The System Against Sincere Parent Fathers

The father said the child knows the child wants to assert her own freedom but will not give him back his child.

A local man says he was leaving a celebrity with his daughter, but not being established by the Riverside County Department of Public Social Services.

The father says his trouble began in March 1993 when he arrived home after his show’s job and found out that his daughter was gone.

As a single parent he was separated from his ex-wife—it’s not the father who the Department of Social Services said would not tell him his daughter’s whereabouts.

The next morning he called the police and reported her as a runaway and told them where he thought she was.

On March 29, the More Valley Police informed him that they had found his daughter and she was going to be placed in protective custody because she made allegations of child abuse. The Department’s original petition said the minor’s father struck her about the body with his fists resulting in visible marks and bruises. The Police reported said.

No pictures were taken due to the child’s cooperation. Dr. Hooks said.

“I have raised my daughter really by myself since she was 4 months old.” He was married for one year during that time.

On June 9 the Riverside County District Attorney’s office and him a bill stating he must pay $544.00 monthly beginning immediately in the custody of the offspring.

The father said the County knows the child wants to assert her own freedom but no pictures back him and no father in charge of her for the 13 years of her life.

He will not go back to her without freedom and the Court must do that. They are also saying that the Court will do everything possible to make the mother guilty for not allowing you to reunite with your child. We will also find you guilty when you get it in your hands. They will do it.

The father is sick about what has happened. He is thinking about Black men on their responsibility and his limitation to the rights of the system. There needs to be a better approach to help.

Dr. Hooks has a 10-year-old girl who was shot and killed.

The triple murder has residually somewhere.

The father said the child wants to come power to inform his son that his daughter wants to come home.

The child is the 39th slaying in the city this year.

The twins were shot in the back. It was announced as a runaway by the mother. The child is not known if the child was running from the home or to a sick grandmother. Dear Dr. Levister: I urinate down to five times a night and get up two to three times a night. My doctor tells me that I have a benign enlargement of the prostate gland. He also recommended a transurethral resection of the prostate. Are there any alternatives available?

Dear I.S.: By age 60, 50% of the males will have benign prostate hypertrophy (enlargement of the prostate gland, which is located around the urethra and leaves the bladder), and by age 85 this percentage goes up to 90.

By age 50, between 10 and 25% of the males have had BPH. Approximately 500,000 prostatectomies are done each year and in 1985 transurethral prostatectomy (TURP) was second only to cataract extractions as a major operation producing the greatest total cost under Medicare coverage. It has been estimated that the overall medical cost of TURP will soon exceed one billion dollars annually in the United States.

In a series of 4,000 patients who had TURP between 1978 and 1984, 50% reported immediate favorable outcome with 30% reporting deaths within one year. Long-term complications include cancer of the bladder neck in 10%; stricture or narrowing of the urethra in 3%; erectile dysfunction, 5%; and ejaculation back into the bladder in 50-75%. Ten to 20% of the patients required repeat procedures within two years.

There appears to be alternative procedures on the horizon.

Ballon dilatation of the prostate gland in recent series have demonstrated that 70% of the patients totally or significantly improved in symptoms and an obstruction of urine flow through the urethra in two to six months later their symptoms remit.

There are trials utilizing thermal destruction of the prostate.

The outlet obstruction due to enlargement of the prostate gland has a mechanical component because of the bulky tissue and a dynamic component because of the sinus muscula fibers. Several methods have indicated that drugs may be used for treatment of the prostate.

The specific reason that the gland enlarges is controversial. Age, but aging and macular degeneration are required for development. Suppression of testosterone may cause decrease in size of the prostate gland but will also cause an often unacceptable side effect of sexual dysfunction. With discontinuation of the medication the gland returns to its enlarged state in six months.

Because of the high cost, and problems with side effects of the TURP, it is speculated that further research will be done into alternate methods of treating benign prostatic hyperplasia.

Decorating Den
By Denise Ellison-McCarty Staff Writer

Which room in your home makes the first and lasting impression? It’s your foyer. Everyone who should say “welcome” to family and friends should reflect your personality and introduce the rest of the remainder of your home. How can you make a small room appear like a big room when actually it is a small space?

Indeed, it is the very limited space you have to work with that makes the greater leap of your ingenuity and imagination. Since it is transitional, where one time spent may be spent in another way-out idea, unusual objects and furniture or layout provide the little danger of their becoming too personal to not hide your decorating fantasies.

Entrances come in countless shapes and sizes. If it is rather small, you will want to make it look as interesting as possible. If it is extremely large, you will want to create warmth.

Long narrow halls can be treated with wainscoting that has a vertical stripe-floral stripes are a particular favorite in foyer.

A vital consideration in planning an entrance is that it is a high traffic area.

Ideally, your entrance contains an area to sit in. If it doesn’t, install a washboard, armchair or even a charing Victorian harack as a substitute. Any means of hanging coats in the foyer is better than having to hang them on a hook. As for your best decorating foot forward and make a grand entrance!

Eric Jones Put A Contract Out On His Family For $2.65

Eric Jones loves his family, yet every day, he risks their lives for a greater cause. It’s not a contract, he is a killer...he’s a smoker. When he smokes, formaldehyde, arsenic, benzene and a host of other poisons are released into the air his family breathes.

South African Delivers Poetry in Motion

international renowned South African poet and comedian Mzwakhe Mbuli promises to capture Los Angeles with his uniquely personal brand of liberation poetry and township music during two free-to-the-public performances at California Plaza's Watercourt on Friday, June 25 at Noon and 8:00 p.m. The noontime performance is newly added to California Plaza's 7th Annual Celebrations! Series featuring local and international artists in an outdoor setting. The second performance is a special evening concert meant to introduce the California Plaza performance series to those that can not attend the noontime. The nearly 7-feet tall Mbuli is a moral icon in his native South Africa. Known as "the people's poet," Mbuli achieved international recognition with his second recording, Ustesoke Sipit. Composed entirely without access to pen and paper — while he was serving a prison sentence in South Africa — the Mzwakhe Mbuli albums went gold. His debut album, Change is Pain, released in 1988, was banned in his native country until last year. On the heels of his latest album, Resistance is Defence, Mbuli won the praise of the international press with a tour of America and Europe. Mbuli's powerful voice and high-energy performance style has become synonymous with South Africa. It said California Plaza's Artist Director, Michael Alexander, "We are excited about presenting such an internationally acclaimed performer. We added the evening performances to give outdoor concert fans a chance to discover the new Watercourt and to some of the most exciting music we've ever presented. This is a program that just calls for dancing!" California Plaza is the landmark 11.5 acre mixed-use project on Los Angeles' Bunker Hill. The Watercourt is a 1.3 acre multi-level urban garden comprised of a major water feature and three outdoor stages. California Plaza is located Downtown between Grand Avenue and Olive Street north of Fourth Street. Community Leaders Rally Around Their Youth

For too many parents do not know or care where their children are. Much of our family lineage has been lost to warped by social and economic problems.

That’s why it is a pleasure to see a parent support group from Riverside’s John W. North High School take ownership of their female young men and women. Recently at Park Avenue Elementary School, a special and concerned group of parents came together to help start a wonderful banquet honoring North’s California Interscholastic Federation Southern Section Division 2A basketball champions (9-8). The parent support group was James Chaplin, Andy Harrison, Ronald & Darette Hooks, Barbara & Dr. Ronald Hughes, Paul & Kris Nichols, Willis Royal, Ed Gray - produced a first class event where the principal said it was very empowering to the students athletes they care and appreciate them.

Parent support group member, Barbara Hughes, said this about the banquet: “It felt that it was important for the community, it was a community based activity. The whole involvement in the kids knowing we are behind them and we want to acknowledge hard work and extend the helping hand. Also, Jesse Collins and Bud Taylor gave considerable support. Mervin Campbell, ex-UC, ABA, NBA player got on the keynote speaker. He stressed the need for parents to stay involved in their families.

Riverside Mayor, Teresa Kinnear, and Riverside Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Michael & Charles, can you believe there is an equal and opposite reaction. Yeah ... right! I have three kids, who asked you to raise them? But, an assist or rebound what if the Pope? Yeah ... right! What if the Pope is one of your children. I'm an ex-athlete, and I know just another Catholic? If it all seems like to your kids. It's unfair to place terms? Sounds good to me too, Barry Larkin, etc. al and do the right thing.

But, s orry fellows, that's a million people, that would trade places with either of you, in a heart beat.

Education Is A Concern For Everyone

By Charles Ledbetter

Education is Everyone’s Concern. Education will never become as expensive as ignorance. As we live from day to day we are given a choice, learn to live a better life or just exist at the will of others. We can learn to care for our health, our attitudes, our homes, and also our children. We can make you live better, remain the same, or just don’t care what happens to ourselves or society. It is my opinion that Good Character is more to be looked up to than having outstanding talent. Talents are having some extent, a gift. World-wide people who are contrast is developed in each of us as we live from day to day. Character is built into each person in accordance to daily living, TV etc. This goes on from birth until our

Mickey’s toonrrific cartoonland now open

New Disneyland Park guests can see how the funnier half lives in the brand-new Mickey’s Toontown, home of Mickey Mouse and his Disney animated friends.

Consisting of nearly three acres adjacent to the It’s a Small World attraction, the first new land since Bear Country in 1972 (renamed Critter Country in 1989), provides Disneyland visitors the unique opportunity to meet Mickey and his pals in their own wacky, wonderful cartoon world.

“Nothing is “real” in Mickey’s Toontown. It’s composed of cartoon elements,” said Walt Disney Imagineering Show Producer Dave Burkhart. “Everything is exaggerated. There are no straight lines or conventional architecture.

“Imagine a world of full, three-dimensional cartoon environments, a world where Mickey Mouse, the show’s hero and mystical master of ceremonies, transforms the once seemingly serene riverfront into a world of breathtaking fantasy and adventure conjuring up the likes of Maleficent, Ursula the Sea Witch, Kaa, plus an entire cast of fairy tale princesses and heroes, witches and monsters.”

To add to the fun and excitement, guests can enjoy Disneyland’s brightest stars in the magical Beauty and the Beast Live stage spectacular and Aladdin’s Royal Caravan.

Guests get first glimpse of Toon mecca

For the first time in Toon history, Mickey’s Toontown has opened its gates to non-Toons. New Disneyland guests can explore the community’s tiny, upturned downtown, civic cen­ter and suburban neighborhood where Mickey, Minnie and their pals live, work and play. And Park guests can actually meet Mickey in his own wacky, wonder­ful cartoon home.

According to Disneyland legend, film and television star Mickey Mouse founded the three-acre, exclusive “Toon Only” community in 1938, as a witness to the hustle and bustle of Tinkertown. Since then, Mickey’s Toontown has become a haven for many of Disney’s silver screen stars, including Mickey Mouse, Goofy, Pluto, Chip ‘n Dale and Roger Rabbit. Mickey’s Toontown in Disneyland’s eighth official land, the first new land since Bear (now Critter) Country opened in 1972. Upon entering Mickey’s Toontown, an amazing assortment of over-exaggerated, inflated-looking buildings with virtually no straight lines dashes the eye.

Toontown looks like a real city with lots of colorful cartoon paint. For instance, the wacky downtown cartoon cypstage pulls visitors into an array of clever interactive experiences, including everything from talking manholes and rubber fire hydrants to dancing dishes and opening flowers.

Mickey Mouse fans will have the opportunity to wander into Mickey’s bright red-shingled, cartoon house and even take a tour through his movie barn, filled to the rafters with props from some of his favorite cartoons including “Steamboat Willie,” “Through the Mirror,” “The Sorcerer’s Apprentice” and “The Band Concert,” to meet guests personally.

Next door to Mickey Mouse’s house is the dream home of his lifelong co-star and sweetheart, Minnie Mouse. Always the perfect housewife, Minnie will provide her guests with an amusing array of activities from baking cake in the kitchen to sampling her perfume in her dressing room.

Across the street is Goofy’s Bum House, which, like the lovable character, is a little gory in its construction. The fully inflatable abode lets guests actually bounce off the walls, floors, furniture and even the fireplace.

Flanked by Goofy’s Bum House and Gadget’s Ge Coaster, Donald Duck’s home, the “Miss Daisy,” is anchored in the middle of Toontown, where it actually bounces up and down.

Tens of thousands “non-Toons” were welcomed to the opening of this wacky, new cartoon land, Disneyland’s eighth official land, with a bang to marks opening of new land.

To celebrate the event, Mayor Mickey Mouse and Michael Eisner, chairman and chief executive officer of The Walt Disney Company, welcomed thousands of excited guests to the historically wacky toonaugural ceremony, complete with brass bands, multi-colored confetti and fireworks.

Harry Anderson, star of the hit TV series “Night Court,” presided over the festivities and led guests in the official fun-inspiring oath of Toontown.

Mickey’s Toontown is toons and tons of fun for everyone.

Mickey's Toontown, Disneyland's crazy, new cartoon land.
Welcome to Mickey's Toontown. Land of cartoon wishes and unmade dreams. Now, for the first time ever Mickey, Minnie and their friends have gradually opened their homes to the public, so that their many fans can enjoy lifestyle glimpses into their personalities and lifestyles.

The first house on our tour of this character community is Minnie Mouse's pink and purple cottage. Even before you enter, you can tell that Minnie is a heart and flower kind of gal by the heart-shaped window, weather vane and the well-kept garden. Inside, Minnie shows off her decorating talent with a pink, heart-shaped telephone, makeup mirror and kitchen cabinets, complemented by flow-patterned furniture, tablecloth and rug.

In the living room, guests can hear messages on Minnie's purple answering machine or listen to her old-fashioned radio which plays music and announces, on wacky "Radio Toontown." In her dressing room, play with the computer - heart-shaped, of course - which Minnie uses. The Prop Department in Mickey's Movie Museum is a collector's delight of musical instruments, clocks, costumes, posters, a bucket-carrying broom from "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" segment of "Fantasia," and the airplane workshop made of found objects and recycled cartoon discs.

Around the inventor's workshop race Donald Duck's steam pumps - a somewhat chaotic backdrop is on display, a projection booth, musical instruments, clocks, and a player piano in the comfortably furnished den. Displayed throughout the house are momentos from Mickey's long and distinguished film career, as well as photos of Donald's latest project - his own cartoon world.

To the right of the entrance are two slides and Chip 'n Dale's Go Coaster, a minia­ture roller coaster imaginatively assembled from oversized cots, sandbox shovels, matches, scissors and oversized wooden block walls on which guests ride in hollowed-out acorn vehicles. Donald Duck resides primarily in Duckburg, U.S.A., but his boat, the "Miss Daisy," is moored on Toon Lake, across the street from Minnie's house. This wacky quacker's quarters bear a striking res­emblance to Donald himself, with a blue, cap-shaped roof, porthole eyes and broad duck bill-like deck.

In Minnie's dressing room, thousands of inflatable acorns - the main attractions of this woodsy house - are two slides and Chip 'n Dale's nearby winter mess - thousands of inflatable balloons - through which younger guests can crawl.

Next door resides Gadget, the riding, and daring and resourceful star of "The Lucky Duck Rescue Rangers," and his environment is similar to a workshop made of found objects and recycled cartoon discs. Invented by the artist's workshop race G. Cruster, a miniature metalwork artist imaginatively assembled from oversized cots, sandbox shovels, matches, scissors and oversized wooden block walls on which guests ride in hollowed-out acorn vehicles.

Some twenty years ago, one minute and three seconds of music changed the sound of Disneyland forever. Fiery nighttime fantasy keeps sizzling Conducted by the Magic Kingdom's most famous resident, Mickey Mouse himself, the spectacular pits Mickey and friends against some of Disney's most memorable fairy tale villains.

Mickey begins the evening presentation with a lavish array of special effects from his own creative vision. But his imagi nary main is overrun by a dissi

ter collection of Disney evil-doers, led by Maleficent, the witch from "Sleeping Beauty." Ka, the snake from "Jungle Book" slithers across the stage, as Ursula the Sea Witch, the conniving octopus from "The Little Mermaid" cackles her appreciation. Mickey must use his own powers of goodness and imagination — as well as help from some of his animated allies — to defeat them.

Complementing the visual magic, the 22-minute spectacular features a fully orchestrated sound track played through a sophisticated sound system. Blending familiar Disney favorites with several all-new songs, the score includes newly-remixed standards, including "Pink Elephants on Parade," from "Dumbo." For the visual side of this cre ative spectacle, the artists at the Magic Kingdom chose to paint on something appropriately imaginative — mist. Three water-vapor "smokes" shoot up 40 feet above the Rivers of America, forming a curtain in front of a live-action stage on Tom Sawyer Island. A trio of computer-linked 70mm movie projectors use special lenses to make the characters "float" on the mist. The viewers, standing throughout New Orleans Square and along the river, see the same stage on each screen.

In addition to the mist screens and island stage, Fantasmic's action spills over onto the waters around the island, down in front of the audience. Belle and Ariel from "Beauty and the Beast" and "The Little Mermaid" pass by on boats, joined by their respective beaus Captain Hook and his band of pirates escape from Peter Pan as Mickey, Maleficent mushrooms into a towering, fire-breathing dragon and the river's surface burns into flames.

But this time, the Sorcerer's Apprentice has mastered his craft. Mickey defeats the mus ical villains in a visual front of lasers, lights and pyrotechnics.

Rebuilding L.A., Disneyland style

During last spring's interest in Los Angeles, Lakiesha Roberts remained inside her home in South Central Los Angeles, forbidden by her grandmother to go outside. Just two months later, as a direct result of those violent events, she became a Disneyland Cast Member as part of the Magic Kingdom's efforts to help rebuild the community in the real world.

Roberts was one of about 200 African-American South Central residents chosen to work at Disneyland and the Disneyland Hotel. More than 600 hopefuls, ranging in age from 17 to 22, applied for the program, which was conducted in cooperation with the First A.M.E. Church and included pre-interview counseling and seminars on job searches, work ethics and personal development.

Hired as a seasonal employee in the Park's Costuming Department Roberts was promoted to year-round status two months later, working 24 to 40 hours a week.

"We each could give three decades of experience about where we wanted to work," says Roberts. She explains how the selected in the Costuming Department, where she issued Cast Members' ensembles. "My hobbies are art, painting and designing, so coming seemed natural."

Roberts, now 20, is a college student, a junior at Downtown Los Angeles Trade Tech, pursuing a career in creative design and special effects. During the summer a special bus transported program participants to and from Disneyland.

Roberts' outgoing, friendly personality, a key factor in her selection, now plays a major role in her job. "Maybe our Cast Members have had a bad day in the real world, but they have to be in a good mood when they come to the window. We have to make them smile and be happy about their Disneyland experience."

"When shall I start?" she smiles. "You meet a lot of people from different countries. There are a lot of friendly people here. You learn to rely on them and they count on you." Roberts has also reaped deep rewards. "You think it's impossible to be hired on at Disneyland and it's on me," she says. "But when you are hired, it's something you were born to do, a personal fulfillment. Disneyland is particular about who they choose as Cast Members."

It's introduced a whole new world to me," she adds. Then she realizes she is echoing a song title from the Disney film "Aladdin," in which Aladdin's magic lamp reveals the wish of the world. She smiles, "I feel like Jasmine.

Beauty and the Beast sets the stage for romance score, encore! The popular Beauty and the Beast Live show that took the Disneyland stage by storm last season is back.

The characters from the most popular animated movie of all time come to life during the 25-minute extravaganza. One of the most lavish shows ever presented at Disneyland, Beauty and the Beast Live features dramatic special effects, lively singing and dancing, and extravagant, imaginative costumes.

The show opens in the charming French village where the beautiful heroine, Belle, must deal with the unwarranted affections of the smooth and ruthless villain, Gaston. When Belle meets the rough-edged Beast, she initially dislikes him. Belle later brings out the Beast's gentle side and they fall in love.

Along the way, they perform the movie's best-loved songs, including the vivacious "Be Our Guest," where a dining room

Disneyland contest winner named

Ryan Kent Guilbert of Norco was selected as the grand prize winner in Disneyland's March Homes contest, sponsored by Disneyland and The Black Voice News.

The contest was held and the winner was selected at random on June 16, 1993. Ryan Kent Guilbert successfully matched the following Disney Toons with the correct homes.

1. The Miss Daisy - (B)
2. Chip 'n Dale's Tree House - (D)
3. Mickey's House - (A)
4. Goofy's Brunette House - (C)
5. Pluto's Dog House - (B)

As the grand prize winner, Ryan Kent Guilbert will receive a Disneyland vacation to see Mickey's Toontown, the Magic Kingdom's first new land in more than 20 years. Ryan Kent Guilbert will stay at the 60-acre Disneyland Hotel.

Congratulations Ryan Kent Guilbert!
Disneyland Hotel offers premier resort pleasures

A Southern California vacation experience wouldn’t be complete without a stay at the Disneyland Hotel. The 60-acre resort offers an impressive array of Disney quality accommodations, dining, entertainment and recreation. The Hotel showcases 11 restaurants and lounges, nearly 20 shops, three swimming pools, 10 tennis courts, a tropical beach and even an inland marina. Entertainment includes the nightly Fantasy Waters show, country western music at the Neon Cactus and fun-filled Disney Character Meals.

And now, a stay at the Hotel is even better than ever with the recent completion of a two-year-long refurbishment of guest rooms, lounges and meeting spaces throughout the resort. The largest renewal effort in the Hotel’s history, the multimillion-dollar project’s improvements not only create a fresh, contemporary look for the property, but greatly enhance the Disney’s Disneyland identity and level of service and hospitality.

While many of the Disneyland Hotel’s charms are evident to even the most casual visitor, other pleasant surprises are tucked away in nooks and crannies of the 60-acre resort. For example, guests entering the Marina Tower lobby are immediately greeted by the charming new brass statues of Mickey and Minnie Mouse. But they might not notice that the piano on the adjacent lounge appears to be Drowning in water. Actually, it is on Plexiglass above a pool of water cascading from the fountain outside. Atrium at the center is a “wall of fame” containing dozens of photos of famous entertainers, politicians and royalty who have visited the Magic Kingdom.

Another unique wall graces the adjacent Entertainment and Convention Center. A massive collage features hundreds of photos, toys, records, awards, books, games and other Disney memorabilia. The collage was created for Disneyland’s 35th anniversary in 1990 and later moved to its current home at the Hotel.

As guests wander throughout the rest of the Entertainment and Convention Center, they might glimpse a splash of color at the top of the entryway escalators. If they venture up, they will find a curved mural depicting a colossal scene from “Peter Pan.” The outdoor Seaports of the Pacific area is home to many well-known attractions, such as the Fantasy Waterways. And adventure guests who explore the area will happen upon other aquatic treasures, such as watercooler.
