high number of Christians go to mass, many families stay at home even then.

In the evening, Germans take their time for a good dinner, which traditionally does not cost too much time - the big goat or duck is due December 25, and then relatives are invited to help eating it. Many Germans like sausages and potato salad, or fondue for December 24. Dinner atmosphere, however, is often disturbed by the children's unwillingness to wait for their gifts, which everybody places under the tree during the day and which lie there as a big temptation. Only the very small children believe in Santa Claus, the older ones know about Mum and Dad's involvement. Anyway, dinner time is the ideal moment for the first big Christmas Eve family fight.

After dinner, each member of the ideal German family opens parcel after parcel, and takes his or her time to say thank you for

Behind the Badge

Compiled by Petra Mueller
Managing Editor

December 11:

The San Bernardino Police Department informed the Campus Police Station that a car which had been stolen from here had been found. The lucky owner could pick up her car with all property the same day.

December 12:

A student reported that somebody had broken the rear window of his car and stolen several things. A CD changer, cassette recorder, and leather bag had disappeared out of the car, which the student had parked in parking-lot D.

December 14:

Around four a.m. in the morning, the police learned that three white males were pulling at a handle of the Physical Science Building, which was closed. When checking the area, one officer discovered the suspects lying face down in the dirt planter at the Creative Art Building, hiding behind some shrubbery. They turned out to be students playing war games, and they had been discovered before. After telling the boys not to hide from an officer, the policemen released them.

December 15:

A Cal State officer stopped a man speeding at 80 MPH on southbound Interstate 215. The driver refused to show driver's licence or ID to "a University cop". The sergeant then called the California Highway Patrol, and the driver finally had to hand out his licence and got out of the car. The policemen placed the driver into custody and transported him to the CSUSB police station, issued him a citation because of violating the maximum speed law, and willfully delaying an officer in discharging of his duties, and then released him.

December 19:

A man lost control over his car because he felt threatened by passengers of another car, which seemed to follow him. The suspects pulled up in a black car alongside to his vehicle on Northpark Blvd., and pointed something at him that looked like a gun. Those men then followed his car into the canyon, so he, panicking, increased speed. When he made a right turn into Ben Canyon Road, he lost control and flipped over. Fortunately, nobody got hurt.

December 21:

Somebody reported a destroyed vending machine in the Biology Building. The machine's glass was broken, and an unknown amount of candy, chips and gums as well as money had disappeared.

A burning plastic trash can in a men's restroom on the Wedge's third floor caused excitement at the end of December. A Fire Department captain believes that somebody put an unidentified chemical substance in the trash can, which caused tremendous heat but no remarkable flame. Due to a professor who discovered the burning can soon, the fire only destroyed the plastic can itself and part of the towel dispenser above it.

Also during the break, somebody pulled three letters out of the "BOOKSTORE" sign on the Coyote Bookstore's south side off of the wall, and scribbled on other letters. On the K, somebody had written 'mart'.

During a class in Humanities #116 on January 10 from noon to 1:10 p.m., a student's wallet was misappropriated. She sat in class, and her backpack containing the wallet sat next to her on the floor. After class, she went to her car and drove home, where she discovered the loss. She reported she had checked the backpack's content right before that class.

Does Sex Cause the Flu?

Some thoughts about the Health Center questionnaire.

by Petra Mueller
Managing Editor

Two weeks ago, a German friend of mine felt all symptoms of a cold. To find out what was wrong, and to get some prescriptions, he went to the health center. Before the doctor checked his body, however, my friend had to fill in a questionnaire he found most strange. Questions about whether he had sex within the last six months, if he had done so with one to six, or more than six partners, sort of shocked him. He wondered what the state of his sinuses and throat had to do with his sexual activity. In Germany, doctors only ask such questions when somebody gets checked for sexually transmitted diseases. So this incident left him - and me - wondering about the use of questions like this. Does he look like a restless womanizer? Well, he might enjoy this thought, but I would rather describe him as a decent-looking, bespectacled twenty-something in jeans and shirts. Can details in one's sex life explain symptoms such as his? As far as I know, there is no sexually transmitted disease which starts like a cold. But maybe there is some new disease, and it threatens us CSUSB students, and the health center tries to find out more about it! Or there are some statistics on the way to prove that those who have more sex are more healthy, or the other way round! In both cases, the health center could find some interesting additional twists—how about asking us about contraceptives we use, our favorite positions, or how we pick our partners? I will try to find out what is going on, and keep you Chronicle-readers informed. By the way, my friend's disease turned out to be a flu. So he did what the health center's doctor said, and was back to normal soon after.

Letters to the Editor

Roger Lintault is the Professor and Chair of the Art Department

I believe some clarification is needed in reference to your story about the costs of the proposed coyote sculpture.

Bill Shum approached me in October about the possibility of our students casting the sculpture by Xuanchang Guo. His wish was to save money, and to perhaps give our students valuable experience. I responded that the advanced sculpture students were too few in number and had insufficient experience to execute the work. Additionally, the amount of time the project demanded would have distorted the overall educational objectives of the sculpture program.

However, I definitely did not say there was insufficient expertise among the art faculty to create a fitting sculpture. In fact, anticipating some of the controversy this proposal has encountered, I suggested to Mr. Shum options he could have employed to open up the artist selection process.

Editor's Note: The exact quote from Mr. Shum published in the last issue of the Chronicle reads "the Art Department Chair, Roger Lintault, has concluded that existing facilities and expertise on campus would not be able to fabricate such a work of art." It did not specify whether it was student or faculty expertise that was lacking. We thank you for your clarification.

Poster Defacement

In reference to the defacement and false representation of student organization posters, prosecution under the Student Discipline Code may result in disciplinary probation, suspension or expulsion from the University.

Rideshare

By Laura Hall
Design Editor

The parking situation on campus is still problematic for many students, especially those who arrive close to the beginning of classes. The amount of time it takes to find a parking space and get to class is ridiculous, unless you arrive early in the morning. To help relieve some of the parking hassle Commuter Services is promoting alternative modes of transportation to and from school.

Carpooling is a significant way to cut driving costs while helping the campus parking situation. Students can obtain a quarterly carpool decal by completing an application from UH130. Special parking spaces are available for students who arrive on campus with two or more in the vehicle. Please carpool, or utilize any other alternative mode of transportation to help the parking congestion on campus, and fill out the ballot to enter to win a prize.

Free Tuition Drawing 🐾 Career Center Online 🐾

What could be more valuable to a student than having his or her tuition paid for a full year without opening a book or sharpening a pencil?

The San Bernardino Sun Telegram, along with the Cal State San Bernardino Athletic Department is offering a unique opportunity with the "Win your education for a year" contest. "We are working together with the Sun to bring more students out to the 12 remaining home men's and women's Coyote basketball games," commented assistant athletic director Kurt Apsey. Apsey is overseeing fundraising operations for Coyote athletics as well.

Each CSUSB student who attends a game will be given a ticket at the door to be put into the "Sun Bucket". The contest started when the Coyotes hosted Caldwell College on Jan. 12. There will be a ticket chosen and a prize awarded at halftime during each of the final home games. The more games attended the better the chance of winning the grand prize on the final night of the men's regular season against Grand Canyon University on Feb. 28.

At halftime of the final game there will be five finalists chosen out of the "Sun Bucket". All five will receive a notable prize. Then after the final random drawing one lucky student will walk away with $2,000 for class fees, book fees, parking fees, lab fees, and any other fees Cal State can shoot at them.

Dyslexia Fair to Provide Awareness and Information 🐾

The Inland Empire Chapter International Dyslexia Association will provide several booths filled with literature, demonstrations, and other learning materials for adults and students who experience reading, spelling, or language difficulties, on Thursday, January 29, at the Dyslexia Awareness Fair in Riverside. Some of the information will include career planning, college preparation, and dyslexia advocacy.

The fair will feature the video, "Gifts of Greatness," featuring information about famous, successful dyslexics such as Thomas Jefferson.

The fair will be located at the Riverside County Education Center, Conference Center, at 12th and Almond Streets in Riverside. The fair begins at 6:45 p.m. and is open to the public at no charge. No reservations are required. Refreshments will be available.

For more information, call (909) 686-9837.

Human History In Sierra Nevada 🐾

A free talk on human history in the Sierra Nevada will be given on Friday, January 16, at Cal State San Bernardino, beginning at 7 p.m. Stephen Cunha, a National Park Service Ranger and associate professor of geology at Humboldt State University, will retrace the paths of Indians, explorers, immigrants, industrialists and conservationists.

Cunha will tell the stories behind the grinding of acorns by Miwok, the impact of hydraulic mining and logging, Walker's early crossing of the Sierra and the start of the movement to preserve the land. Cunha will illustrate his talk with slides from archives, and also look at the old and new ties between the highlands and lowlands of California.

Cunha will also give a free talk on the politics of the High Pamirs in Tajikistan earlier in the day at 1:30 p.m. The Pamirs are a close relative of the Himalayas, and border the embattled territories in China, Pakistan, Afghanistan and the former Soviet Union. They are the scene of what has been called the "Great Game"—a struggle for control over land that pastoralists, mountain farmers, soldiers and smugglers call home.

For more information on the talks, call Jenny Zorn at (909)880-5520.

J. Paul Getty Center Internships 🐾

The recently opened J. Paul Getty Center is offering Southern California art and humanities students the opportunity of a lifetime. The Getty Center is offering summer internships for a culturally diverse group of undergraduate students interested in exploring careers in the visual arts and the humanities.

The ten week intensive program is offered from June 15 through August 21, 1998 at the J. Paul Getty Center. Interns will meet every other week to discuss aspects of their work, participate in seminars, or take field trips. Each intern will receive a grant of $3,000, divided into bi-weekly payments.

Interested students must complete an application, write a personal statement, submit two letters of recommendation and an official copy of their most recent undergraduate transcripts. The deadline for submitting the application materials is March 2, 1998. Applications are available in the Chronicle office.

The Sound of Anime: Anime Soundtrack Reviews

By Corina Borsuk
Chronicle Staff Writer

Sailor Moon: Songs From the Hit TV Series - The domestic soundtrack is a collection of songs from the DIC dubbed version of Sailor Moon, which currently airs in syndication. There are 11 vocal tracks, but unfortunately, no background music. Another downside is that tracks one and 11 are basically the same.

The first track is the Sailor Moon theme song and track 11 is the reprise that plays during the show's credits. Tracks two through ten are full-length versions of what were, sometimes, very short musical snippets during the show.

Some of the best tracks in this collection are "My Only Love," "A New Day," and "Oh Starry Night." Fans of Sailor Moon will recognize "My Only Love" as the song from the episode "A Crystal Clear Destiny." "A New Day" and "Oh Starry Night" are both complete, full-length versions, without the voice-overs present in the episodes. However, the soundtrack version of "Oh Starry Night" is slightly different than that in the episode "Raye's Day in the Spotlight" and is not sung by Katie Griffin (Sailor Mars). It is a gem nonetheless.

If you are a real fan of Sailor Moon, this soundtrack is definitely for you. I suggest the CD version as opposed to the cassette. The CD has a pink outline of Sailor Moon on the front. Both versions come with a booklet that includes the song lyrics as well as the image of Sailor Moon.

Hurricane Live 2032 - Fans of the Bubblegum Crisis OVA (Original Video Animation) series will tell you that one of the best things about it is the music. However, no domestic soundtracks have yet to be released. The good news for fans of Crisis is that there is a music video collection available on VHS.

"Hurricane Live 2032" collects five songs from the first three OVAs--spanning the year 2032. The tape includes the following five songs (Note: translations provided in parenthesis): "Konya Wa Hurricane" (There's a Hurricane Tonight), "Mad Machine," "Kizudarake no Wild" (Wild and Scarred), and "Asu e Touchdown" (Touchdown to Tomorrow).

All of the songs are by Priss and the Replicants--sung by Priss' voice actress Kinuko Oomori--except "Asu e Touchdown." This last song is an extended version sung by the Knight Sabers. As an added bonus, the "Asu e Touchdown" video contains original animation. If you watch the images carefully, in between images of the Knight Sabers on stage are mini-stories chronicling how Linna, Nene and Priss joined the team.

Considering there are only five songs and most of the video images are footage from the OVAs, the price ($24.95) can seem a little steep. I suggest this only for die-hard Bubblegum Crisis fans.

Coyote Anime '97-Thank You

I want to thank the Multicultural Center for all their help in organizing Coyote Anime '97. Without the assistance of John Futch, Hanief Saterfield and everyone else involved, it wouldn't have been possible.

Also, a thank you to The Chronicle for sponsoring my column and allowing me to promote the event.

Of course, thanks also go to everyone who supported this venture by showing up. I hope you enjoyed it as much as I did.

If all goes well, plans for Coyote Anime '98 should be getting underway soon.

Good Hunting for a Good Film

By Lauren Algallar
Chronicle Staff Writer

This past season has been jam packed with big budget, commercial films like "Titanic", "The Postman", and "Scream 2", eclipsing some well-done, but non-commercial films. But there is one movie that is so brilliant it has been called the best picture of the year, and it is "Good Will Hunting."

This is a refreshing, down-to-earth movie starring Robin Williams, Matt Damon, Ben Affleck, and Minnie Driver. It's about a young man, Will Hunting, (Damon), who grew up in the poorer area of Boston, and we find him working as a janitor at one of the top schools of the nation, MIT. But Will is no ordinary young man, his character is one of a genius, who struggles with life and his own insecurities, as a result of an abusive childhood. When one of the professors at MIT learns of his genius, his whole life is changed and he is forced to deal with his past and his pain.

This cast was perfect for the movie. Matt Damon does an excellent job of portraying Will Hunting. He makes you like and sympathize with the character. So far this has been Robin Williams' best serious role as the psychologist, because he seemed so real and caring. Ben Affleck did a superb job as Will's best friend, adding the necessary comic relief. And lastly, Minnie Driver, was perfect, as the Will's love interest. She wasn't the usual gorgeous, super model like in most movies. She was, instead, an intelligent, independent, yet sensitive and caring young woman.

What makes this movie even more interesting is that it was written by two of its stars, Matt Damon and Ben Affleck. Since they weren't getting roles in Hollywood, they decided to create their own, and it certainly worked. So far, "Good Will Hunting" has been a huge hit.

"Good Will Hunting" is a definite "must see" movie. It will make you feel good and bad, and it'll make you think. It is a definite relief from all the commercial films of the season.

Games, Games, Games!

By Jeanette Lee
Production Editor

As a new year starts, new seasons bring in new trends in styles. Many eagerly anticipated games are coming out this year. Final Fantasy VII Tactics will be hitting store shelves on the 28th of this month.

It is a strategy game based on the enormously popular Final Fantasy series and a followup to the phenomenal success of Final Fantasy VII assures it best selling status.

In other gaming news, Yoshi's Island, a 2 1/2d game for Nintendo 64, will be coming out in February. As quoted by the makers, it is not quite a two dimensional game nor a three dimensional game, it combines qualities from both. Alundra has recently been released for the Sony Playstation. It is the first RPG that Working Designs has released for the Playstation since its dramatic break from Sega of America.

Working Designs will still be releasing Magic Knight Rayearth and the much anticipated Lunar Silver Star Story, Director's Cut for the Sega Saturn in the coming weeks.

In Japan, the popular arcade hit, X-Men VS Street Fighter, is now available for the Saturn. It is an almost perfect translation. Saturn owners may need to look into getting the Japanese version of this game, because it is unlikely that this game will be available for American gamers.

For more information about upcoming games, check out your favorite sites such as <http://www.sega.com>, <http://www.nintendo.com>, or <http://www.playstation.com>.

the beautiful gifts. In the normal German family, everybody tears the paper in a hurry and starts crying after a while, as the socks by auntie, the plates Grandma gave, and the ties or cheap earrings from the so-called best friends are as horrible as never before. Plus, there is just not enough money in the envelopes attached to the parcels... Children, of course, always like the things their siblings got better than their own stuff, and are never satisfied with what their parents gave them. This is the second, even more perfect time for a big family clash. Another opportunity approaches when the teenagers turn on Christmas rap on MTV to make Daddy turn off the old-fashioned "O Tannenbaum"-CD he bought for two bucks in the discount supermarket.

After arranging the gifts on a decorated Christmas table, our ideal family sits together, talking, praying and singing. Adults and teenagers go to 10 or 12 p.m. mass, then everybody goes to bed contentedly after that beautiful day. Many teenagers avoid mass, but most clubs offer awesome Christmas parties, with candy Santa Claus on each table and cheap drinks. This is where the kids get boozed and thank God it's over for this year, while the disappointed parents, in front of the TV, drink the Schnapps some prophetic relative gave them as a present, and wonder what they did wrong this time.

Students who had met Bono had often told Butterfield of their pleasant experience with him. They recall him as a gracious person who neither refused to sign autographs nor turned away visitors, according to Butterfield. Other students, however, may remember Bono best as Cher's other half in the popular television program, "Sonny and Cher", which ran Wednesday nights on CBS from 1971 to 1974.

Meanwhile, on the cloudy day following his funeral, a small ring of flower petals lay around his star on the Palm Springs Walk of Fame, located at the corner of Tehaquit and North Palm Canyon Road. Purple banners hanging from street lamps announcing the Palm Springs Film Festival line the ritzy streets of North Palm Canyon Road and served as a reminder of the lasting contribution that Bono made to the area.

Link Up to Federal Consumer Information

By Laura Hall
Design Editor

Federal consumer information is now available for the first time on the Internet site, www.consumer.gov. The site, named U.S. Consumer Gateway, offers information by subject.

The 10 major categories the site is divided into include Food, Health, Education, Your Home, Children, Buying Smart, Your Money, Product Safety, Transportation, and Other. Consumers can go into subject areas to locate the latest information on any of the topics provided. Besides up to date information, cross-links to other subjects makes the site more accessible, and user friendly.

Two site features are Scam Alert! and Of Special Interest, which provide tips on how to avoid fraudulent and deceptive practices from effecting you, and current information on a variety of breaking issues.

Federal agencies have combined the efforts of Consumer Product Safety Commission, the FDA, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, and the Securities and Exchange Commission. The FTC developed this project, and maintenance of the site is conducted by their Bureau of Consumer Protection. For more information contact Don Elder, Office of Consumer and Business Education, FTC, at delder@ftc.gov or (202) 326-2988.

Anime

What is Anime?

For those new to this column, you might be wondering just what this anime stuff is. Well, I'll tell you. Anime is the Japanese word for animation. Here in North America, anime generally refers to animation produced primarily for Japanese audiences.

The reason for interest in anime, as opposed to animation from the United States, is that anime is not always for kids. In Japan, animation is produced for both adults and children. It covers a wide variety of genres and can be both comical and serious.

Some anime has even been dubbed and aired on American television. "Speed Racer," "Robotech," "Dragonball," and "Voltron" are all anime series.

So in a nutshell, that is anime.
